Looks Back, Ahead At Historic Sixth Mid-Term Sheets: Affordable Housing A Must

By CRAIG SAUTERS

Mayor James Sheets established affordable housing as a top priority for the city in 2001 during his historic sixth mid-term address Tuesday at City Council Chambers.

"I have had two major meetings with developers and I will shortly present to the City Council my recommendation for dealing with the affordable housing crisis," Sheets told the audience. "Our goal must always be to have 10 percent of Quincy housing stock affordable."

Continuing after the ceremony, Sheets called the initial two meetings with developers "great" and said he expected a draft of his proposal to be presented to the council "within the next four weeks," adding that he wanted one or two more meetings with interested parties so as to reach a consensus.

In a roughly 20-minute speech which highlighted the past year's accomplishments and outlined the city's goals for the coming year, Sheets attributed part of the city's affordable housing crunch to the very economic growth his remarks celebrated. Said Sheets:

"Our successes with the local economy and the quality of our school system have attracted many new families to Quincy, but our successes beget other challenges. While housing prices rise, we find that rent increases are putting too many of our families on the streets."

Sheets cited two recent affordable housing victories from the year 2000 as examples that the city was working towards a solution: the prevention of 164 affordable senior housing units at Wollaston Manor from becoming a market-rent private apartment building; and December's transfer of the 27 acres of land and buildings from the US Navy at

Squantum Gardens for the private, non-profit Elder Housing Corporation for $1.1 million, Sheets said, which will "lay the groundwork for an additional 204 units of elder affordable housing, as well as a senior center to provide for the full range of needs for our growing senior population."

The mayor's call for affordable housing solutions was echoed by City Council President Paul Harold following Harold's re-election as council president by a 6-3 vote. Harold urged fellow councillors to continue working with the mayor and to "work with our church leaders in developing affordable housing options in the city for seniors and families and explore the enactment of a linkage program, currently the law in eight Massachusetts communities."

A draft of such an inclusionary zoning ordinance, which would mandate that developers seeking PUD permits from the city council set aside a percentage of inventory for affordable housing, is currently with the House.

Turns Back Durkin Challenge For Presidency Harold Sets Council Goals

Finding a developer for the Fore River Shipyard, sitting the new Quincy High and Central Middle Schools, and exploring affordable housing options were three priorities listed by Council President Paul Harold as he accepted his second term as council president during ceremonies Tuesday in Council Chambers.

Harold survived a challenge from Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin and was re-elected as council president by a 6-3 vote.

Harold, whose nomination by Councillor Frank McCauley was seconded by Councillors Gregory Hanley and Patrick McDermott, received their votes and those of Councillors Michael D'Amico and Joseph Newton in addition to his own.

Durkin's nomination was by Councillor Daniel Raymond and was seconded by Councillor Timothy Cahill. He received their votes in addition to his own.

There were no other nominations for council president.

In remarks following the vote Harold thanked the council for the honor and congratulated councillors for the work of the past year, most notably the resolution of the tax classification — which was restored to its traditional level of 169 percent

Hotel/Motel Tax Passed Just Before Deadline

By CRAIG SALTERS

The home rule petition creating the city's Hotel/Motel tax was passed by both houses of the State Legislature Tuesday, the last day of sessions.

"We just passed it," State Sen. Michael Morrissey told The Sun by telephone at 5:15 p.m. "Now we just have to convince the governor to sign it."

Morrissey went on to explain that Governor Paul Cellucci, who is known for his anti-tax stance, should have no problem signing the bill given that the petition is a local initiative which would impose a local room occupancy tax gradually, giving business time to adjust. "It's four percent over our years," Morrissey said.

The petition, authored by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, creates a one percent local room occupancy tax which would go into effect July of this year and increase by one percent annually until it reaches the state maximum of four percent in 2004.

Funds generated by the tax would be used for purchase of Open Space and the promotion of tourism in the city, with funds split 85 to 15 percent, respectively.

"We all worked hard on this," said Morrissey, who thanked State Sen. Marian Walsh and State Rep. John Rogers, chairpersons of the Senate and House of Representatives' Committees on Taxation, respectively, for their efforts on the last-minute passage.

Locally, Morrissey thanked Council President Paul Harold and Councillors Raymond and Patrick McDermott for their lobbying efforts on behalf of the home rule petition.

State Rep. Ronald Mariano expressed his relief that the home rule petition had beaten the deadline. "This is as close to the deadline as I want to get," said Mariano, who signed on to the measure along with Reps. Bruce Ayers and Steven Tobin. "This is a good example of the delegates coming together to make something happen on an extremely tight deadline."

Earlier delay on the bill,

Mariano explained, was caused partly by confusion as to why a home rule petition was even necessary, given that the city can impose such a tax without a petition if revenue goes into the general fund.

It was earmarking the funds for tourism and open space, Mariano said, which complicated the matter, but which will also make signature by the governor more likely.

"I don't think it will be an issue," Mariano said. "I think he'll sign it."

Councillor McDermott, who brought the original delay to the council's attention and also testified at the state level on behalf of the petition, said that he successfully requested Mayor Sheets to phone Governor Cellucci in favor of the petition to make sure the process goes smoothly.

"This is a local statute and I don't see any problem, but I wouldn't want it to become a 'pocket veto,'" McDermott said, adding that the petition's speedy passage "speaks to the excellent cooperation between state and city officials."

Had the Legislature not passed the home rule petition this session, the entire process would have had to begin again.

Strong Winds Cancel Fireworks Over 25,000 At First Night Here

By LANCE MORGANELLI

Regardless of whether it is the first year of the new millennium or merely 2001, Quincy celebrated its first night with a unique style.

The ninth annual event, which drew a crowd estimated at over 25,000, consisted of over 200 performers and started this year at 2 pm with a special set of programs to accommodate the children, including Kids-Fest at the Center for Technical Education gym.

The Copley Chamber Players began the evening portion of the celebration with "Music from the Titanic" and afternoon tea at the Adams Academy Historical Society. The seven-piece string orchestra consisted of six violins and one cello played by Sandy Kiefer, director.

Their music was a refreshing way to anticipate the new year compared with the abrasive music that usually dominates a first night celebration. They played music from the set list of the Titanic including Verde's "La Traviata" and Grieg's "in the Hall of the Mountain Kings."

The intimate setting coupled with the acoustics of the room added to the orchestra's full and soothing sound. And amidst the rising cost of symphony tickets, the performance was especially a pleasure to enjoy.

First Night attendees quickly started to amass a little after 6 pm in the City Hall, Presidents Place area awaiting the fireworks display...and they continued to wait, huddling along that portion of Hancock St. But what happened next was the Festival of Lights Parade and not the fireworks.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, who coordinates

the fireworks, canceled the display because the winds were too strong for a safe show.

At 6:33 pm the street lights of downtown Quincy went out and a gentle "Oooo" spread through the crowd. Attention focused on the lights parade making its way down Hancock St. and around the Church of the Presidents. Several floats covered with colored lights competed for the best in the parade. One had a sail boat in tow with lights.

The Laser Light Show followed streaming images choreographed to music on President's Place. The first song was Sting's "A Desert Rose."

The Boston Baked Blues played with all their might in the South Shore Buick lobby.

Because the nature of their music is very forceful and boisterous, they probably should have been assigned to a larger hall.

Among other performances, Keri Powers closed the night's shows at the First Night Coffee House with a comforting set of original folk songs and one cover. Powers' voice conveys an ethereal and full sound in one song and a soulful blues tone in the next.

Powers has a quick wit and humor and cool sense of ad-lib remarks which added to her performance when she talked with the audience in between playing her songs.

Shortly after the last of the performances, the laser light countdown brought Quincy into 2001.

Stiffer Fines For Overtime, Overnight Parking Violations

The City of Quincy announces that fines for certain parking violations have been increased.

The increases are a result of a study of surrounding communities and in response to an increasing number of complaints relative to all-day commuter parking in the business districts and in the neighborhoods, said John Keenan, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets.

In Quincy, the fine for Overtime Parking has been increased from $5 per violation to $15 per violation. Where posted, a vehicle parked in excess of the allotted time will be ticketed and, should the vehicle remain at the location for a period longer than twice the posted time, it will be subject to additional ticketing.

Fines in surrounding communities for such offenses range from $10 per violation to $25 per violation.

The City has also increased the fine for violations of the All-Night Parking ordinance from $5 to $15. A study found that fines for similar violations in neighboring communities range from $5 to $100, depending on the type of vehicle.

Residents, Keenan said, are advised that, if they have insufficient driveway space or are without driveways and therefore must park on-street, they may apply to the City for an All-Night Parking Permit.

The permit allows parking on-street overnight in front of the resident's home and allows parking in excess of the posted time limits during the day in front of the resident's home.

All other parking regulations, including snow emergencies, still apply.

Permit applications are available at the Quincy Police Station, 1 Sea St. Permits are granted after review and verification by the police of the parking situation at the residence of each applicant.

The fee for the permit is $10.

Another ordinance recently passed addresses the issue of large, commercial-type vehicles being parked overnight on streets throughout the city. Under the new ordinance, various types of vehicles, including buses, tractor trailer trucks, trailers, motor homes, taxis, ambulances, hearses, and delivery vehicles cannot be parked on-street.

According to Keenan, the ordinance provides police officers with an enforcement tool when responding to calls of such vehicles being parked on streets. It also allows responding officers to use discretion in matters involving construction, home renovation, deliveries, and the like.

The fine for violation of this new "Non-conforming Vehicle" ordinance is $15 per violation.

The City encourages residents to park vehicles in driveways whenever possible and, if not possible, to apply for the All-Night Parking Permit.

For large commercial vehicles, residents should make arrangements for appropriate off-street parking.

Durkin Neighborhood Meeting On Proposed 72-Room Hotel

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin will hold a Neighborhood Meeting at 6:45 p.m. tonight (Thursday) on Eastern Nazarene College's plans to construct a 72-room hotel at the former site of the Winfield House on Hancock St.

The meeting will be held at ENC's Lead Program building on Old Colony Ave. adjacent to the Scally Center.

The meeting will afford residents an opportunity to ask questions and express concerns about the proposed project.

A Site Plan Review concerning the project will be conducted during the latter part of January by the city's Planning Board.

PRIME TRAVELER
by George P. Murphy

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!

IF YOU'VE NEVER CRUISED

Those who have never chosen a cruise vacation may mistakenly believe it involves strict dinner times with assigned seats, a rigid activity schedule, claustrophobic rooms and huge expense. The cruise industry today, however, has grown and changed to adapt to a variety of tastes, schedules and budgets. In the last four years, 46 new ships have entered the market and dozens more are expected in the next few years. For vacationers, this means more choices and lower prices. Options and amenities include open meal times, rock-climbing walls, miniature golf courses, Internet cafes, conference accommodations, first-rate theaters and full service spas. For a real adventure, investigate a two day trip on the luxury submarine Poseidon, whose maiden voyage is scheduled for late 2002.

Wherever you travel take you this year - down to our neighbors to the south, across this country, to Europe, the Caribbean, the Far East, or cruising the high seas - good ideas and good planning will make the trip a better one. The travel agents here at PRIME TRAVEL are well trained and well traveled and you can rely on all of us to provide you with the knowledge and assistance necessary for pleasant travel. Citizen Police Academy Program Begins Jan. 11

The Quincy Police Department will begin its next Citizen Police Academy Thursday, Jan. 11.

The 11-week program will be held Thursday evenings from 6:30 to 10 p.m. at St. Boniface Church, Palmer St., Germantown.

Over the past four years, 12 CPA programs have been conducted at Quincy Police Headquarters. CPA #13 was held at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center and was very successful. CPA #14 will be primarily for residents of Germantown; however, an alternate list will be open for other residents of Quincy.

The program will include such topics as: domestic violence, personal safety, police stress, community policing, drunk driving, police weapons and tactics, juvenile investigations, court procedures, crime scene scenarios and other interesting topics.

The Citizen Police Academy

program is designed to educate the public about what police work is really like, as opposed to what we see on television and in the movies. Over the 11-week period, participants will meet over 20 Quincy police officers who will make presentations on their particular topics of expertise.

The program offers each participant an opportunity to ride with a police officer on a weekend evening. A Saturday trip to the gun range is also scheduled, where participants are given an opportunity to fire police weapons. Nearly 400 Quincy residents have taken part in this program.

Applications for CPA #14 are available at the front desk of Quincy Police Headquarters, One Sea St., and also at the office of HRCI in Germantown.

For more information, contact officer Bob Hanna, project director, at 745-5719.

Those Quincy Connections

You can often find a Quincy connection to well known names.

The latest, for example: Jason Robards.

The talented actor, who died the other day, was married several times. But not mentioned in the obituaries was his first wife, Eleanor Pittman, a Quincy girl.

Reader Kay Pattavina informs us that she and Eleanor, whose father was a Wollaston dentist, were students together at the Woodward School for Girls. Eleanor in the class of 1940 and Kay in the class of 1943.

"She was always in the school plays and wanted to be an actress," recalls Kay. When she graduated she went to an acting school in New York City.

She believes the school was the American Academy of Dramatic Arts where Eleanor and Robards, an aspiring actor, met and later married.

She and Robards had three children, Jason Robards, III; Sarah Louise and David, according to Kay. Eleanor is deceased.

Other Quincy connections to well-known names include:

The future Duchess of Windsor for whom King Edward VIII abdicated his throne in 1936 "for the woman I love" lived here in 1917 in a second floor apartment on Davis St., Wollaston.

She was married to Lt. Earl Spencer, stationed at the Naval Air Station in Squantum which later became the Squantum Naval Air Reserve Base.

Her Davis St. neighbors reportedly thought she was snobbish and nicknamed her "The Duchess" never dreaming she would one day be one.

Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz who headed the U.S. Naval operations in the Pacific after Japan's sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, married a Quincy girl.

Catherine Vance Freeman and Nimitz were wed April 9, 1913 at her family's home on Grand View Ave., Wollaston. Her father, Richard, was a former city council president.

The couple met while Nimitz was in Quincy waiting for a submarine to which he was assigned and was being outfitted at the Fore River Shipyard.

Amelia Earhart, the country's most famous aviatrix who disappeared in the Pacific on an around-the-world flight in 1937, had aviation roots here.

She took flying lessons here and was a stockholder in the old Dennison Airport at Quincy Shore Drive and East Squantum St., North Quincy.

And then there was the tragedy of Harriet Quimby, the first woman to earn a pilot's license and the first to fly the English Channel in 1911.

In 1912 she was here to compete in the Aeromeet at Squantum to Boston Light. On the way back, her plane plunged into Dorchester Bay. Both she and her passenger, William Willard, manager of the Aeromeet, were thrown from the plummeting plane into the harbor waters and killed. The plane reportedly landed undamaged.

Quincy connections aren't hard to find.

What Makes A Neighborhood

By DEBBIE DOHERTY

So often I hear people rant and rave about the ruin of this country; how bad the times are for raising a family; kids today don't stand a chance.

Now, I don't deny the pitfalls we parents face today, but I know at least where we live is far from hopeless. I'd like to share with you the story of a neighborhood alive and well.

They boys met their best friend at soccer last year. We'd been neighbors for three years and never knew. After a long chat, my neighbor's son asked if he could stay at our house and play for a while. I watched as several emotions passed over his mom's face and understood her fear. After a tour of the house and an hour long chat, she agreed he could stay for a short while and she'd be back. The three boys had the time of their lives! He looked like the missing triplet to our set of twins. Before an hour passed, they were pretending to be triplets and have been nearly inseparable since. Here's what we've learned...

Neighborhood is not location. It's not houses lined neatly against a picturesque landscape.

It's a group of people, living on the same block, who welcome each other.

It's a place where people who are tossed together by chance, open their hearts and homes and turn it into so much more.

It's the place where your baby's first steps are taken and you run across the street and share.

Where family fights travel like breezes in and out open windows, but no one judges.

Where friendships are grown through the day to day challenge of life.

Where troubles can be unloaded and secrets can be kept.

Where a hand is offered because times can be tough.

Where you offer a hand because it feels good to help.

Where you're never lonely, but can be alone. Where hurricanes, thunderstorms and blizzards of fer the best excuse for ice-cream, popcorn and a good movie.

Where a blackout is an adventure.

Where spaghetti never gets boring because the people you eat with make it delicious.

Where tree houses are built and dreams are weaved.

Where long summer nights are never enough.

Where cars interrupt a wiffleball game, a wiffleball game doesn't interrupt cars.

Where life is shared among families who do their own thing, and sometimes do it together.

Where life moves on and generations are grown.

Where your name is familiar and your family is known.

Where someone's mom is everyone's mom.

Where there's a cold drink in every fridge and a band-aid in every bathroom.

Where it's all for one and one for all.

Where dozens of eyes

keep your kids safe.

Where your kids learn to fight, then learn to make up.

Where your son may fall in love with the girl next door.

Where the boy next door may introduce your son to his future wife.

Where family begins, friendships are grown, love and respect are life lessons lived.

So, when people tell me of this awful world where kids just aren't safe, I invite them over to take a little peek of what it's really all about!

What makes a neighborhood is heart.

On June 6, 1994—the 50th anniversary of D-Day—the Pentagon received a record, 1,502,415 phone calls.

Scenes From Yesterday

Willard School, Quincy, Mass

THIS IS A 1907 postcard view of the Willard School on Copeland Street in West Quincy. A few years ago after this picture was taken the MDC cut what is now Furnace Brook Parkway through the schoolyard where the children are standing. Built in 1891 this school was closed in 1981 and sold to office condominium developers in 1984. The exterior of the building has been carefully restored except that the small dome with mast on top of the cupola is missing. Named for Solomon Willard, the father of Quincy's granite industry, this building replaced the first schoolhouse in Quincy that was made of wood and partly built and paid for by Willard himself, who lived nearby on Douglas Street. Built in 1855 that school was destroyed by fire in 1889. On the left can be seen the old West Quincy firehouse that was built shortly after the fire.

The U.S.S. Salem -- A Real Treasure

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In reply to criticism leveled by Marina Bay residents at the re-location of the USS Salem (CA-139) from the Fore River Shipyard to Squantum Point Park in The Patriot Ledger's Dec. 21 issue:

I was angered and amazed by their negative comments of "it doesn't belong here; battleship gray, amusement park type stuff, antiquated ship, ugly thing, and fitting graveyard for a piece of rusty iron," all of which are not true! Additionally, the mooring dock for the USS Salem at Squantum Point Park is far distant from residential areas of Marina Bay and will not be blocking their ocean or sunset views as voiced.

If they could really see the USS Salem through their windows, they would see a magnificent navy vessel that served our Country in times of peril on far distant seas. They would also see a ship that is well maintained by staff, volunteers, and US Naval Reserve units that are proud of their accomplishments.

Most importantly, they will see Memorial Services being conducted for lost or fallen comrades in addition to awards and decorations, corporate meetings, birthday parties, summer concerts, and a Partnership Agreement with the Quincy Public School Community working together to achieve and promote the concerns of the Museum and the educational goals of the schools relating to physical science, social studies, medical science, recreational programs, and field trips.

Last, but not least, I would like to extend an open invitation to Marina Bay residents to visit the USS Salem and see what a real treasure that she is.

The Tale Of The Average Homeowner

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I see in The Sun that real estate taxes are going up another $70 per year for the average homeowner. This computes to $210 every month. Not bad, if that's all we had to pay. But most of us have hefty mortgages of a $1,000 a month.

Add to this heating oil, at twice the price of last year

(and so far it's been a buster of a winter: cold and windy); the increase in electric rates, gasoline, health insurance, car insurance, telephone, cable, and food and we have a formula for success in calamity.

The carpenters who built this house in 1900 proudly proclaimed that it was so well built it would "last 100 years!" They were right. Now I'm wondering how else will fall apart. And how much it will cost. I know it costs $850 to remove a dead tree, $5,000 to replace a roof, and $3,000 to fix an old chimney.

This is the tale of the average homeowner. To whom do we turn? The city government that just increased assessments and raised real estate taxes? The state government that just spent 16 billion dollars to replace a bridge? Or the federal government that just wants to add a national sales tax to every catalog and Internet purchase?

Quincy's Yesterdays

Burgin's Mid-Term Shortest On Record

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor Thomas Burgin's mid-term address was the shortest on record, limited in priorities because of the uncertainties facing the nation.

His two major public works projects were rejected by the city council last year: an addition to Quincy City Hospital and the widening of East Howard St. He went to advise against borrowing for public works and equipment purchases. He said he would make every effort to drop taxes, as he'd done for six years now.

At the same meeting, William Jenness was re-elected city council president, with Harry Tirrell elected to his 54th term as city messenger.

NO NEW POLICE EXAM

Ulysses Lupien, state director of civil service, said that he would not order a new police sergeants' exam as requested by the Quincy police union.

The police said that they were placed at a disadvantage when Superintendent of Schools James Muir interrupted the exam to reprimand the exam takers for leaving cigarette butts around Quincy High School, where the exam was being held.

In denying the new exam Lupien said that there was no evidence that interruption affected the grades, noting that the grades for part one, when the interruption took place, and part two showed no marked differences.

RENT INCREASES STRIKEN

Quincy's Fair Rent Committee, under the authority of the federal Office of Price Administration, cracked down on rent gougers by striking rent increases. In every case, the committee found for the tenant.

Some rents were raised from $8 to $10 a month. In one case, a Fayette St. landlord raised rent from $30-$40 without having made any improvements.

QUINCY-ISM

The city Rationing Board said it would publish the names of those companies and individuals who were allowed to purchase tires. At the same time they offered tips to conserve tires: drive slowly, car pool, take the bus, minimize social use and walk when possible. . . William Morrison, master at the Parker and Mass Field schools, was the director of the air raid warden classes held at QHS and NQHS. . . Phil Conroy was the big scorer in NQHS's defeat of Quincy Trade by a score of 36-12. . . The North Quincy Post Office at 68 Sagamore St. was expanding. It was one of the fastest growing areas of the state with new homes being built in Montclair and the Crabtree estate in Squantum. . . Francis Daly and Walter Cooke were on the Civil Service list for appointment to the Fire Department. . . Thomas Kerr was the membership chairman for the Quincy K of C. . . Atlantic Methodist Church celebrated its 50th anniversary. It had a membership of 500. The members first met in the Atlantic fire house and later moved to the Music Hall. Their first church was built in 1894 at the corner of Hunt and E. Squantum Streets. The stone church on East Squantum St. was erected in 1927. . . Mayor Burgin said he would make every effort to get Bethlehem Steel to build their new shipyard in Quincy at the Broad Meadows site. Weymouth was also competing for the new yard. . . The Fore River yard set a new record, building a tanker in 76 days. . . Fred Ingraham of Elm Ave. was the largest donor to license plates in the American Legion's scrap iron drive. He donated 25 consecutive years of plates from 1914 to 1941. . . The floodlights that have lighted the Granite Trust Tower since 1929 were turned off. It was noted that it was no longer "business as usual," but a period of "all out victory." Other banks had taken similar actions as a defense precaution. . . Floyd Folmsbee was the president of the Rotary Club. . . Members of St. John's basketball team included James Papile, Ralph Papile, Joseph Mariani and Guido Pettinelli. . . "Crum" Crofts was the basketball coach at the Y. . . Air raid warden George Wilson spoke to the Webster PTA on bombs, gas masks and bomb shelters. . . Ronald Josselyn was re-elected moderator at Houghs Neck Congregational Church. . . Paul Reardon was president of the Quincy Harvard Club. . . Health Commissioner Richard Ash reported that there were no reports of typhoid last year and no deaths from communicable diseases. . . The Presidents' Ball at City Hall celebrated President Roosevelt's birthday and raised money for infantile paralysis charities.

'She Lives To Ride' Jan. 11 At Independent Film Series

The South Shore Independent Film Series continues Thursday, Jan. 11 at 7 p.m. at the United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., with She Lives to Ride, a documentary film by Alice Stone.

The film chronicles the experiences of five women motorcycleists, including 83-year old Dot Robinson, as it explores women who "push the boundaries of the 'biker subculture' and its stereotypes."

Filmmaker Alice Stone will be present to discuss her documentary about "the most beautiful high in the world."

Admission is $5 and refreshments will be on sale.

The next film in the series will be Bluff, a drama featuring local comedian Lenny Clark, which is scheduled for Feb. 11.

For more information on the film series, call (617) 773-5306.

Quincy College To Honor Founders At Commencement Exercises Saturday

Nearly a half-century since its creation, Quincy College will honor its founders at commencement exercises Saturday at 1 p.m. in the Lloyd Hill Auditorium at Quincy High School.

The college will also honor a South Shore radio personality who retired last year.

SEAN BARRY

"How many colleges can speak with their founders and say thank you?"

tion and foresight."

Barry will present the honorary degrees along with Theresa Lord-Piatelli, board chairwoman, and Daniel Raymond, past chairman of the board.

"We're also acknowledging Roy Lind, and his familiar voice and personality," Barry added. "He was, for 39 years, a distinct and friendly persona for anyone who grew up in Southeastern Massachusetts." Lind retired from Radio Station WJDA in November and was the host of the popular "Party Line" program.

"Roy Lind created a sense of closeness and community for seniors, for residents of Quincy and the South Shore; he served a population similar to Quincy College," said Raymond. "In an era of mega-corporations and impersonal relationships, WJDA maintains a local feel and a warm, positive tone."

January commencements were established at Quincy College in order to provide students with a ceremony and appropriate recognition if they completed studies after the June exercises. Nearly 130 students have indicated an interest in participation.

"Commencement ceremonies are linked to history and tradition," Barry said. "Everything about the event is designed to draw connections to the past and to celebrate accomplishments. When we gather our founders and others who made our community more civilized, more friendly, more compassionate, we honor those traditions."

Hat Rack License Appeal Goes Before ABCC Feb. 13

The state's Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) will meet Tuesday, Feb. 13 at 10:30 a.m. to consider the Hat Rack Bar's appeal of the revocation of its liquor license by the city.

Maureen Trainor, an administrative assistant with the ABCC, said the Feb. 13 meeting will take place at the commission's office at 239 Causeway St., Boston.

The commission, Trainor said, will listen to the appeal and take it under advisement, issuing a written decision at a later date.

By a 5-0 vote, the License Board voted in the fall to revoke the liquor license of the Hat Rack Bar in Brewer's Corner after an Aug. 11 raid by the Quincy Police Department netted nine arrests on various drug and gambling charges.

Despite the revocation, the bar has remained open pending the appeal to the ABCC by Attorney Louis Cassis, who represents The Hat Rack and its owner, Donna Hatfield of Pembroke.

PRESSURE SITUATIONS

The first thing to remember about maintaining the recommended tire pressure is that it helps to ensure safety, good fuel economy and tire wear. Keeping your vehicle's tires properly inflated is easy and inexpensive. With all this in mind, it might be a good idea to invest in an accurate tire-pressure gauge. Check your tire's pressure in the morning to assess the cold pressure of the tires. For improved performance handling, try a bit more air than factory specification in the front tires of front-wheel-drive vehicles. For rear-wheel-drive cars, adding a bit more pressure to the rear tires may help response and balance. Adding a bit more pressure to the front tires of all-wheel-drive cars may help steering and response. Tire wear is dependent on several factors, including pressure, rotation and alignment. Attention to these can greatly extend the life of your tires. The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want them to be informed. You can trust your auto repairs to us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon-Fri 8am-9pm, Sat 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Count on us for propane for grills, motor homes and converted vehicles.

Dorchester To Quincy Underground Cable Project Is Completed

A host of city and state officials recently joined representatives from National Grid's Massachusetts Electric Company and New England Power Company to commemorate the completion of the Dorchester to Quincy Underground Cable Project.

The Cable Project is a $25 million, five-year joint effort by Massachusetts Electric and New England Power to maintain the reliability of electricity supply to the City of Quincy by providing an alternate source of electricity.

Two 115 Kilovolt (KV) underground transmission cables were installed along a route connecting Boston Edison's Dewar St. Substation in Dorchester to Massachusetts Electric's North Quincy Substation on Spruce St. Both substations also were modified as part of the project.

For many years, Quincy has been served by two underground transmission lines that originate at Edgar Station in Weymouth and several other lower voltage underground cables that support the two main lines. The lower voltage cables are all slated to be retired, therefore, the new cables were necessary to continue to ensure an alternate source of electric supply for the city and to prevent a potentially critical situation from developing.

"Our initiative to undertake this project demonstrates our continued commitment to the City of Quincy," said Massachusetts Electric President and Chief Executive Officer Lawrence Reilly. "We appreciate the support from Quincy's leaders, its citizens, and the business community since it was critical to the success of this project, which will provide the electric supply infrastructure necessary to support Quincy's economic development initiatives and to keep pace with residential growth over the long-term future."

According to Reilly, the companies held a multitude of meetings with community and business groups and residents to solicit input on the route of the new cables. He also explained that the final route required drilling under the MBTA tracks that run between North Quincy and Dorchester, as well as an ecologically sensitive portion of the Neponset River.

Innovative drilling techniques were used to tunnel under the train tracks and the river to avoid disruption to the MBTA's operations and to protect the natural environment of the river. When it was necessary to work in the public streets, the project team made every effort to minimize the effect on traffic.

Throughout the project, area residents and other interested parties were kept informed of its status, progress, and related issues via a monthly newsletter and by logging onto the project website at www.cableproject.com.

A toll-free number also was available 24 hours a day, seven days a week for the public to call with questions or concerns about the project.

Massachusetts Electric, a National Grid Company headquartered in Northborough, MA, delivers electricity to more than 1.2 million residential and business customers in 169 cities and towns across the state, including Quincy and 20 other communities on the South Shore and in the greater Brockton area.

EDUCATORS AND ELECTED officials viewing the new Sub Station were, from left: Frank Moffet, assistant principal of North Quincy High School; Rep. Bruce Ayers; Emily Lebo, director of Occupational Education, QPS; Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton; Mary Young, director of Science, NQHS; Gail Murphy, director of School to Career, QHS; Louis Iannilli, principal, NQHS; Catherine Smith, teacher, Science Department, QHS; and State Sen. Michael Morrissey.

A THANK YOU TO THE COMMUNITY

After more than five years of planning, design and construction, the Dorchester to Quincy Underground Electric Cable is complete! And on behalf of New England Power and Massachusetts Electric, I wish to thank the residents, businesses, and leaders of Quincy and Dorchester for their cooperation in helping to complete this important project on schedule and with minimal disruption to both communities.

The new cables will greatly enhance the reliability of electric supply for the city of Quincy, and will strengthen the area's electricity system. Both communities will receive additional annual tax revenues from the new facilities.

To thank the communities for their input on the project and for their patience during the construction, we contributed to improvement projects in Quincy and Dorchester, as well as community groups in neighborhoods in the construction area. We also funded the design and improvement of Squantum Point Park in North Quincy, which the new cables cross.

This project, and the benefits it provides, represent a $25 million investment to the area and underscore our commitment to providing reliable electric service to all of our customers.

We thank everyone who aided us during the development and construction of the project, and we look forward to serving our customers and the area in the future.

Yours truly,

Lawrence J Reilly, President

First-Time Homebuyers' Workshop Starts Jan. 21

Neighborhood Housing Services, an approved First

Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will be holding an accredited and MHE Accredited First Time Homebuyer's Workshop in collaboration with Massachusetts Co-Operative Bank.

The workshop will begin Sunday, Jan. 21 from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and continue on Tuesday and Thursday, Jan. 23 and 25, from 6 to 8:30 p.m. They will be held at The Massachusetts Co-Operative Bank, 70 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

Attendance at all three workshops is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate, which is required by most lenders to qualify for the many different mortgage options such as the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs, down payment and closing costs grants and other special first time homebuyer financing options.

Neighborhood Housing Services is a non-profit organization dedicated to assisting first time buyers through the homebuying process. The staff at NHS is unique in their approach to obtaining down payment and closing costs assistance as well as rehab grants for their clients, which are available throughout the entire South Shore area.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. The focus will be on the many changing aspects of homebuying, including how to locate a property within budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. A $10 refundable registration fee is required.

For more information and to register for this workshop, contact Janice Tucker at (617) 770-2227.

Harold Sets Council Goals

Quincy, Mass. — "Because it strengthens the traditional partnership between our business community and city government and puts that relationship on a solid foundation for the year 2001 and the years ahead."

Harold pledged to continue to work with Mayor James Sheets on the issues facing the city and said one such issue would be municipal finance in the face of an expected economic downturn, a state tax cut that will impact local aid monies, and a nearing of the city's levy limit. "The challenge is to continue to provide quality city services with the possibility of doing so with less money," Harold said.

Harold also thanked Quincy residents for their support in his recent election as Norfolk County Register of Deeds, a position Harold assumed Wednesday.

ing Committee of the City Council, of which Gregory Hanley is chairman.

In addition to Harold's re-election, Jeanne Reardon was elected unanimously to her 21st term as clerk of committees for the City Council at Tuesday's ceremonies.

Mayor James Sheets prefaced his address by noting that both the New York Times and Boston Globe ran articles this past year featuring the uniqueness of Quincy and promised to keep it that way. "Quincy is still John and Abigail Adams' home," said Sheets. "It is our home."

Highlights of the mayor's remarks include:

- "In June, Moody's Investors Service raised the city's bond rating, indicating that Moody's expects substantial development to maintain positive growth in Quincy. Moody's indicated that "It expects the city's tax base will continue to expand at above average rates given the sizable number of large commercial and residential projects anticipated to be completed over the next three years ... Moody's expects the city will maintain a positive debt position given a modest debt burden, above average amortization of debt, and moderate future borrowing mitigated by state building aid."

- "Make no mistake about it. At some point, if not soon, the present economic growth trend will change. But, when it does, we are ready. We have available in all areas of reserve approximately $7.5 million dollars that could be used in an emergency. That is 4.3 percent of budget."

- "Construction of Phase I of the concourse is well underway and is responsible for the new growth in the Parkway. However, we must begin Phase II of the concourse if economic growth is to occur in the Hancock Lot."

- "Tourism will also be made an important part of our economy. The opening of the Marriott Hotel, with its 465 rooms and extensive convention capabilities, demands that we identify and define a clear policy on tourism. It is my intention to have an expanded tourism policy in place for the May opening of the Marriott Hotel."

- "We will keep making major repairs to our older school buildings; we will improve the landscaping around the schools; and will search for additional space around some of our schools, such as North Quincy High School. We will continue our successful efforts to reduce class size, work to keep adding new teachers, and learn to more fully invest in our experienced, talented staff and faculty before we begin to lose them to other schools and professions. The issue of where to locate the new Quincy High School will be resolved."

- "The $18 million dollar renovation and expansion of the Thomas Crane Public Library will be complete in February and the formal celebration of its opening will occur in May or June. The Thomas Crane Library is now the finest physical structure of its type in the Commonwealth. Initially, we had set a fund raising goal for the library of $1 million dollars. With the help of David McCullough and others, I am pleased to say we have reached $812,739 and I am fully confident that we will reach the $1 million mark by the end of this year."

- "At Quarry Hills, the Year 2001 will mark the end of receiving fill from the Big Dig. In 2002 the 27 holes will be under construction as well as the clubhouse. There is also a continuing interest in building a new hotel at the golf course, which will be every bit as large as the Marriott in Crown Colony."

- "Following our newly updated Open Space Plan, we have moved forward to secure the Dickinson Parcel at the intersection of Victory Rd. and East Squantum St. In the months ahead I will announce additional parcels from our Open Space Plan, that we will purchase or take by eminent domain, if necessary."

- "Let us work together to continue to attain uncommon results and, in the words of John Adams, continue to make the City of Quincy for all generations 'that most remarkable spot.'"

Keating Launches Women's Program

To complement school-based career exploration and self-esteem programs for young women, Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating has launched an effort to bring female professionals from law enforcement and other fields into school settings to meet with adolescent girls at small, informal luncheons.

Designed primarily for middle school grade levels, Keating's "Young Women's Lunch Series" seeks to reach out to young women during a time of academic and social transition, introduce them to challenging and diverse career options, and reinforce the link between education and employment. Topics of discussion include career choices, the importance of education and goal setting, community development, leadership and respect for self and others.

"We want to remind young women that people care about them, and are concerned about their well-being, success and happiness," said Keating, who has made early intervention and preventive education important priorities for his administration.

Through this program, professional women impart practical "lessons learned" from their own experiences regarding academic preparation and training, career choices, internships, job searches, and potential myths and pleasant surprises about certain professions.

Guest participants may include: educators, guidance counselors and police youth officers; career counselors from employment and training centers; entrepreneurs, managers and other business professionals; probation officers and other court officials; defense counsel and attorneys in private practice; and prosecutors, investigators and victim advocates from the Norfolk District Attorney's Office.

Additional objectives include: fostering a sense of belonging and inclusion, reducing isolation, altering cliques, encouraging new friendships, providing perspectives on shared experiences and common concerns, promoting school safety and preventing court involvement.

The new program is being implemented on a small-scale, pilot basis in interested communities. Students who wish to participate are randomly selected from voluntary sign-up list.

To learn more about the program call the Juvenile Unit at (781) 830-4800, ext. 285.

North Quincy Girls Defeat Mansfield, 59-52

By CHRIS POISSON

When Casey Ridge discovered a crevice in Mansfield's defense and slipped a pass to Kristen DiMattio for an easy layup, North Quincy regained control of last Friday night's game as it held a 52-44 lead with about five minutes left.

Coach Doug MacFarlane, though, wasn't comfortable with the eight-point advantage as he turned to his brother, John, the assistant coach, and said, "This isn't safe. This is not safe against this team."

MacFarlane knew how the visitors would respond. He had scouted them in a game they played against North Attleboro and he saw a team that wouldn't quit. On that night, Mansfield rallied from 10 points down with four minutes left to force overtime and then overcame a six-point deficit in the extra session to pull out the win.

"I was afraid. I was really afraid of them," admitted MacFarlane, after his team prevailed, 59-52. "That was a good team. They were a tough team. I watched them play North Attleboro. The girls didn't get to see that game."

Perhaps that's why the Red Raiders kept their composure when Mansfield scored two quick hoops to close the gap to 52-48. Although, MacFarlane might have been biting his nails on the bench, the girls weren't fazed by Mansfield's resiliency.

The win pushes North Quincy's record to 3-1 as it enters league play, which kicked off last night (Wednesday) at home against Taunton. That lone blemish, thus far, came in the season opener when Randolph beat them at the buzzer, 34-32.

"This is a big win," MacFarlane said ecstatically. "I'm excited. We're heading into our league games now.

We have a tough league. Every game is going to be tough. Confidence wise, this was a big booster for us."

The game had more action than a John Woo film, particularly in the first half when the teams engaged in a shoot-out. Ridge engineered North Quincy's best offense performance of the season. The dynamic senior point guard, who reads the floor like a bouncer cautiously checking ID's, set the record for most assists in a game with 14, surpassing her old mark of 12 set last season.

"Casey is unbelievable," MacFarlane said. "She makes my job so much easier. She sees the floor really well. She loves to pass the ball. I want her to shoot more. She hit a big three. I need her to do that more. She needs to score more on this team than she did last year."

Junior Lauren Sleeth scored 11 of her team-high 16 points in the first half as she canned jumper after jumper. It wasn't just Sleeth, however, as the Red Raiders got a lift from some unexpected scorers.

Senior Nicole Grazioso, primarily a defensive specialist, contributed with a surprising 8 points in the first frame all she was inserted into the starting lineup when April Supry became sick before the game.

"April Supry was vomiting in the girls bathroom just before game, so I switched starters and put Nicole in," MacFarlane said. "Nicole came off the bench, literally, as the game was starting. I'm saying, 'Nicole you're in there.'"

"She scored 8 first-half points. That's big. That's big. I don't expect her to score at all. Her job is not to score. Her job is to play defense and to rebound and to give our starters a breather. I mean, I couldn't take her out of the game."

Supry ended up playing in the game and came up big in the second half, finishing with 13 points and 5 rebounds. DiMattio, a sophomore, started in place of junior Kahli Deurani who was away for the holidays, and added 10 points.

"It's an old cliché, but this was a real team effort," MacFarlane said. "These girls stepped up. That was our best offensive game this year."

Meanwhile, Mansfield's Bridget Bowes single-handedly carried her team in the first half, draining 7 treys against North Quincy's zone defense en route to 23 points. Each time North Quincy made a small rim, Bowes dialed long distance. She netted a three-pointer at the buzzer to even the score at 35.

"That was the best half of shooting I've ever seen," MacFarlane said. "She was having a career night."

In the second half, the Red Raiders came out in man-to-man defense and switched to a box-and-one to try to contain Mansfield's sharpshooter. But they didn't contain her—they shut her down. Between Grazioso and Allie Lacey, Bowes was held scoreless and limited to just one shot.

"I told them we were not going to lose to this girl," MacFarlane said. "In the box, and-one, Grazioso and Allie shut her down. She couldn't get the ball. They did a great job."

"We were lucky, too," he added. "Mansfield got some good looks at the basket. They just didn't go in."

Quincy Bantam A Wins State Championship

The Quincy Youth Hockey Bantam A team recently prevailed against a strong field to win the state championship and the honor of representing Massachusetts in the National Tournament in Atlanta, Ga., this April.

In the final game of a grueling, five-game weekend tilt, Quincy knocked off perennial contender Framingham, 3-1, to capture the title and a ticket to the Peach State.

"We knew going in that we had a strong team," said assistant coach Bill Richardson. "It was basically the same kids that won the Pee Wee state championship two years ago. They're a great bunch of kids that listen to their coaches."

"Going in, we had our sights set on Framingham. Framingham has always been a team that went to the states and they were national bound a couple times. The kids set their goal and played and worked real hard."

Matt Germain pocketed a pair of goals and tallied an assist to power Quincy, past Framingham. He earned tournament MVP honors, finishing with 8 goals and 2 assists in the five games.

"Matt Germain is the catalyst on the team," Richardson said. "He's an excellent hockey player. He'll do anything for you. He hustles and he can put the puck in the net."

The team needs $20,000 for the trip to Atlanta. To raise the money, it will hold a 50/50 raffle and a February dance. It will also go canning and seek donations from local businesses and politicians.

In the championship, the Quincy players, many of whom have been playing together since Mites, came out skating fast and hitting hard. Hustling defensive play by Matt Lavery and Tim Duggan frustrated Framingham and led to a first-period goal when Germain buried a shot on a sweet pass from Matt Grazioso.

Quincy's slender lead didn't last long as Framingham took advantage of its speed and snuck one in early in the second period.

Will Represent Mass. In National Tournament

Constant end-to-end action followed in which Pat Maxey and Ryan Conley played hard-hitting, heads-up hockey, and Liam Powers and Josh Giordani matched Framingham's speed stride for stride.

Ryan Feldoff caught Germain breaking out of Quincy's end with a strong pass and he lit the lamp to give his team a 2-1 lead. Goalie Nick Manning smothered several Framingham breakaways and defensemen Steve Kelley and Andrew Patten cleared pucks well and kept the opposition away from the net.

At the end of the frame, Kelley extended Quincy's lead to 3-1 on an assist from Germain.

In the final period, head coach Dennis Murray with assistants Bill Richardson and Rick Patten designed a game plan that took away Framingham's dump and chase offense. Kevin Richardson and Feldoff shadowed the top scorers, while Danny Sullivan and Brendon Conley contained the wings and kept pressure in Framingham's end. Kyle Carmody was assigned to muddy the middle on offense to distract Framingham's defense.

The entire team dug deep into its reserve tank and played a hard-checking, penalty-free period to come away with the victory.

Earlier in the day, Quincy defeated neighboring rival Milton, 6-3. Germain staked Quincy to a 1-0 lead in the first on an assist from Kelley. Blue-liners Lavery and Patten along with Manning in net stoned many Milton attempts.

Milton opened the second with a quick goal, but Maxey answered with a backhander off a pass from Carmody to put Quincy back on top, 2-1.

Milton evened the score at 2, but Quincy responded again when Giordani knocked one home off a great pass from Richardson.

Milton, however, tallied the equalizer and Quincy now faced its toughest challenge of the tournament as it entered the third stanza. At the opening of the period, Duggan found the cage on a booming slap shot from the point and Quincy never looked back. Grazioso scored an insurance goal with an assist from Kelley and Richardson iced the game with an unassisted goal.

In the previous day's action, Quincy opened with a 6-1 thrashing of Charlesstown. Sullivan set the pace with the first two goals, while Ryan Conley, Giordani and Richardson each chalked up a goal and assist. Duggan and Lavery repeatedly stole the puck in the defensive end.

Later on, Quincy topped Belmont 5-2, behind Germain's shattrick. Brendon Conley contributed with a goal and an assist, while Carmody played strong and chipped in with a goal. Kelley, Richardson and Grazioso each picked up two assists.

In the preliminary round, Manning backstopped Quincy to a 4-0 win over Braintree, which ignited the team for the remainder of the tourney. Germain netted a pair of goals and had an assist, while Grazioso tallied a goal and two assists and Maxey added a goal.

Powers had two assists and inspired his teammates with his end-to-end hustle and low-flying checks. Patten stonewalled Braintree's attack and had an assist, and Richardson also notched an assist. Feldoff skated every shift and won some crucial faceoffs.

Lynda Page Receives 'BlueCrew' Award

Quincy's Lynda Page recently received a BlueCrew Jump Up and Go! award from Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts.

In recognition of her dedicated support to youth physical activity and sport programs, Page will receive a $350 donation to benefit Quincy High School's Football Boosters Club.

Dedicating more than 12 hours every week for the past four years, Page supports Quincy High School's Booster Club. She has volunteered her time as secretary for the club, serving as liaison between players, coaches and the executive board.

The Boosters Club is a non-profit organization that supports the football team by providing funding for equipment, clinics, and an annual banquet held to honor its players.

The BlueCrew Jump Up and Go! donation will allow five Booster Club members to attend the Pigskin Football Camp in Braintree next summer.

Page has been with BCBSMA for more than 13 years, and currently works in government programs as an administrative assistant.

BlueCrew is BCBSMA's corporate volunteer program, which offers more than a dozen volunteer opportunities for its employees every year.

Established in 1998, Jump Up and Go! is an initiative that promotes physical activity programs developed by community-based organizations.

Exercise Classes At Lincoln-Hancock Gym

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct two different exercise classes on Monday and Wednesday evenings at the Lincoln Hancock Community School gym, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The classes, which began yesterday (Wednesday) with registration, are offered at 6:30 and 7:30 p.m.

The 6:30 p.m. class, "Good Healthy Fun," is designed to strengthen the heart and lungs, burn fat and firm muscles, and is for every fitness level.

The 7:30 p.m. class, "The Bodies Sculpting/Muscle Conditioning," is a one-hour workout designed to target all of the major muscle groups, and is especially beneficial for beginners. This class offers a safe and effective combination of a good warm-up, light stretching and resistance work for the upper and lower body.

The Monday classes will be taught by Sandra Verhault and Wednesday classes by Karen Gaughan.

Registration features two separate options for payment: A $40, one-time fee for all classes from Jan. 3 to April 25, or a $3 fee for each individual class, payable at the time of the class.

Participants in the 6:30 p.m. class may also participate in the adult swim, which starts at 7:55 p.m. in the pool located in the building.

For more information, call the Recreation Department at 376-1394.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Blood Supply In Danger Of Shortfall At New Year Arrival

New Year's Day: For most it is a time of celebration and renewal. It can also be a harbinger of a dangerously low blood supply.

"January is traditionally a time when weather-related problems, flu outbreaks and a post-holiday lull in charitable giving adversely affect the supply of blood for hospital patients," said Allan Kliman, M.D., of the Massachusetts Medical Society.

For this reason, the Massachusetts Medical Society has launched a campaign with the American Red Cross and hospitals in the Commonwealth to encourage blood donation during January. This campaign coincides with the celebration during January of National Volunteer Blood Donor Month.

According to Mary O'Neill, M.D., executive director of the American Red Cross Blood Services in New England, "Demand for blood by hospitals in central and northern New England has been on the rise throughout the past year. We have increased our blood donation goal this January by 1,000 units above what we collected last year to help meet this increased demand."

Jean M. Connors, M.D., co-director, Donor Services, Joint Program in Transfusion Medicine at Brigham and Women's Hospital, stresses,

"The need for blood to treat patients has never been greater."

"The increasingly complex and sophisticated surgeries performed today, as well as the advancements in treating diseases such as cancer and the treatment of an aging population, demand an adequate blood supply at all times. We need more people to support the community blood program as donors, and we need existing blood donors to donate as frequently as they can," Dr. Connors adds.

Chester Andrzejewski, Jr., M.D., system medical director of System Transfusion Medicine/Blood Banking Services at Baystate Health System in Springfield, concurs. "We are past the time when people can be complacent about the community blood supply. Blood is a necessity in the treatment of many patients, and it can only be available if people take the time to make a donation."

"There just is no replacement for the real thing, and the need for donors to roll up their sleeves and share the gift of life is, and will be, an on-going challenge," he adds.

January tends to be a time when paralyzing snowstorms hit, impeding blood donors from getting to blood donor centers and forcing cancellation of community blood drives. During six of the past nine years, local blood collecting agencies have launched emergency appeals for blood donations to alleviate shortages that were having an impact on patient care.

Dr. Kliman, who chairs the Medical Society's Committee on Transfusion Medicine, adds, "To compound the problem, colleges and high schools do not generally run blood drives immediately following the December holiday break. With nearly 20 percent of blood donated by these students in Massachusetts, their hiatus adds to an already difficult situation."

The Massachusetts Medical Society asks that when you make your resolutions for the year 2001 you include a commitment to donate blood. The Medical Society is coordinating information about opportunities to give blood throughout Massachusetts. For information, call (800) 322-2303, ext. 7311.

Donors are encouraged to make an appointment to give blood in advance, which not only makes the overall experience more convenient, but also allows hospitals and the Red Cross to better manage the availability of the blood supply.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

How do I clean my aid?

First you must know that approximately 90% or more in-the-ear style aids needing repair are due to wax entering the receiver. Careful cleaning and office visits can save you $100.00-$150.00!

There is not much that we can do about the ear producing wax. The glands responsible for this in our ear canals have a mind of their own and sometimes produce much more wax than is needed for protection of the ear. Yes, protection. Ear wax is not DIRT! It's nature's way to keep out infection, insects and more. Wax should be removed by medical personnel only. Keep out the swabs, bobby pins, pens etc. Your focus should be on wiping off the aid at night and every time you remove it from your ear! A careful visual examination under a bright light and magnifier is the best way to see what you're doing. If you see wax, carefully remove it with the tools provided by your specialist, without pushing it in further. When in doubt bring it to a Hearing Instrument Specialist. Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Spear and Coddington Sts., will have worship service with Holy Communion Sunday at 10 a.m.

Rev. William Harding, pastor, will conduct the service. His sermon topic will be "The Award of the King." He will also have a moment with the children of the Church School.

Scripture reader will be Vivian Miller. The Chancel Choir will sing under the direction of Thomas Boyer, organist.

Members of the Diaconate including James Ross, Ken and Mildred Rickson and Margaret Kelsey will assist the minister in serving Communion. Members of the Mikami Family will serve as greeters.

A Fellowship Hour will be held in Allen Parlor following the service. Childcare is available for infants and toddlers.

It will also be Pantry Shelf Sunday. All of the foods collected will be given to the Interfaith Social Services Pantry Shelf.

Union Congregational

Epiphany Sunday will be celebrated with Holy Communion and story, rather than the traditional Holy Communion and Sermon at the 10 a.m. service Sunday at Union Congregational Church, corner of Beach and Rawson Rd., Wollaston.

Each year on the First Sunday of the New Year, Pastor John Swanson invites the church to become children and gather to hear a children's story.

The annual reading of a children's story or Christmas story has proved to be very popular at Union Church. In recent years Pastor Swanson has read the "Gift of the Magi," "Seven Candles for Simon," and "The Other Wise Man."

This year will be "Child's Christmas at Saint Nicholas Circle," by Douglas McKelvey.

United Methodist

Yvonne Duncanson will be the guest speaker at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

Dorothy Noguera will be the lector.

Ardis Peterson will be the greeter and the ushers will present the offering.

Sunday School follows the speaker's Young People's Messiah Fellowship Hour is held in Susanna Wesley Hall. Church facilities are handicapped accessible and childcare is available.

We need you.

American Heart Association

Houghs Neck Congregational

Rev. M. Alicia Corea will preach the sermon "Two Sides of the Coin" at the 9 a.m. worship service Sunday at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

At the 10:30 a.m. service,

Dr. Peter V. Corea will give the sermon, "The Past, The Present, and The Future."

Coffee hour is at 9:45 a.m. All are welcome.

Sunday School will be held at 8:30 a.m. and 9:30 a.m.

Quincy Point Congregational

Pastor Ann Suzedell will preach the sermon "Spirit Descending" at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St. It will be Communion Sunday.

Organist Paul Thistle is music director.

Quincy Medical Center Bereavement Support Group

Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., offers a Bereavement Support Group to help alleviate some of the feelings of helplessness and hopelessness associated with the loss of a loved one.

The support group, which also assists the healing process, is facilitated by Rev. Esther Bowen, certified bereavement counselor and director of Pastoral Care at Quincy Medical Center.

The next group begins Jan.

10 and meets for eight weeks on Wednesdays from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the Medical Center. Membership is open to all those suffering the loss of a loved one and is offered at no charge. Donations are accepted.

Advance registration is required. Call Bereavement Facilitator, Rev. Esther Bowen, to register or for additional information at (617) 376-5502.

Nursing Assistant Training Program At Hancock Park

Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group will sponsor its monthly state-approved nursing assistant training program beginning Monday, Jan. 15 from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, 164

Parkway, Quincy.

Individuals interested in becoming a CNA are encouraged to attend this training free of charge.

For more information, call Chris Welch at 617-773-4222.

OBITUARIES

Marjorie G. Johnson, 90

Active Member Of First Baptist Church

A funeral service for Marjorie G. (McIntyre) Johnson, 90 of Quincy, was held Dec. 29 at First Baptist Church of Wollaston, 81 Prospect Ave.

She died Dec. 25 at Quincy Medical Center following a long illness.

Mrs. Johnson was a member of the First Baptist Church of Wollaston for over 50 years and was active in many church groups including the "Marston Class" at the church.

She was a former member of the Wollaston chapter 156 Order of Eastern Star and the Reliance Rebecca Lodge of Quincy.

She was past president of the Montclair School PTO, an advisory board member for many years of the Wollaston Assembly for Rainbow for Girls and a former member of the Wollaston Neighborhood Club.

Born in Revere, she had lived in Quincy for 50 years.

Wife of the late John Henry Johnson, she is survived by a son, Donald K. Johnson of Clearwater, Fla.; two daughters, Barbara L. Rowson of Quincy and Phyllis L. Rines of North Andover; two brothers, Leon McIntyre of Quincy and Kenneth McIntyre of Georgia; a sister, Doris Anderson of Dorchester; 11 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston.

Funeral arrangements were by the Wollaston Chapel of the Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to the Shiner's Children's Hospital, 51 Blossom St., Boston 02114.

Thomas E. Welby, 49

President Of An Avon Transportation Co.

A funeral Mass for Thomas E. Welby, 49, president of an Avon transportation company, was celebrated Dec. 30 at St. Ann's Church.

He died Dec. 26 at home.

Mr. Welby was president and owner of Refrigerated Food Express, Inc. in Avon for many years.

He was on the board of directors of the Massachusetts Motor Transportation Association, and was past chairman of the regulatory committee and education committee of the Truckload Carriers Association.

Born and raised in Quincy, he had lived on the South Shore and in Boston all of his life. He graduated from Boston College in 1973.

He is survived by his wife, Elaine (Driscoll) Welby of Boston; two daughters, Kimberly Welby and Caitlin Welby, both of Boston; and a sister, Ann Burke of Florida.

Funeral arrangements were by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to the Long Island Shelter, PO Box 158, Boston 02122, or the Caritas Good Samaritan Hospice, 310 Allston St., Brighton 02135, or the American Cancer Society, South Regional Center, 1115 West Chestnut St., Suite 301, Brockton 02301.

Margaret K. MacKay, 97

A funeral service for Margaret K. (Stoddard) MacKay, 97, of Quincy, a member of Union Congregational Church, will be held a later date.

She died Dec. 24 at the William B. Rice Eventide Home.

Born in Port Clyde, Nova Scotia, she came to the United States after she was married. She lived in Weymouth and Quincy for many years.

Wife of the late Andrew R. MacKay, she is survived by three daughters, Flora Dean of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Elizabeth Knessler of Palm Beach, Fla.; and Frances Woodworth of Thornton, N.H.; a brother, Douglas Stoddard of Port Clyde; 14 grandchildren; 33 great-grandchildren; seven great-great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Donations may be made to the William B. Rice Eventide Home, 215 Adams St., Quincy 02169.

Nicholas M. Cristiani Sr., 70

Managed Patient Accounts At Hospital

A funeral Mass for Nicholas M. Cristiani Sr., 70, of Quincy, retired manager of patient accounts at the former Quincy Hospital, was celebrated Dec. 30 at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 227 Sea St.

He died Dec. 25 at home following a brief illness.

Mr. Cristiani worked for the city of Quincy for 23 years, retiring in 1995.

He first worked as business office manager for the water department. He then served at city hall as deputy treasurer in charge of collections. He worked at the hospital for 18 years.

Many years ago, he worked for the former Mike Cristiani & Sons, his family's oil, coal and ice business.

He was also a former distributor of health and beauty aid products for several years.

Born in Boston, he was educated in Boston schools and was a 1948 graduate of Brighton High School. He lived in Quincy for 51 years.

Active in Knights of Columbus, Mr. Cristiani was a past grand knight of the former Quincy council and was a current member of the Greater Assembly of Knights of Columbus in North Quincy.

He was a fourth-degree knight and an active member of the Richard Cardinal Cushing General Assembly. He also served in its color guard.

He was a former member of the Sons of Italy.

Husband of the late Loretta A. (Falco) Cristiani, he is survived by two sons, Michael D. Cristiani of Braintree and Nicholas M. Cristiani Jr. of Quincy; three daughters, Lena L. Daly of Braintree, and Roseann C. Pope and Teresa M. Cristiani, both of Quincy; two brothers, Joseph A. Cristiani and Dr. Vincent A. Cristiani, both of Quincy; a dear friend, Margaret Donnelly of Randolph; three grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

Entombment was in St. Michael's Cemetery, Roslindale.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

Donations may be made to St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, TN 38105, or the Association of Marian Helpers, Four Prospect Hill Rd., Stockbridge 01262.

William J. O'Leary, 71

Boston Globe Truck Driver

A funeral service for William J. O'Leary, 71, of Laconia, N.H., formerly of Quincy, a Boston Globe truck driver for many years, was held Dec. 29 at St. James Episcopal Church.

He died Dec. 25 at Catholic Medical Center in Manchester.

Mr. O'Leary was a member of Teamsters Local 259.

He was an active member of the St. James Episcopal Church, American Legion Wilkins-Smith Post 1 and the Road Runners Pulmonary Support Group. He was a volunteer at the Lakes Region General Hospital.

He served in the Army. Born in Boston, he had lived most of his life in Quincy before moving to Laconia in 1993.

He is survived by his wife of 48 years, Dorothy L. (Barry) O'Leary; five daughters, Patricia Phinney of Quincy, Susan Quinn of Weymouth, Deborah Troup of Abington, Ann Stroz of Loretto, Pa., and Joanne McGuire of Hanson; a sister, Lois Walsh of Franklin; nine grandchildren and a great-grandson.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were by Wilkinson-Beane Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the American Lung Association, 9 Cedarwood Dr., Unit 12, Bedford, N.H. 03110, or to the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham 01701, or to St. James Episcopal Church, 876 North Main St., Laconia, N.H. 03246.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We all have heard the saying: "Today is the first day of the rest of your life." As long as we have life, each and every one of us must live within the confines of time -- day-by-day. It is a precious possession.

We can use it or we can waste it. At this very minute a life is being changed somewhere by someone or something, for better or for worse. A hope is being born, a dream being shattered. Pleas are being heard, accepted and rejected. Things happen every day.

This very minute, a part of today, will soon be gone. It can never be replaced. It can be used to advantage to bring happiness or it can be shunned aside to cause regret and faded hopes in the tomorrows to come. Yesterday is gone. There may or may not be a tomorrow. But we do have TODAY. A decision to write a letter, make a phone call, pay a visit, or whatever -- can mean a lot to you and others on this -- The first day of the rest of our life...

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The new year holds promise for all you Lambs who know how to take advantage of the opportunities out there. The key is keeping a positive attitude.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Over the course of this new year, your beautiful Bo-vines will continue bulldozing those barriers that stand between you and the success of your long-range plans.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The new year kicks off with a major decision about a job change that could involve a lot of travel. The choice you make could influence other decisions down the line.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Family relationships continue to be a strong influence on whatever long-range decisions you make involving both your career and your personal life.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Decisions you put off making last year should be confronted and dealt with as soon as possible. You need to clear away the past and make room for the future.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Last year's disappointments are history. Expect to see more opportunities opening up and waiting for you to use them to your advantage.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You still have some trouble spots lingering from last year. Resolve them so you can move on to tackle more rewarding situations.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Developments in the year ahead can be more challenging than you had expected. But the rewards will be well worth your efforts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You are the Philosopher of the Zodiac, and your wisdom will go a long way in helping you deal with the challenges of the upcoming year.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Take stock of what you propose to do in the new year, and get started as soon as possible. Last year's critics turn into this year's admirers.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This year, the typically gentle Water Bearer can reveal that hidden streak of steel that few people suspected you had; they will be surprised to see how you use it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although new friends open new social vistas, your penchant for privacy is still strong and allows you the quiet time you need.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have deep reservoirs of strength that give you extraordinary staying power in the most difficult conditions.

Richard Pierce Chairman At South Shore Mental Health

Richard Pierce has been elected chairman of the South Shore Mental Health (SSMH) Governing Board for 2000/2001.

The election was held at the organization's recent annual meeting at the Sheraton Tara in Braintree.

Pierce has been a member of the SSMH board since 1987. In that time, he has served as chairman for a number of subcommittees and, most recently, was vice chairman of the board.

His involvement with SSMH began 16 years ago when he was asked to be the lawyer representative for SSMH's Human Rights Committee.

"I am really excited to serve as chairman of the Board for such a dynamic and vibrant organization that serves so many in the community," Pierce said.

An attorney at Marina Bay Management Services, LLC in Quincy, Pierce also serves on the Board of Trustees for Randolph Savings Bank and the Woodward School for Girls, where he is chairman.

He lives in Canton with his family. Other officers elected at the meeting include: Harry

Granite City Electric Opens New Location

Granite City Electric Supply Company announces the opening of its ninth location, in Andover at 10 Lowell Junction Rd.

"We are very excited to be expanding into Andover," said Phyllis Papani Godwin, Granite City CEO. "We're seeing an unbelievable boom in building and construction in the Merrimack Valley region, which makes a central location like Andover convenient to all of our contractors."

The new 26,000 foot facility will have available over 50,000 items. Among the other features in the Andover location will be the Contractor Center, an area set up exclusively for contractors where they'll have free access to a fax, computers, telephone, and hookups for laptops.

"We specifically designed this area because we know how busy contractors are these days," said Steve Helle, president of Granite City. "Their time is money and we want to give them the opportunity to keep their business up and running while they're visiting our store."

Contractors can sign up now for a line of credit by contacting Granite City's Quincy headquarters at 1-800-850-9400. Once in the store, there are also a number of other guarantees contractors can take advantage

Vote Jan. 16 On 41-Page Draft Council Races Deadline On Tattoo Law

By CRAIG SALTERS

With tattooing legal in Massachusetts for the first time in decades, the City Council is set to vote Jan. 16 on an ordinance to regulate body art for the protection of the public health.

But time is of the essence, as the state's 90-day moratorium on body art, issued shortly after State Superior Court Judge Barbara Rouse declared tattooing a form of expression guaranteed by the First Amendment, expires Feb. 1.

"This date (Feb. 1), through no fault of our own, is looming," Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue warned city councillors at a public hearing on the issue Monday night, predicting that as many as three or four tattoo/body art shops could open "that day."

Gallahue asked councillors to put aside concerns over zoning, licensing, or insurance requirements and pass the ordinance as soon as possible, reminding councillors that, at this point, public safety was the paramount issue.

"It's now legal so we have to do our best to protect the public," Gallahue said after the hearing, noting health concerns such as training and certification, the size of work stations, and the proper sterilization of instruments.

The ordinance, presented at the hearing in the form of a 41-page draft, defines body art as a business and prohibits the practice in residential areas, allowing it every

Board Votes 3-Day Suspension At Bryan Post

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday voted to suspend the all alcoholic and common victualer licenses of the George Bryan VFW Post for three days following complaints of illegalities including nudity.

Board Chairman Joseph Shea said the three days will be determined this week.

The motion for the suspension was ordered by Acting Police Chief Terrence Kelly and seconded by Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said that the members' bar would also have to be closed during the three day suspension.

The illegalities occurred Nov. 4 according to police. In making the motion, Kelly said he was "uncomfortable" with what had happened and said Lt. Robert Perchard, liquor inspector was "upset" over the issue. He said he hoped that the post had "no intent to deceive the board."

Addressing the board, Perchard said on the night of Nov. 4 a little after 10 p.m. he was contacted by the detail checker, Lt. John Dougan about something "amiss" at the Bryan Post on Broad St.

Perchard said at the time, there was a Cape Meridian affair on the upper floor of the hall with three police officer and a sergeant on detail.

But he was told when he arrived that there was a private bachelor party going on in the lower hall. Perchard said when he got downstairs, the door was locked so he ordered the manager Ed Scigliano to unlock the door.

When he entered he said, there was about 40 males sitting in chairs in a large circle. In a room off to the right, a ladies room, door in opened position, were three women completely nude wearing "cowboy boots and tassels", and two men. (the men had their clothes on).

Perchard said he ordered the women to get dressed and men out of the room. He told them he was shutting down the bar and hall and told them all to leave.

Perchard said he spoke to Janice Dunn, the rental agent for the post who said she was "bypassed" for any rental in the lower hall for that night. He called what had happened "premeditated."

Scigliano tried to explain to the board that the group in the lower hall had rented two vans and they were about to go into Boston. However, it was suggested that they could instead go to the lower hall where exotic dancers would appear.

Scigliano said he told the girls to stay in the bathroom until Perchard arrived to see if they could dance and did not know there would be nudity. However, when Perchard arrived, the three women were nude.

Scigliano said he had no intent to break any rules, and added he did not try to hide that there was a party. He said he did try to stop them until Perchard arrived. He said they stayed in the bathroom for a half hour waiting for Perchard.

He then apologized to the board the citing his past about being "responsible"

He said "I made a mistake."

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue questioned Scigliano about having the vans waiting and not using them.

Gorman took offense to Scigliano's explanation about not knowing about the nudity and said, "Do you think the board is naive?" "Don't try to kid me or the board." "You knew what was going on," and repeated it a couple of times.

Lief Thornton, commander of the post told the board he had no knowledge of any party on Nov. 4 until the police arrived.

He said they have revised the contracts for rentals and no one will be able to hold any functions unless they go through Dunn. He said he would send a copy to the license board.

Shea said Scigliano could appeal the decision to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission which got an immediate reply from Scigliano who said "there will be no appeal."

Board member Walter White, inspector of building services was unable to attend the meeting because he was ill.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

Meets With City Officials

Judge Coven Proposes: Open QDC More To Public

By TOM HENSHAW

Presiding Justice Mark Coven would like to open up his courtroom to more students and TV cameras "to educate the public to what a vital part the Quincy District Court plays in the community."

The judge, who was named to head the Quincy court last year, disclosed his hopes and plans at a "get acquainted" meeting with local elected and appointed officials last Thursday out at Mayor James Sheet's office at City Hall.

"It is important that the city have a more complete understanding of what we do," he said.

"The general public just doesn't recognize the number of people and the types and volume of cases at the Quincy District Court. There is a minimum of 25,000 to 30,000 people who make use of the court annually to resolve their problems."

In order to achieve his goals in one of the state's busiest courtrooms, Judge Coven laid out a three-point plan for making the public more aware of the workings of the district court, which he called "a community court."

First, he said, "if the school has a program of mock trials as part of the schoolwide program, we'd like to have them held in actual courtrooms or bring students in to observe actual trials or hearings."

"I'd like to bring in the technical programs from the schools to develop a website for the Quincy District Court."

"And I support cameras in the courtroom, unless, of course, the courtroom is closed for a particular purpose like juvenile cases. I'd like to work more closely with cable TV to show our work to the community."

Judge Coven said he has not yet started his proposed programs in any of the seven cities and towns served by the Quincy District Court.

"But I have a meeting scheduled with Arthur Keough (head of the Quincy Public Schools Partnership Program) and Superintendent Eugene Creedon to see if they can be implemented," he said.

The meeting with local Quincy officials was the last in a series of similar get-togethers in the seven communities that are in the Quincy district, including Braintree, Weymouth, Cohasset, Milton, Randolph and Holbrook.

The twin purposes of all the meetings, said the judge, were to introduce himself and try to start a dialogue and get feedback as to how the court can become more involved with the community.

The enormous volume of the Quincy District Court, according to Clerk/Magistrate Arthur Tobin, is handled by as many as four, sometimes as few as two associate justices.

"We have to take what the region sends to us," he said. "We could keep four judges busy all the time."

Many of the cases, like motor vehicle violations, show cause hearings and small claims, are handled by the clerk/magistrates but if his decision is appealed that appeal goes to the judge.

The Quincy court ranks seventh among 69 district courts in the state in handling criminal complaints with 8,110 cases, topped only by Springfield (14,214), Worcester (13,595), Brockton, Dorchester, Lawrence and New Bedford.

The statistics are for Fiscal 1999, which ended 18 months ago, but are the last year for which they are available.

For some reason, Quincy leads the list of 69 in charges of operating under the influence, with 1,036 cases, nearly double that of the next court, Worcester. It also tops the list in larceny and fraud cases with 4,235, more than a thousand more than Worcester.

In other criminal cases, Quincy ranks

First in serious motor vehicle violations, 51st in motor vehicle homicides, fifth in all other MV cases, 14th in breaking and entering, 11th in assaults, 11th in firearms, 13th in narcotics, 11th in disturbance and disorders, eighth in destruction of personal property, 58th in non-support, and third in all others.

It was first in the number of criminal show cause hearings.

On the civil side, Quincy was seventh in regular civil cases, 43rd in civil remands, first in summary process, third in supplementary process, ninth in abuse prevention (209A), third in mental health, third in probation surrenders, third in civil motor vehicle infractions and eighth in other civil cases.

A total of 5,967 small claims were brought to the Quincy court, second busiest in the state.

NQHS Adds Three Early Release Days

North Quincy High School is adding three more early release days this year because of upcoming evaluation accreditation by the NEASC.

The new early release dates: Jan. 23, March 27 and May 22.

Students will be released from school at 12:45 p.m. on those days.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1929 postcard showing Wollaston Center looking west from its intersection with Hancock Street. On the right the Beale Street Pharmacy is now the site of Papa Gino's. Further up on the right were Woolworth's 5 & 10, Hattie Sanborn's gift shop, Greenleaf Hardware and across Cushing Street the Hilliard's Glass House candy shop was in the store now used by Barry's Deli. On the left Klien's Drug is now the Blackwood Pharmacy. Just before the Wollaston

Theater was Paul's Restaurant. The Masonic Temple was a large building across from the end of Cushing Street. At that time it was home to the Demolay, Eastern Star, Wollaston Lodge AF & AM and the Wollaston Women's Club. It later became the Wollaston Legion Post and is now the site of a Sovereign Bank branch. The utilities are now underground, but with all the other changes over almost 75 years this scene remains pretty much the same. From the Collection of Tom Galvin

Young Volunteer Supports Salem Move

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Although people complain about the Salem being moved to Squantum Point Park, it's truly the only option the ship has. The bridge being constructed cannot be built around the ship nor can it be stopped. Also, if the Salem was to be moved, it would mostly be out of the Marina Bay residents' view.
If these people are rejecting the Salem, they are rejecting a part of our county's history. While the Salem never served in any wars, she was always prepared to fight for the United States of America. Today the Salem is the only heavy cruiser left in the world. Quincy should be proud to have her. The USS Salem is an important part of our history.

Although I'm only 14 years old, I volunteer on the USS Salem every weekend. I have learned a great deal of Naval and United States history while on board the ship.

You may not think my opinion counts; however, most of the visitors on the ship are actually kids. Every weekend I have observed children beaming with joy as they tour with their parents. They love exploring every nook and cranny — even if it's off-limits. The Salem is very interesting to them and, if these kids and their parents were allowed to continue to visit the Salem, that would be an asset for residents and merchants at Marina Bay.

I hope this letter convinces people who may not have visited the ship to do so before forming any opinions. Thank you for taking my letter into consideration.

Thank You, Tom Galvin

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I would like to publicly thank Tom Galvin for the excellent work he did copying old postcards of Edgewater Drive for me. I am a former Necker with three sisters living on Edgewater Drive. I have read The Quincy Sun since I moved to Florida 25 years ago. I contacted Mr. Galvin about the possibility of locating old pictures of Edgewater Drive that I could frame for one of my sisters, who just returned to the Neck after 17 years.

Mr. Galvin searched his files, found several photos, sent me copies, and contacted me as to the ones I would like. He then color-copied them and sent the finished product back to me in time for me to frame and bring to Quincy for Christmas.

Mr. Galvin is a credit to your newspaper. He went above and beyond his duty to provide courteous service to an out-of-town reader. Needless to say, my subscription will be renewed for the coming year.

MDA Thanks Firefighters For Their Efforts

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
The Muscular Dystrophy Association wants to wish all the firefighters a happy holiday and a healthy New Year, and to express our deepest gratitude for all the work they have done this year.
Not only have they generously donated their precious time and energy to help battle the 43 neuromuscular diseases MDA supports, including Duchenne muscular dystrophy and Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS or Lou Gehrig's disease), they put their lives on the line each day to help those in need.
Quincy Fire Local 792 raised nearly $13,000 this year through various fundraising efforts. With the support of the firefighters and their community, we are able to put more of the dollars raised back into our comprehensive network of research and patient services, including assistance in purchasing medical equipment, a summer camp program and support groups.

Thank you so much for helping us continue our fight for a cure and for being our heroes every day. Have a happy and healthy holiday.

Taxi Owners Seek 100% Fare Hike

By PAUL HAROLD

Taxi owners petitioned the city council for a 100 percent increase in fares citing the increase in operating costs since the last fare hike 26 years ago.
Lawrence Mattie, owner of Yellow Cab, said it cost $4,200.25 to put a cab on the street compared to the cost in 1930 of $600. Atty. Melvin Thoner, representing the tax operators, said the increase would provide for a rate of 50 cents for the first mile and 10 cents for each additional quarter mile. Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa was expected to file the request on behalf of the operators.

'Glaciers In Quincy' Environmental Treasures Tour Is Set For Sunday

The Quincy Park Department's "Environmental Treasures of Quincy" program will feature "Glaciers in Quincy" as its next tour Sunday, Jan. 14.

The tour will begin indoors at 1:30 p.m. at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex at One Merrymount Parkway. The public is welcome and there is no charge.

The tour will begin with a slide show of glaciers from Phil McLaren, professor of geology at Eastern Nazarene College. McLaren will share his personal photos of glacial activity from Alaska and other parts of the world.

Following the slide show, the tour will move outside to Merrymount Park, where McLaren will show vivid examples of the impact of glaciers from the ice age. Formations such as kettle holes and drumlins are evident in Merrymount Park and nearby Black's Creek. McLaren will show examples of such formations and explain how they came to be formed by retreating glaciers.

An optional driving tour to Kincaide Park will follow. Here, McLaren will show clear examples of glacial striation in the rock formation across from the Lincoln-Hancock School.

The Environmental Treasures of Quincy program was formed this past year to help foster an appreciation of the eclectic array of environmentally significant locations within Quincy. The Park Department aims to foster a public stewardship of these areas through education and appreciation.

For more information on this tour or the Environmental Treasures program, call the Quincy Park Department at 376-1254.

THE O'CONNELL STORY ROOM, made possible by a donation from Peter O'Connell in honor of his grandchildren, is the first Quincy Public Library room specifically designed for the reading of stories to children. Outside the story room window will be a Peace Garden in memory of Iqbal Masih, a 12-year old Pakistani boy who spoke to Broad Meadows students in 1994 about the horrors of child labor and was murdered in 1995. The garden will be the project of Broad Meadows students and landscaper Mary Smith, who donated her time to the project.

SUNLIGHT FILLS The Dr. Paul Ossen Fiction Room of the newly renovated Thomas Crane Public Library.

"It's a bit like organizing an army," said McLaughlin, stepping over orange extensive cords and pieces of shelving in what will be the Dr. Paul Ossen Fiction Room. "Trying to meld all these separate pieces into one library is the big story right now."

A story whose happy ending will be a $17 million, state-of-the-art library featuring a 35,000 square foot addition; a two-story cable access television station with classroom; a library cafe; a room for large print books; a meeting room capable of holding 130 guests; a 65-space public parking lot; a children's room complete with a specially designed story room; increased handicapped accessibility; a Quincy History Room with climate controlled holding area for rare materials; a computer classroom with over 20 PCs wired to the Internet and ready for classes to begin in April; and a restored, "technology free" Richardson building which will be as close to the vision of world-renowned architect Henry Hobson Richardson as possible.

And that's a partial list. McLaughlin admitted the first week of moving was "a bit overwhelming" but said the library is beginning to take shape, attributing much of the success to Assistant Library Director Jane Granstrom. "She's the one running behind all this," McLaughlin said of Granstrom's efforts. "She knows where every book should go, down to the last inch."

McLaughlin said she was grateful for the chance to make such a lasting impact on the institution, similar to those made by the construction of the Richardson Building in 1881 or the later additions of the Coletti Wing.

"I think it's an amazing opportunity to create the space that you work in," said McLaughlin, who recently celebrated her 30th year working for the library. "You get to think about what makes sense."

One thing that made sense for McLaughlin, she said, was going against traditional library design which pushed the children's room off into some corner of the basement, out of sight of adult patrons.

Instead, The Pat Toland Children's Room is one of the first areas patrons will see after walking in from the new Washington St. entrance, serving as a sort of flagship for the new library's attitude.

"It's built to be a place which welcomes children and families," McLaughlin said of the new children's room, adding that security and parent accessibility were high priorities. "If we're not about families and children, then what are we about?"

Although the new facilities — and the much prized commodity of space — will be impressive, McLaughlin said, even more impressive is the way the project brought out the best in the community.

"This is very much a Quincy library," said McLaughlin. "We're not just about books and equipment. This is a building filled with stories."

One such story involves the donation of $10,000 from the estate of longtime library patron Mildred Caviechi, whose will specified that funds be earmarked for "comfortable chairs for the old ladies in the reading room."

Or the story of the Mabelle Fullerton Mysteries Room, dedicated in memory of the former society columnist for the Patriot Ledger who was extremely fond of the genre.

"She once interviewed John Cheever, who was born at the end of Spear St.," McLaughlin recalls. "And his quote to her was, 'Quincy is like a custard pie, with no upper crust.'"

Other stories include the Peace Garden which will be dedicated in memory of child-labor activist and Broad Meadows friend Iqbal Masih, who was murdered a year after visiting the school; or the millennium tiles which were hand made by Quincy schoolchildren and will be placed along the walls of the toddler room; or the rooms honoring such honored Quincy names as Francis Bellotti or Harry and Louisa Beebe; or the furniture for the new library, designed by Fileen McDonnell, a Quincy native employed by the project's architect.

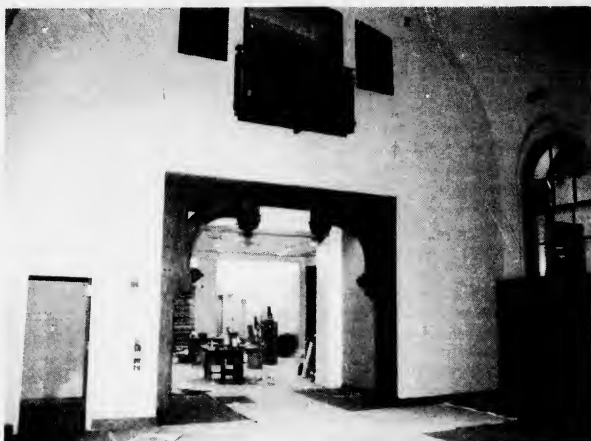

There's also McLaughlin's own story of catching Mayor James Sheets sneaking onto the construction site several times to catch a glimpse of the library's progress. "If it weren't for Mayor Sheets, this project never would have happened," McLaughlin said simply.

In addition to the Feb. 5 opening, an Open House will be held Sunday, Feb. 4 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. to allow residents their first look at the new library.

McLaughlin said that over $830,000 of the target goal of $1 million has been raised to purchase furnishings and equipment for the library, with donations still being accepted and naming opportunities still available.

THE TAYLOR AHERN Business Collection Room, made possible by a donation from his son Dana Ahern, honors the former library trustee.

THE THOMAS HURLEBAUS Balcony of the Quincy History Room overlooks the remodeled reading room of the Coletti Building in the Crane Library. Both the reading room and fiction rooms are named for Dr. Paul Ossen, who donated over $100,000 to the project.

THE HARRY AND LOUISA BEEBE Young Adults Room was made possible by a special donation of the Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA) and honors the late couple for their lifetime of dedication to the students of Quincy.

Free Valet Parking At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) President and CEO Christine Schuster announces complimentary valet parking is now available to patients and other visitors to the medical center.

The free service, available Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., is managed by FitzInn Parking Systems, operating under contract with QMC.

"The increase in outpatient and emergency visitors to our facility over the past few years has put enormous pressure on our parking capacity and, regrettably, our customers have paid the price of our growth through wasted time and inconvenience," Schuster said. "But the days of driving around our parking lot in search of a space are over. With the new year comes free valet parking and the courtesy of valet assistance to any patient or visitor who may need help getting from his or her car to our door."

Early last year, QMC staff began to evaluate its parking problems to try to find ways to add capacity. Just this past fall, the hospital leased an off-site parking area large enough for 60 cars adjacent to Star Market, and that space is used by contract employees and nurses in training.

A shuttle bus makes a continual loop to this facility for the convenience of those who park there. QMC also runs a free shuttle to and from the closest MBTA station to encourage hospital employees and patients to use public transportation and to leave their cars at home.

"Though free valet parking has only been operational for one week, the feedback has been terrific," said Ed Brown, General Manager, Support Services. "Not surprisingly, patients who are regular visitors to our facility and who are therefore all too familiar with our parking pressures have been particularly vocal. We're delighted and very encouraged with this early response."

The implementation of free valet parking is just the first step in a series of steps planned to improve customer service at QMC. Plans are also underway to implement this spring a concierge program wherein staff will greet patients and visitors at both the front and rear entrances of the building, offer assistance in directing or escorting people to their desired location, and respond to their questions and concerns.

And later this year, QMC plans to have in place an emergency room liaison who will serve as a temporary link between emergency room patients and concerned family members and friends.

$600,000 Voted For Replacement Ladder Truck

Members of the Finance Committee of the City Council voted unanimously Monday night to favorably recommend $600,000 in appropriations for a replacement ladder truck for the Quincy Fire Department.

The measure is expected to pass easily at the council's next meeting Tuesday, Jan. 16.

"This will be a replacement truck," confirmed Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, who said the 44-foot long, five section aerial would be able to fit into all Quincy fire stations except Squantum's.

A new ladder truck, which Gorman said would take nine months to a year to order, will allow the QFD to retire its oldest ladder truck of 32 years while still maintaining three working ladder trucks in the city.

The ladder truck issue has become a contentious one with debate focusing on whether the city needs a fourth ladder truck and exactly where such a vehicle would be stationed.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, who has long argued that the growing West Quincy neighborhood is in dire need of a ladder truck, reminded colleagues that, replacement truck or no, the decision as to where Quincy's ladder trucks should go ultimately rests with the results of a $75,000 Fire Needs Study, which is expected sometime mid-year.

"All eyes are on the Fire Study," D'Amico said.

John Keenan, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, told councillors that a draft of the RFP (Request For Proposals) for the study would be ready later in the week.

New Applebee's Topic Of Meeting At Atlantic Center

A community meeting to discuss the planned Applebee's Restaurant at the former DiMattio property in North Quincy was scheduled for Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, Hayward St.

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton, who called the meeting, said that Applebee's representatives, including Atty. Robert Fleming, would be on hand to discuss plans for the proposed restaurant.

Emblem Club Meeting

The Quincy Emblem Club is scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. tonight (Wednesday) with a Yankee Swap. Members are asked to bring a $5 swap.

A reading of the rules will be read. Hostesses for the month are Kelly Botana and Ann Dekas.

JACK CONWAY PRESIDENT Richard Cahill presents award to Stephanie Corkery of Quincy at company breakfast.

Stephanie Corkery Wins Conway Award

Stephanie Corkery of Quincy recently was awarded Jack Conway & Co.'s annual "Thanksgiving Award" for her work at Conway Financial Services.

Chairman Jack Conway and President Richard F. Cahill presented the award at the company's annual Thanksgiving breakfast at Plimoth Plantation. Winners from each office received a Thanksgiving turkey in recognition of their efforts throughout the year.

"What makes the Thanksgiving Award so special is that the winners are chosen by their colleagues," Conway said. "Each office's sales team selects the person they feel best represents the Conway spirit of cooperation, helpfulness, and goodwill."

As part of the event, Conway associates and employees collected nearly $1,000 worth of canned food and other non-perishable goods to benefit MainSpring House, a homeless shelter operated by the Brockton Coalition for the Homeless.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 37 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Ayers Files 57 Bills Before House Deadline

Rep. Bruce Ayers reports he filed 57 pieces of legislation at last month's filing and retelling deadline in the House of Representatives.

Ayers said the 57 bills were the result of neighborhood meetings, district office hours and correspondence from constituents.

"I find," he said, "that the best way to effectively work on behalf of the taxpayers concerns in the district is by staying in close contact with my constituents and bringing their concerns by way of legislation to the State House."

One of the new bills would provide an income tax credit for families caring for children at home who are physically challenged.

He also re-filed several bills regarding: ATM safety standards, MWRA Water and Sewer conservation, telemarketing fraud, education reform, protecting senior benefits, veterans services and firefighters emergency equipment grant.

Council Races Deadline On Tattoo Law

where else. It sets training and certification standards — such as the requirement that all tattoo artists pass courses on anatomy and physiology — and lays out rules for such matters as site inspection, licensing fees, and enforcement.

There is an absolute prohibition on the tattooing of minors.

Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines, a member of the Body Art Committee, addressed councillors and explained that the committee focused on public health concerns and public health concerns alone, given that the law grants the authority to restrict body art specifically to boards of health for matters of public safety.

Any other motive, Hines warned, runs into dangerous territory because tattooing and body art are now considered protected by the First Amendment and cannot be infringed.

The draft, Hines said, would need only minor changes before the council's Jan. 16 meeting, adding that the committee drafted the ordinance paying close attention to Judge Rouse's written opinion.

The Body Art Committee, which is led by chairman and Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton, consists of Gallahue, Hines, Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, QCBPA Executive Director Maralin Manning, and Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets.

Responding to councillors' numerous questions as to why body art could not be restricted to certain areas similar to adult entertainment businesses, Hines suggested visiting such issues at a later date but focusing now on getting a law "on the books" before Feb. 1.

One councillor who will do so is Newton, who said he will bring forth a Home Rule Petition to address such issues as zoning, licensing, and CORI background checks for body art establishments.

However, as chairman of the Body Art Committee, Newton praised the work of Gallahue, Hines, and others and joined them in pushing the ordinance forward before the Feb. 1 deadline.

One resident speaking in favor of the ordinance was Mik Miller, owner of the Body Xtremes body piercing shop in North Quincy, whom Hines called "instrumental" in the drafting of the ordinance.

Delahunt Study Report:

Breast Cancer Drugs Higher Here Than Abroad

Congressman Bill Delahunt has published a new study documenting that women in southeastern Massachusetts pay far more for breast cancer medications than their counterparts in four other western nations.

The Delahunt study concludes that local prices for prescription drugs to treat breast cancer are, on average, two and one half times higher than in France, Canada, Italy and the United Kingdom.

"Other nations will thrive pharmaceutical industries manage to balance the legitimate business needs of big drug companies with fundamental respect for public health, Delahunt said. "So can we."

The study was the fifth in a series commissioned by Delahunt over the last two years on prescription drug costs on the South Shore and the Cape & Islands. These reports have shown wide disparities between prices charged to ordinary local residents and various other customers, from HMOs to pets.

A previous Delahunt survey, published in July, documented that drug manufacturers charge more when their products are intended for use by local women with breast cancer who lack prescription drug coverage, or any health insurance at all.

An earlier report showed that seniors in our region pay much more for five common medications than do their counterparts in Mexico and Canada. The latest report built on the work of these two studies.

"This shows that breast cancer drugs are cheaper in each of the other countries we studied --- and that the most widely used medications have the largest price disparity," said the Delahunt introduction.

"The distinctions add up fast. Patients who need these medications often must depend on them for years, so the cost differentials multiply substantially over time. And the disparities hit hardest in regions like ours, where the incidence of breast cancer is elevated."

For the five drugs studied, the report found a price differential across our borders averaging 142 percent. In fairness, Delahunt noted that there was one instance, involving the medication Megace in Canada, in which a foreign price exceeded the local cost.

However, the pattern was clear. The widest multilateral disparity --- an exceptionally high 552 percent --- was for Tamoxifen, the most widely used breast cancer medication in the United States. A woman on Cape Cod or the South Shore woman pays $111 for one month supply. The same prescription costs $10 in France --- a differential over 1000 percent.

In his analysis, Delahunt acknowledged the financial burdens facing pharmaceutical firms working to develop new medications, but disputed that these costs justify retail disparities that victimize the most vulnerable consumers.

"Drug manufacturers, like any other business, have a right to make money," he said. "But it is also telling that over a one-year period, the industry registered record profits and spent over $8 billion on commercial advertising alone."

Delahunt said the emphasis on prescription drug costs during the recent elections lends some hope for legislative action in the upcoming session of Congress.

"The real test," he said, "is whether the bipartisan chorus for reform will still be singing when the House and Senate reconvene."

MORE SPECIFICS, PLEASE: Marina Bay resident and trustee Michael McNally spoke for many condo owners at a recent meeting on the moving The USS Salem to Squantum Point Park off Marina Bay when he asked for more details on how the move would impact the community.

(Quincy Sun photos)

JOANNE CONDON WALSH, executive director of the USS Salem, explains the benefits of the Salem to the Marina Bay community as well as why Squantum Point Park is the only realistic location for the museum ship.

MILDRED VENTO, who worked at the Fore River Shipyard at the age of 17 and worked on the USS Wasp, lent her support to moving the Salem to Squantum Point Park, a 35-acre site owned by the MDC. "If it were possible, I'd put it in my backyard," Vento said.

Sheets, Newton Disagree On Marina Bay

Alternate Site For USS Salem Proposed, Opposed

For weeks, Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton has been expressing doubts that the proposed move of the USS Salem from its berth at the Fore River Shipyard to the MDC's Squantum Point Park off Marina Bay was a good match.

Now, following last week's community meeting at Marina Bay attended by more than 100 residents -- mostly in opposition to the move -- Newton says those doubts have coalesced into firm opposition.

"I'm going to oppose the move of the Salem to Marina Bay," Newton told The Sun Monday, adding that he sent letters to Mayor James Sheets and State Sen. Michael Morrissey saying as much and calling for an alternative site for the Salem, home to the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

Newton, who called the Marina Bay meeting which featured a presentation by representatives of the Salem including Executive Director Joanne Condon Walsh, reiterated resident fears of blocked views and declining property values but said much of the opposition focused on a private entity receiving state funds.

The heavy cruiser Salem, which must vacate its MWRA-owned berth at the shipyard because of the reconstruction of the Fore River Bridge, is in the process of receiving local, state, and federal approval for dredging and re-location plans which would allow it to move to the waters off Squantum Point Park, a 35-acre site owned by the MDC.

Figures discussed at the Jan. 4 meeting estimated total re-location costs at $1.7 million.

Commenting Tuesday, Mayor Sheets, who also serves as chairman of the board of the shipbuilding museum, said he received Newton's letter and respectfully disagreed.

"I support the move to Squantum Point Park," said Sheets. "I think it's a good location and I don't think it will be detrimental to any of the residents. It will, in fact, be a plus."

The mayor emphasized the many positives of the Salem, such as its work with the Quincy Public Schools and its scouting programs, and called any comparison of the museum to the nearby WaterWorks nightclub "apples and oranges."

Although references to WaterWorks were made at the Jan. 4 meeting, the majority of Marina Bay residents in opposition did not BROAD MEADOWS TEACHER Ronald Adams used the community meeting on the proposed move of the Salem to detail the history of Quincy shipbuilding as well as the city's efforts to obtain the ship. "She's a ship carrying a very delicate cargo: Quincy's history," Adams said.

STEPHEN DUNLEAVY, a Marina Bay resident, expresses his concerns about the proposed move of the USS Salem from the Fore River Shipyard to Squantum Point Park, a move which is estimated to cost $1.7 million.

argue the educational or historic value of the Salem, instead voicing concerns that it was simply a "mismatch" for the city's most expensive property.

Many residents also asked for more details as to how the ship would affect sightlines from condominiums or docked sailboats and wanted to see an artist's rendering of the proposal, which was unavailable.

"What we want is more specifics," said Michael McNally, a trustee at Marina Bay. "There is no animosity (toward the Salem) ... we just want to know what the proposals are: the where, what, when, and how."

But those details, responded Condon Walsh, just aren't available right now because the move is only in its initial stages.

"What they're looking for is more information than what we have right now," said Condon Walsh, who invited Marina Bay residents to tour the Salem for free over the coming holiday weekend. "We can't give them what we don't have."

Condon Walsh did bring several experts on the project, including Engineer Ronald Bourne, to answer questions on such issues as dredging, environmental impact, and cost.

Condon Walsh, a former Ward 6 councillor herself, said the meeting was helpful because it allowed several speakers -- such as Broad Meadows teacher Ronald Adams, Salem Curator James Fahey, Arthur Keogh of the Quincy Schools Partnership, former crewmember and volunteer Dr. William Anderson, Veterans Services Director Henry Bradley, former shipyard worker Mildred Vento, and 17-year old scout Patrick Scanlon -- to educate Marina Bay residents on the benefits of the Salem. "I think we surprised some people," Condon Walsh said.

Many residents offered alternative sites, such as a re-tooled Fore River Shipyard, but Condon Walsh restated her position that, with construction at the Fore River Bridge expected to last for almost a decade, it was Squantum Point Park or nothing.

"There are no alternative sites," Condon Walsh said.

North Quincy Boys 'Edge' Falmouth, 77-66

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy boys' basketball team lost its "edge" and then it was almost pushed off the edge last Friday night at home.

Despite its last two games being canceled, North Quincy showed no early signs of rust from the eight-day layoff as it came out smoking in the first half and constructed a 43-21 advantage after 16 minutes of play.

At the intermission, the Red Raiders set cruise control for the final frame. Falmouth, though, brought that joyride to a screeching halt as it kicked it into high gear and cut the deficit to 8 points before crashing, 77-66.

"It's a win and that's always nice," said a relieved Ted Stevenson after the game. "I'm not too happy even though it is a W. We let our intensity get away from us in the second half."

In North Quincy's first two games of the season against Randolph and Norwell, both wins, Stevenson said his team had that intensity but that it vanished in the following two games, both losses, to Silver Lake and Natick.

"That's been our problem all year," he said. "First two games we had great intensity and in the last two our intensity, we call it the edge, we lost our edge. We thought we had it back in practice and I thought we had it in the first half [Friday night], but it wasn't there in the second half."

North Quincy Boys' Track Eyes League Crown

The North Quincy High School boys' track team's season is in full swing and the small-numbered team has held its own in the competitive Old Colony League.

So far this season the Red Raiders have only lost to Silver Lake, while they have beaten Falmouth, Plymouth South and Taunton. The senior-laden team has its sights set on the league championship.

Christian Donovan, a senior who has placed first against every team, is ranked first in the OCL in the 600 meters. Over the holiday break, Donovan ran the 600 meters at the Winter Festival and beat the top seed for a first-place finish.

Jeff Bartoloni placed first in the 1,000 meters against Silver Lake and Taunton; first in the mile against Plymouth South and second in the mile against Falmouth. He also placed fifth at the Winter Festival in the 1,000 meters.

Basketball

North Quincy (3-2, 1-1) hosted Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday and tomorrow (Friday) it will travel to Barnstable.

The consolation game of North Quincy's Christmas Tournament (Dec. 30) was postponed due to snow and has been rescheduled for Jan. 14. Last Tuesday's game at Taunton was canceled when two students at Taunton High School were killed in a car accident over the weekend. It will be made up Feb. 12.

After back-and-forth action for the first couple of minutes of the game, North Quincy pulled away with a 20-4 outburst and then a 16-5 run to end the half. The Red Raiders beat Falmouth's zone defense with crisp perimeter passing and their ability to drive to the hoop.

John O'Connell paced the attack, scoring 14 of his 17 points in the first half. The junior center knocked down medium-range jumpers and got open under the basket for layups and putbacks. Junior guard Phil McGillicuddy (16 points), the team's marquee offensive player, led him a couple of times off of drives.

"John's a very good player," Stevenson said. "He's not known around the league yet but he will be very shortly. Everyone is concentrating on Phil and John is going to benefit greatly from that. He's a very good shooter."

As North Quincy tumbled in the second half, Falmouth took advantage and converted turnovers into easy fast-break points. Darragh McCann (20 points) powered the comeback that saw Falmouth trim the lead to 8 with just under two minutes remaining.

"In the second half we stopped making our swing passes and pushing the ball in the lane," Stevenson said. "They made some adjustments and we didn't adjust to them. They were giving us the ball and our kids weren't looking middle. We tried to swing it cross court and they intercepted a few of them."

"I think they thought this club would just pack it in," Stevenson said. "I know just from their coaches that they won't. We got a little lazy and we stopped doing things and we made a lot of terrible passes. They had a lot of easy layups because of it."

If it weren't for senior tri-captain Brandon Sleeth, the Red Raiders just might have suffered a heartbreaker. The sweet-shooting guard scored 13 of his team-high 18 points in the second half when his team needed it most.

"I tried to stress to the kids at half time that the game wasn't over, and I think some of them thought it was," Stevenson said. "Hopefully, we'll learn from this. But the main thing is it's a W."

Derek Whitman finished first in the 55 meter hurdles against Falmouth, Plymouth South and Taunton, while placing second against Silver Lake. In the high jump, Whitman grabbed the top spot against Falmouth, Plymouth South and Taunton and second against Silver Lake.

Kyle Piazza has dominated the shot-put, earning first-place finishes against all four teams while taking second at the Winter Festival. Brian Breslin came in first in the two-mile against Taunton and Plymouth South and second against Falmouth and Silver Lake. He finished fourth at the Winter Festival.

Peter Chan, who runs the 55-meter dash, placed first against Taunton, second against Falmouth and Plymouth South and third against Silver Lake. Running with Chan is Keith Doherty, who placed third against Plymouth South, Falmouth and Taunton.

Steve Barkowski placed second in the mile against Silver Lake and Taunton. In the 1,000-meter run he finished second against Falmouth and Plymouth South.

Frank Alibrandi, another miler, took third against Plymouth South and Taunton. In the 300 meters, senior Sean Cote finished second against Plymouth South. Paul Griffith, a newcomer to the 600 meters, placed second against Silver Lake and third against Taunton.

Junior John Fidalgo took first place in the 1,000 meters against Falmouth, Plymouth South and Taunton and third against Silver Lake. Jeff Hunt, also a junior, finished second in the long jump and first and third in the 300 meters. Sophomore Gary Dalton took first against

Quincy Squirt B's Capture K Of C Tournament

The Quincy Squirt B hockey team recently held on for a 3-2 victory over Norwood 1 to capture the 2001 K of C Tournament championship.

Trailing 1-0 after the first period, Glen Misho scored a natural hat trick in the middle frame to hand Quincy a 3-1 lead. Misho earned tournament MVP honors.

In the third, Quincy killed four penalties, including a two-man advantage. Goalie Ryan Murphy made terrific save after save and was named the game's MVP.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 9-2 win over Dorchester followed by a 13-0 shutout of Duxbury and a 6-2 win over the Seahawks to earn a playoff spot. In the semis, Quincy routed Norwood II, 8-3.

The championship run was a true team effort. Kyle Craig scored 6 goals and killed penalties; Sean Dunn hustled and tallied 7 goals; Tom Conley contributed with a couple of goals even with the flu; Erik Johnson had 6 assists and a game-winner; Matt Flaherty played strong two-way hockey; Chris Devlin had great puck control; Scott Richardson provided scoring and backchecking; and Billy Kiley had 5 goals and 4 assists as he played defense and offense.

The win, however, was due to the consistent play of the defense, which controlled both ends of the ice while adding 6 goals and 13 assists. The defenseman were Michael Grant, Michael LeBel, Scott Vallatini, Matt Clifford, Brian McLean, Patrick Morrissey and Billy Kiley.

K Of C Free Throw Contest

The Knights of Columbus Free Throw Contest for boys and girls, ages 10-14, will be held Saturday from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Atlantic Middle School, Hollis Ave., North Quincy.

Winners will advance to the regional finals to be held at a later date. Prizes will be awarded to the top shooter in each of the 10 separate age/sex categories.

Germain Brothers -- Dave & Matt Have Quincy Hockey Clicking

By CHRIS POISSON

It's a Monday night at Quincy Youth Arena, and Quincy's Red Line, the top minor league hockey team, is clicking together on the ice. Senior Chris Germain (center) flanked by Dave Germain (left) and Billy McKeon (right), but these two winners are playing like oil and water.

"There has to be chemistry to have a real good line," emphasizes head coach Bob Sylvia. "Chemistry is a big thing. I sense that McKeon might fit better on a different line so I decided to make a change."

Meanwhile, skating on the blue line, the second line, is Dave's younger brother, Matt, who is only a freshman. The brothers had approached Sylvia in the past about pairing up on the same line, but the coach of 35 years had concerns — not about them playing well together, but that he would be sending Matt out in the jungle too soon.

"If you take a young kid that hasn't been in the program and put him out there too quickly, sometimes that can be counterproductive," Sylvia says. "In my heart I wanted to because I knew they would be good together, but you don't want to move a freshman because you're afraid of a kid getting a fat head."

When the buzzer echoes throughout the rink at the end of the frame, Quincy has only Germain's break away goal lighting up the scoreboard. The problem, however, is that on this night Quincy is playing Rockland, a weaker team that it should flatten and scrape off the ice. So one goal isn't cutting it.

On the Red Line's first shift of the second period, McKeon, an 19-goal scorer from a year ago, makes an unexpected move that hits the team like an earthquake, shaking up the team's foundation and altering the course of the season.

"We get control of the puck," Sylvia recalls, "and it goes back into our zone and he pass comes up to Germain. He starts breaking down the left side and Billy gets to the middle and Germain doesn't even see him. Billy, rather than stopping and waiting for the pass, cuts right back to the bench and says, 'I can't skate with him.' There was my chance. Rather than panic I said, 'Matthew get out there.' And he rests as they say is history."

Paying Dividends

Some may think McKeon's move was selfish, but Sylvia believes he did it for the betterment of the team. McKeon recognized the lack of cohesiveness with Dave and just made a quick, impulsive move.

"The outside may say, 'Well, geez, he's bigger than me,'" Sylvia says. "No, I don't think Billy was saying he was bigger than the team. All he was saying was that it's not going to work."

It proved to be the right move. Less than a minute on the ice together, the Germain brothers hooked up for the first time in their high school careers when Matt rifled a pass from Matt into the back of the net for his hat trick and a 3-0 lead.

"As soon as I sent Matthew out there he must have thought he died and went to heaven," Sylvia says. "There he was with his brother."

"It felt good," Matt says. "It was nice that coach put us together and that we capitalized on the opportunity. I didn't know it was coming and then I just went out there and made the best of the opportunity."

"I was happy when they got to play together," says their father, John. "I get to take breaks between shifts now. No, I'm kidding. It's nice to watch them play together. I think it makes them play harder."

"We've been playing together for a few years now and we've been doing good together," Dave says. "Sowe asked and we finally got a chance."

And the Germans are making the best of this chance. Since their partnership, Quincy has reeled off four straight wins, outscoring its opponents 21-5, to improve to 4-1.

Dave (8 goals, 3 assists, 11 points) and Matt (4-6-10) have put up Lemieux-like numbers, averaging 2 points per game. They have that natural instinctiveness between them and it has been paying dividends.

"That's the reason we play together," Dave says. "It's easier to get into a rhythm. We know where each is going to go so it's easier to set up plays. It's very fluent."

"You get used to what the other one is usually going to do at certain times and that helps you to get more scoring chances," Matt says. "We're always talking on the ice..."

"Yeah, I'm always screaming at him," Dave interrupts playfully, sounding like the big brother.

Currently, there are no immediate plans to split up these two. Who in their right mind would want to tinker with this lineup?

"Why tamper with success," Sylvia says.

The Right Choice

About a year ago around this time, Matt had to decide where he was going to play high school hockey as a freshman. While most eighth-graders may be a bit apprehensive about the upcoming high school scene, Matt has this additional burden strapped on his back.

Private school or public school? He could go to B.C.

High, Archbishop Williams or Catholic Memorial — schools that serve as a launching pad to the collegiate level — or Quincy High School with his older brother.

"I applied to a couple of schools and got in, but I wasn't sure where I was going," Matt says.

But then came the talk with his brother and Dave, acting as a recruiter, said all the right things. Matt's decision came quickly and it was the right choice.

"He basically told me the good things about it, and I felt it was a good school so I came to Quincy High," Matt says. "He said it had a good hockey team and a good program. So he influenced me in which way to go."

"Had told him to go where ever he wanted to go," says his father, John. "He said he wanted to go to Quincy High with his brother. There was never any question after that."

There's no doubt that Matt looks up to his big brother. He has followed Dave from street hockey to Butler Pond to Mites to summer leagues — and now to Quincy High.

"They used to share the same skates," John recalls. "When David went out there [Butler Pond] the first time to get some extra ice and came off, Matt put his skates on and took the old milk crate and went out there."

Matt admires his brother's dedication and devotion to the sport and feels a little of that passion has rubbed off on him. "It's probably how hard he tries," he says. "When he tries hard it makes me try harder. It just gets me to play better."

And it works vice versa as well. There's no way Dave is going to allow his little brother to get the better of him. "You know, it's the old 'I'm-not-going-to-let-my-younger-brother-play-better-than-me deal,'" John says. "Dave knows if he takes a moment off, Matt is right behind him."

"He's almost as good as me," Dave says lightheartedly. "I wasn't as good as him when I was his age. He's already there. He's really good."

"Matthew hasn't even begun to tap his ability," Sylvia says. "He is going to get nothing but better, better and better. By the end of the year, this kid is going to come into his own."

"This is a kid, quite frankly, who could've gone to CM, but he elected to come to Quincy High School," he adds. "He basically wanted to be with his brother. There's something special to be skating with your brother, especially when you're a freshman."

Sylvia even added that he

For Mike Morrissey, Andrew Donovan blasted four goals and had an assist. Evan Harrington, Frank Sorrento and Kevin Nee each tallied a goal and an assist. Joe Bailey picked up two assists.

Joe Canavan pocketed two goals and collected an assist in Colonial Federal Saving Bank's 6-3 win over Bernie's General Store. Rob DeAngelis (assist), Joe Fitzpatrick (assist), Tom Henry and Chris Rooney also found the back of the net. Joe Garland notched two assists and Kristen Garber and Kevin Bossart had one apiece.

For Bernie's General Store, Steve Bythrow potted two goals and Dave Tapper had one. Matt Lawlor had an assist.

Wood Commercial Painting knocked off Westminster Dodge, 6-2, as Eric Moreschi and Joe Ferris each scored a pair of goals. Matt Tobin (2 assists) and Tim Lally (assist) added goals. Alex Smith had two assists and Mike Moran and Andrew Cardarelli each had one.

For Westminster Dodge, Mike Gillespie and Joe Carita each had a goal and an assist. Chris Garvey and Ted Finnegan had assists.

Three Coaching Positions Open

Quincy Public Schools announces that there are three coaching positions open for the spring season.

They are: Quincy-North Quincy sailing head coach, $2,135 salary; North Quincy boys' volleyball head coach, $3,485 salary; and North Quincy boys' volleyball assistant coach, $2,035 salary.

All applications are due in the North Quincy High School athletic office by Feb. 16 by 4 p.m. Applications are available at the athletic office.

All coaching appointments in Quincy Public Schools are for one season only.

hopes Matt's decision to join the Presidents will influence other local kids to follow his path.

"I'm hoping other kids are going to look at Matt Germain and say, 'Geez, if he can do well at Quincy High School, why can't we,'" Sylvia says. "So these kids that could be thinking of going to private school are going to take a second look and say, 'Hey, if I go up there and become a good student and do well, I can get into the same school as the kid from CM can.'"

Workaholics

There's a 300-pound bench press club at Quincy High School and as of right now, there's only one kid that's a part of it. Dave and Matt also want to be members. If you take one look at them, though, you'd think they couldn't even bench their own weight.

"They want to be in the 300-pound club by the time they get out of school and they'll probably make it the way they work," says Jeff Hynes, volunteer assistant coach and physical education teacher at the school.

Hynes serves as the strength and conditioning coach and the Germaines, along with Sylvia, believe he has been instrumental to careers. He is the one who dragged them upstairs to the weight room at Quincy Youth Arena to improve their strength.

"We owe a lot to Jeff Hynes because he brought us up to the weight room and helped us out a lot in strength," Dave says. "And he got us into the program. He's almost recruiting for Quincy High."

"He runs the program every single day for any of the kids that want to go up there and lift," Sylvia says. "And these kids bought in. Take a look at their size; they're not big kids. Dave Germain is a midget, but what he's doing is utilizing everything that God gave him and that's why you see him handling himself out there. He bought into the weightlifting program, and I think Matt is buying in right along with it."

When it comes to working out, the Germaines are like robots. They're machines that have been programmed to a certain regimen and they haven't missed a day. If anything, they spend extra time in the weight room. They're always the last to leave. Sometimes after games they'll stay to work out, or they'll go home and rollerblade. They're Energizer Bunnies.

"Pretty much every day after school we go to the weight room," Matt says. "We stay up there for about two hours and work out and get bigger so we don't get pushed around out there. It gives us a little bit of an edge against other kids that don't work hard and go to the weight room."

"They're getting the most of out their body," Hynes says. "They lift faithfully. They wanted to lift Christmas Day; they are that faithful. They lift all the time. They put the time in and that is why it is happening for them. Great work ethic. They get their work ethic from their parents."

"I'm lazy," John says jokingly. "No, they like to go out and play. They just like the game. They work hard and they play hard."

And their work ethic spills into the classroom as well. Both are top-notch students that take as much pride in their academics as they do with their athletics — and because of this Sylvia believes they'll be rewarded in the future.

"These are kids, mark my words, that are going to end up playing college hockey," Sylvia says. "They're going to get a ton of money. Not just because they're good athletes, but because they're good students. Believe me, it's going to pay off for them."

Still Waiting

It's now late in the second period and Rockland has scored two goals to cut the deficit to 4-2. With 50 seconds remaining, Germain strikes again for his fourth goal of the night and Quincy adds another score in the third to avoid humiliation and pick up its first win of the season.

You might think the Rockland game is the shining moment of their young hockey careers, but the Germaines say it's just one of many special moments they've shared.

"We've had a lot of good moments together," Dave says.

"We hope to go far in the tournament this year..." he adds, and then pauses for a second as if visions of postseason glory flash before him. "...and maybe we can make that our moment."

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Avoiding The Spills And Chills Of Winter Exercise

People who exercise regularly should take extra care when exercising outdoors during the winter months, warns Dr. O'Connor, M.D., Vice Chair of the Committee on School Health and Sports Medicine at the Massachusetts Medical Society and team physician for intercollegiate varsity athletics at Amherst College.

For those getting back into a sport like skiing or skating after a long period of inactivity, Dr. O'Connor has several suggestions.

- Learn your sport. Enrolling in a course sponsored by a sporting goods store or a continuing education program may prevent injury caused by lack of familiarity with equipment.

- Ease into your chosen activity. Walking up and down stairs several times a day, at home or work, and trying "mall walking" are excellent ways to begin conditioning muscles that you haven't worked recently.

Even those who have been exercising for some time should take precautions with their winter workouts, according to Dr. O'Connor.

- Check with your physician. This is extremely important for people over 40, especially men, who face an increased risk of heart attack if they are unaccustomed to strenuous workouts.

"Winter weather demands a different approach to preparing for outdoor exercise," she says. "A jogger, for instance, will create his or her own wind chill that can damage exposed skin, so dressing and equipping yourself properly takes on added importance in cold weather."

To protect yourself against the elements, Dr. O'Connor suggests the following:

- Dress in multiple layers.
- Wear clothing made of materials that will wick moisture away from your body.
- Keep your feet dry. Use waterproof footwear to prevent injury from cold.

vent injury from cold.

- Preserve your body heat by wearing warm headgear. Most of your body heat is lost through your head.

- Use reflective attire that drivers can easily spot.

- Keep an eye out for black ice.

- Consider shortening your outdoor exercise routine.

- Use common sense. "If it's too cold to leave your dog out," says Dr. O'Connor, "it's probably too cold to be exercising outdoors."

My Patients Speak For Themselves...

"I hesitated to have surgery for intense pain in my elbow, instead I had six acupuncture treatments with Dan Karp. The pain is totally gone and I play tennis regularly. No surgery and total relief."

the second annual "Take A Walk For Prostate Cancer" will take place Sunday, Jan. 21 at 9 a.m.

Donations earned through the four-mile walk, which will begin at the George F. Bryan VFW Post, 24 Broad St., Quincy, will benefit the American Cancer Society and its research and education about prostate cancer.

Prostate cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death in men. In 2000, there were an estimated 180,400 new cases nationwide, including 4,200 in Massachusetts. An estimated 700 men in Massachusetts lost their lives from prostate cancer in the year 2000.

Hank Bradley of Quincy is the co-chair of this year's event.

"Last year, we had 21 participants and were able to raise almost $7,000 for ACS," Bradley said. "Hopefully, this year even more people will realize that although prostate cancer strikes only men, it has an effect on everyone else in the family."

Walkers can pick up donation sign-up sheets at the Quincy Veterans' Services located at 24 High School Ave. behind the Quincy Fire Headquarters or by calling co-chairmen Hank Bradley, Fran McMorrow or Tom Stansbury at (617) 376-1194.

Funds raised should be turned in the day of the walk. Checks should be made payable to the American Cancer Society. Or contributions can be sent to: Cancer Walk, c/o Veterans' Services, 24 High School Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Should I keep my batteries in the refrigerator?

Absolutely not! Today's hearing aid batteries are made with zinc. They have a good shelf life, but if put in the refrigerator, they will accumulate moisture and cause corrosion in your hearing aid. When zinc air batteries are fresh they have a guaranteed shelf life of one year. Buy them fresh! When they are on sale at pharmacies or discount stores, it may be because they are an older batch. It is much easier to monitor their freshness in a Hearing Instrument Specialist's office where we do not sell many other products. A fresh battery will give you consistent life. An old battery might go dead at any time. You may save a couple of dollars but you'll save more dollars by doing business with your specialist. Customers that buy batteries from me on a regular basis get more "freebies" when they come in for service. It's my way of thanking them for being dedicated customers. Keep your batteries in a dry cool place, like a desk drawer, and order a 4-6 month supply at a time.

Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Perhaps it would be wise if everyone of us examined our basic philosophy of life once in a while and asked ourselves how sound it is. If it is based on self or selfishness, it is unsound. If it is based on good will, helpfulness, kindness, right living and good works, it is sound.

Legend says that on one occasion, General Robert L. Lee came suddenly upon one of his young officers gazing at himself in the mirror with obvious pleasure and admiration. "You must be the happiest man in the world," said Lee. "Why do you say that, Sir?" asked the soldier. "Because you are in love with yourself and have no rival in your affection," replied Lee.

We do not know if this story is true, but it reflects a truth. The surest way to lose the love of others is to devote all our love to ourselves. And the more intense our self-affection becomes, the surer we can be that no one else will share it. But fortunately for humanity, the reverse process is equally true. If selfish affection for others inevitably draws affection in return. The man who can forget himself in his interest in the welfare of others is safe in forgetting himself. For others will not forget him. Love for others is the key to human happiness and that is within the reach of all. It does not depend upon riches, nor education, nor power, nor social position. It relies within the grasp of anyone who, in the midst of others, will hold out to them the hand of love and fellowship.

Your Social SecurityEmployers Urged To Double-Check Wage Reports*By LAURIE ZASTROW

Social Security urges employers to file error-free wage reports. The wage reports filed by employers in January (and February, or through March for electronic filers) reflect the amount of wages paid to employees and the taxes withheld for Social Security, federal, state and Medicare during the previous year. Accordingly, Social Security receives 240 million wage reports a year.

Small employers are more likely to have errors in their wage reports. Large employers are required to make wage reports by magnetic media or electronic filing, but businesses with fewer than 250 wage reports have the option of filing by either magnetic media or paper, a more error-prone process.

Errors in filing these reports can be costly, both to workers who rely on the earnings information for accurate retirement, survivors, disability, and Medicare hospital insurance benefits, and for employers. Correct reporting saves time and money for the employer and for the government.

Beginning Jan. 2, 2001, employers may be able to use Social Security's Employer Service On line, a secure, interactive suite of Internet services, to file tax year 2000 wage reports with Social Security.

Social Security investigates over 200,000 wage-reporting errors annually. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) can assess penalties for the employer if discrepancies in wage reports are not corrected. Correct reporting insures that employees have the proper wage amounts credited to their Social Security records. These amounts are used to calculate the Social Security benefits payable to the worker and to his or her family if the worker dies, becomes disabled, or retires and determine the worker's eligibility for Medicare coverage. Employers should use the W-2 form for the proper year. For example, a W-2 form for 1999 cannot be used to report 2000 wages.

Be sure to file Copy A of the W-2 form with Social Security. When a copy other than "A" is filed, it is more costly to process and may result in errors.

Frequent errors also include a misplaced digit in the Social Security number, failure to reflect a name change in the newly married or divorced and incorrect or misspelled names, particularly in the case of Hispanic and Asian surnames.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

begins to pay off, as others see not only what you do but how well you do it. Personal situations also take a more positive turn.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's a good time to expand your focus from the familiar, but narrow, viewpoint that you've relied on for so long. You might be surprised at what you find.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A workplace situation suddenly puts you at a disadvantage, but you have truth on your side. Don't fear to use it to set things straight.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A family matter taxes your strong sense of justice. However, you need to withhold making a judgment until you're sure you have all the facts.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You need to start gathering information now for those plans you have regarding a major move in early spring.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although you are usually receptive to change, this time it might be wiser to delay your move until you know more about it. A friend offers information.

Board To 'Redouble' Efforts To Resolve Salvage Firm Complaints

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Although it was stated at Tuesday's License Board meeting that Ernie's Salvage in South Quincy was making a "good faith attempt" in complying with a court order, he was told bluntly by Asst. City Solicitor James Timmons and the board to "remove the antique car immediately."

The car has allegedly been parked on the premises for several years.

Among the stipulations listed in the court order was that Ernest Bettuchy, owner of the salvage company at 22 Isabella St., was to stop deliveries at the site and make sure the truck was parked all the way into the garage during deliveries. Also that there would be no storage of cars outside the premises.

Tuesday's meeting was a continuation from Nov. 14 when complaints against the Salvage company surfaced.

Timmons said Bettuchy was making an attempt to comply with the court order in good faith.

A frustrated abutter,

Catherine Hall showed a sizable number of colored pictures to the board to prove what she has been complaining about for more than 10 years. Delivery truck outside the garage, continued noise and a "tarp hanging over the truck" to prevent her from taking pictures.

She said she has to be in back of trees to take any pictures.

In viewing the photos, acting Police Chief Terrence Kelly questioned Bettuchy as to why the tarp was put on.

He said he was merely trying to cover the truck in compliance with the neighbors complains.

Hall said she feared what would happen in the spring when the good weather arrives. She said "how long is this going to go on?" She added that she has complained for more than 10 years to various city department heads.

Timmons told the board that the neighbors said there was "speratic violations" to some of the conditions.

Bettuchy said he received an antique plate after he was told it would be legal. However, Timmons said it was a violation of a court order that stipulated no storage of cars.

Bettuchy said, "If I can't make a living in this city, they should give me some sort of a break." Why is one person on the street trying to put me out of business?

Another abutter Hall's mother-in-law Jean Hall, echoed Catherine's complaints but admitted, the "noise level was better. She said when Bettuchy applied for a license it was for a storage building and not a junk yard."

Bettuchy took offense to her description that it was a "junk yard" but said it was a "recycle center."

Although Bettuchy said he was only at his place of business four hours a day, from about 7 a.m. to 11 a.m. sometimes 12 noon, both Catherine and Jean Hall said he was there "much longer".

Board Chairman Joseph Shea said it didn't matter how long they were there, whether four or 10 hours, but if they live within the constraints of the court order, the amount of time didn't make any difference.

Shea said Bruce Knapp of the building department, was scheduled to give a report at Tuesday's meeting, but was unable to so.

Shea called the complaints against the salvage yard an "old chestnut with a life of its own."

David Riley, an employee of Bettuchy said the nose of the truck is the only thing sticking out of the garage. He said the reason for this was that the price of junk is so low that it's impossible to sell it right now without a loss. He said when the price goes up, and some of the junk removed, then the truck can fit all the way into the garage.

Shea said in an effort to bring some resolution to the case, that efforts would be "re-doubled."

He said he would request reports from White and Knapp concerning Ernie's.

GETTING INTO ALIGNMENT

Essentially, wheel alignment concern Don't neglect your car's is the proper adjustment of the wheels. On most vehicles, there are three adjustment settings: toe (the amount the fronts of the wheels are closer than the rears), camber (the inward or outward tilt of the wheel at the top), and caster (the angle at which the front axes are attached to the vehicle). On some vehicles, only one or two of these settings are adjustable. For many years, only the front wheels of most U.S.-built cars had any adjustments. With the introduction of four-wheel independent suspension, many vehicles now have adjustments on the rear wheels as well. For these vehicles, proper alignment of the rear wheels is as important as it is for the front wheels.

Your safety and comfort is our concern. Don't neglect your car's wheel alignment, whether it is owned or leased. LEO & WALT'S SUNCOCO invites your inquiries about most anything connected to the care of your car. Our ASE Certified technicians are highly skilled so they can do everything necessary to keep your car in excellent and safe running condition. We're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. Suncoco and most major credit cards honored. We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: Incorrect toe and camber settings will cause tires to wear out prematurely, while an incorrect caster setting will cause the vehicle to wander and make it feel unstable at high speeds.

Sheets To Attend Mayors' Conference, Bush Inaugural

Mayor James Sheets and wife Joann will travel to Washington, D.C., and attend Saturday's inauguration of George W. Bush as the 43rd president of the United States.

Sheets was scheduled to leave Wednesday for the nation's capital in order to attend the annual winter meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, which is scheduled to dovetail into Saturday's inauguration and subsequent festivities.

Sheets is scheduled to return to Quincy Sunday morning.

Sheets, who serves on the Education Committee of the U.S. Mayor's Conference, said he will focus on conference business as well as schedule appointments with Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and Congressman William Delahunt.

But Sheets, who has attended both inaugurations for President William Clinton as well as the inauguration of George Bush, Sr., said he will still have time to attend a reception in honor of newly appointed Chief of Staff Andrew Card, a longtime friend of Sheets who once served with him in the State Legislature.

The mayor will also visit Ron Kaufman, a former student and campaign manager of Sheets who is currently helping with the transition of the new Bush administration.

Kaufman served as deputy secretary for Political Affairs during the presidency of George Bush, Sr.

Shea To Present Re-Districting Update To Council Feb. 5

City Clerk Joseph Shea will update the City Council on the timetable for redrawing the city's ward and precinct lines at the council's Feb. 5 meeting.

"I do not think there will be any significant changes," said Shea, who said the re-districting, which is mandated every 10 years, begins at the local level and works its way up.

New districting, Shea said, is based on the latest Federal Census, which was taken last year but whose figures have not yet been sent by the office of Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin.

Shea said he expected the figures soon and would be able to update the council fully by Feb. 5.

After processing the data and re-districting the wards accordingly, Shea said the city must submit their results to a committee appointed by the governor by June of this year.

Re-aligned wards will affect elections for state representative in 2002 but will not affect city elections until 2003.

Shea's report was prompted by a resolve requesting such an update authored by Councillor-at-large Frank McCauley.

Bennett Hopes Local Bidders Will Bring Some Back

First Parish Silver Goes On Auction Friday

By TOM HENSHAW

A bit of Quincy's heritage goes on the auction block Friday when United First Parish Church puts up for sale 11 pieces of 300-year-old silver in a last ditch effort to preserve the historic church building itself.

But the Rev. Sheldon Bennett still sees some hope of saving for Quincy at least some of the pieces, which represent the earliest examples of silversmithing in colonial America in the 17th and 18 centuries.

"I would be delighted if someone with a concern for Quincy history participate in the auction," he said. "The items are being offered singly and a number of pieces are not among the most expensive."

"The John Quincy tankard, for instance, has historical value yet is not the most expensive item. A bidder could focus on it and be successful."

Bidding on the tankard, crafted by silversmith Daniel Henchman in the mid-18th century and donated to the church in 1767, begins at $30,000 but the auction house, Sotheby's of New York, expects bids of about $50,000.

If the bids fail to top $30,000, the tankard will be withdrawn from sale.

Bennett said he has received some inquiries from potential bidders but only one of them was what he described as "concrete."

That was an anonymous source, acting through Peter Boylston Adams, seventh generation descendant of President John Adams, who offered to buy the entire 11-

JOYNNA YORKE CUP, donated to the church in 1685 by Joanna and James Yorke, two of the earliest members of what was then called the "Braintree Church" in 1635 is expected to bring a top price of $350,000 at auction.

QUINCY TANKARD, donated to United First Parish Church by John Quincy in 1767 for which bidding will start at $30,000. Pastor Sheldon Bennett hopes that a local bidder with historical concerns will be able to retrieve it from auction Friday.

MLK Breakfast Keynote: 'Don't Freeze Frame, Make His Dream A Reality'

By CRAIG SALTERS

"Did you know that the dedication of the Lincoln Memorial had ropes segregating whites and blacks?" asked Judge Charles Walker to well over 350 guests at the annual Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Celebration Breakfast held Monday at the VFW Bryan Post.

Walker, an administrative judge with the Commonwealth's Department of Industrial Accidents and a former commissioner and chairman of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD), the state's chief civil rights enforcement agency, was the featured speaker at the breakfast and used both humor and personal anecdotes to urge listeners not to "freeze-frame" Martin Luther King Jr. and his message but to make King's dream a reality.

"We're not here to talk about a dream," Walker told the audience, which included, among others, Congressman William Delahunt, State Rep. Bruce Avers, Council President Al Harold, and Ward 3 Councilor Patrick McDermott as well as representatives of the city's religious and non-profit organizations and Community Police officers. "We're here to rededicate ourselves to the realization of that dream, every bit of it."

Walker, son of a Tuskegee Airman, remarked that, as optimistic as King's 1963 "I have a dream" speech was, it must also have incorporated the more troubling aspects of the nation: the assassination of Civil Rights leader Medgar Evers, the bombing of churches and homes, and the attacking of the 1960's Freedom Buses.

It also included, Walker said, the segregation of the Armed Forces during World War II which led to groups such as the Tuskegee Army and forced black servicemen to earn a college degree while whites were allowed entrance without a high school diploma.

Walker stilled the crowd by recounting a conversation with his father -- who passed away recently but had retired a colonel and was the first black to command an Air Force base -- in which his father admitted enduring the pettiness and injustice of segregation because "I wanted to know how to fly and I wasn't going to let anyone get in my way."

Walker praised that attitude as "the substance of what Dr. King's dream was made of."

Mayor James Sheets welcomed guests to the breakfast, which has been sponsored by the Quincy Human Rights Commission since the early 1990's, and emphasized that it was the humanity of King which really made him "one of the outstanding leaders of 20th century America."

Dr. King, Sheets said, rose from poverty and had very close bonds to his family, his church, and his God but "put them all aside to pay the ultimate price for his country."

DA Keating quoted passages from the slain Civil Rights leader while urging audience members to become "personally involved" in the pursuit of justice and not simply show "compassion by proxy."

In recognition of such compassion, the Human Rights Commission presented awards to four individuals at the breakfast for service to the community.

Commission members David Ezickson and Dr. Joseph McDermott presented the awards, which were given to Dr. Allan Osborne, principal of Snug Harbor Elementary School; Shawn Sheehan, executive director of Faxon House Detox; and Mary and Laura Bloomer, sisters and Broad Meadows students who, under the guidance of teacher Ronald Adams and Principal Anne Marie Zukauskas, led the school's "Operation Day's Work" program which benefited the nation of Nepal.

Donna Johnson, co-secretary of the commission, said she was pleased with the breakfast, especially Walker's remarks. "He really focused on the true message of Martin Luther King," Johnson said.

In agreement was Lily Tam, a junior from North Quincy High School who was one of 25 North Quincy students volunteering to help with the breakfast.

"He (Walker) explained a little from his own everyday life and I could relate to that," said Tam, a member of the school's Alliance Against Racism.

In addition to the Alliance Against Racism, whose advisor is NOHS teacher and commission member Maria D'Arcangelo, volunteer efforts were also provided by Spectrum, a diversity group and gay-straight alliance advised by NOHS guidance counselor and commission member Peggy Farren.

DR. JOSEPH McDERMOTT (left), a member of the Quincy Human Rights Commission, presents Dr. Allan Osborne, principal of Snug Harbor Elementary School, with a certificate of appreciation at Monday's MLK Breakfast. Dr. Osborne, who has worked 16 years at the school, thanked the commission and praised the community of Germantown for its support.

Commission Chairman Nancy MacDonald recently underwent surgery at Quincy Medical Center and was unable to attend the breakfast.

In addition to MacDonald, Johnson, Ezickson, Dr. McDermott, D'Arcangelo, and Farren, commission members include: the Rev. Esther Bowen, George Clark, Guy DeGrazia, OPD Det. Donald Greenwood, Mark Leighton, OPD Lt. Michael Miller, William Murphy, Zaida Shaw, Sandra Pimentel, and Yi Zou.

Commission consultants are Jonathan Yip and Edward Grogan.

Commission members are appointed by the mayor to "actively promote greater understanding and tolerance in our community and to ensure that responses to acts of exclusion, bias, and discrimination are taken seriously."

The public is invited to attend and participate in the Human Rights Commission meetings which are held on the last Tuesday of the month at 5:30 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

Dr. King, who was assassinated April 4, 1968 in Memphis, TN, would have been 72 years of age Monday.

Rejected QHS Site Raymondi Optimistic On Re-Zoning Quincy Ave. Land To Open Space

Going into Tuesday night's meeting of the City Council, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said that he was "cautiously optimistic" he had the six votes necessary to re-zone as Open Space the land off Quincy Avenue, formerly the proposed site for the new Quincy High School, as well as additional parcels surrounding the site.

However, Raymondi noted, if an objection were to be raised by one of the owners of the parcels -- most notably owners of the so-called "Hazelton Property" -- then the number of votes needed to re-zone increases to seven and matters become less certain.

"I am cautiously optimistic I would have the support of the council," said Raymondi of the re-zoning ordinance, which was scheduled for a 6:45 p.m. public hearing prior to the regularly scheduled council meeting.

The council is allowed to vote on the matter following the public hearing because the Planning Board has already addressed the matter, voting 5-0 on Jan. 10 to give the re-zoning an unfavorable recommendation.

Although Raymondi would not disclose the names of the five other councillors said to be in his camp, he did say that he had spoken to each and received a commitment. "They're confirmed," Raymondi said.

The area affected by the proposed re-zoning would be the Falls Blvd. and Circuit Rd. community, specifically four parcels which are primarily zoned P.U.D. (Planned Unit Development): 14.12 acre Plot 21 formerly owned by CJ Partnership and currently owned by the city, the recently rejected site of the new Quincy High School; 1.28 acre Plot 56 formerly owned by Bates Realty Trust and currently owned by the city; 6.83 acre Plot 32 currently owned by Hazelton Corporation; and 6.29 acre Plot 34, currently owned by Hazelton Corporation.

Together, Raymondi said, the parcels represent 28.52 acres of potential open space and a "unique opportunity for the city."

"The main reason to do this is because it's the right thing to do," said Raymondi, who emphasized the parcels about Faxon Park and could eventually become an addition to it. "The residents of this community have experienced a tremendous amount of construction over the past decade."

Raymondi added that the timing was perfect for such a re-zoning, arguing that the recent state approval of the local room occupancy tax provided the funding source, the mayor's Project Prosper initiative to aggressively purchase open space provided the motive, and the School Committee's recent position that all Quincy sites -- including such areas as Faxon Park itself -- were potential sites for the new Quincy High School provided proof that open space was a precious commodity in the city.

In addition, Raymondi said that that re-zoning of the roughly 30 acres was "consistent" with the goals set forth in the city's Open Space Plan, providing a letter written Jan. 8 by Open Space Committee Chairman Thomas Koch to Planning Board Chairman James Kelley as evidence.

The Koch letter states:

"In each of these plans (1989, 1995, and 2000) the City's 'Action Plan' identifies 'lands around Faxon Park' as targets for acquisition. Although it does not identify specific parcels around Faxon Park, I believe that the preservation of the 'former proposed high school site' off Quincy Avenue would be consistent with the goals set forth in the Open Space Plan.

"The plan states that any opportunity to acquire or rezone lands adjacent to existing parks or open space should also be investigated.

The rezoning of this particular to Open Space would be consistent with the goals of the City's Open Space Plan."

Mayor James Sheets stated earlier last month that the top priority for the parcel of land off Quincy Avenue was to clean it of its hazardous materials, the primary cause of dissatisfaction with the site for the new high school. After remediation, Sheets said, he would "seriously consider" partial or total sale of the property and use proceeds to fund the high school project.

A resolve authored by Councillor Frank McCauley specifically requesting that the city sell the former school site and earmark proceeds for use in construction of the new high school was defeated last month by the council.

In that vote, Council President Paul Harold sided with McCauley and Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott in supporting the resolution.

Raymondi voted in opposition, as did Councillors Timothy Cahill, Michael D'Amico, Stephen Durkin, Gregory Hanley, and Joseph Newton.

"I will not support the re-zoning," McCauley said at the Dec. 18 meeting. "The land should be put back on the tax rolls."

A BEECH TREE which had stood for more than 100 years at the Colonial Federal Savings Bank in Wollaston was taken down Monday after falling bark and a subsequent inspection by arborists showed the tree was dying. Bank officials will plant a new tree in the same spot later this summer. (Quincy Sun photo: Irish Bossart)

Colonial Federal Says Good-Bye To 100-Year Old Beech Tree

Sadly, Colonial Federal Savings Bank said "good-bye" Monday to a massive beech tree that had graced the front of the bank's main office for over 100 years.

"It was about six months ago that we noticed bark falling from the tree," Colonial Federal Savings Bank President and CEO Robert Guarnieri said. "We brought in arborists and tree experts but, unfortunately, the tree was dying and there was no way to save it."

"It was a great old tree and were extremely saddened to lose it. Our only consolation is knowing that no one was hurt by falling branches. And -- because we are 100 percent committed to keeping Quincy green -- we will be planting a healthy new tree on the same spot later this summer."

With full-service offices in Quincy, East Weymouth, and Holbrook, Colonial Federal has been the South Shore's "neighborhood bank" since 1889.

Hard To Believe Park Land Considered For New QHS

Editor, The Quincy Sun
I find it hard to believe that anyone would even consider placing a new school at Merrymount Park or Farson Park. Every week there is a news story about the importance of preserving open space in this city and now that is where we are looking at building a high school, major parking lots, and all that comes with this? Give me a break!

You cannot tell me that Quincy High School, new or otherwise, does not belong in close proximity to its current location. With a new library to serve our students, Quincy has a unique opportunity to create an educational corridor down Coddington

Street to include the Thomas Cane Public Library, Quincy College, Quincy High School, and Central Middle School. Each institution could benefit from the resources that the others have to offer.

Let's look at the positive aspects of our institutions, staff and students. I think there is a great chance to capitalize on our schools, their staffs, and their resources. To assume that schools are bastions of negative influence to younger people is great disservice to the quality of the staffs and students at these schools.

• On Jan. 15, 1870, the first recorded use of a donkey to represent the Democratic Party appears in "Harper's Weekly." The cartoon is titled "A Live Jackass Kicking a Dead Lion." The jackass (donkey) is tagged "Copperhead Papers," referring to the Democrat-dominated newspapers of the South, and the dead lion represents the late Edwin McMasters Stanton, President Lincoln's secretary of war.

• On Jan. 19, 1915, during World War I, Britain suffers its first casualties from an air attack when two German Zeppelins drop bombs on Great Yarmouth and King's Lynn on the eastern coast of England, killing two Britons and injuring three.

• On Jan. 16, 1919, the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, prohibiting the "manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes," achieves the necessary two-thirds majority of state ratification and thus becomes the law of the land.

• On Jan. 21, 1924, Vladimir Lenin, the architect of the Bolshevik Revolution and the first leader of the Soviet Union, dies of a brain hemorrhage at the age of 54. His body is embalmed and placed in a mausoleum near the Moscow Kremlin, and Petrograd is renamed Leningrad in his honor.

• On Jan. 17, 1977, Gary Gilmore, convicted in the double murder of an elderly couple, was shot to death by a firing squad in Utah, becoming the first person to be executed in the United States since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976.

• On Jan. 20, 1981, the 52 U.S. captives held at the U.S. embassy in Teheran, Iran, are released, ending the 444-day Iran Hostage Crisis.

• On Jan. 18, 1990, Washington, D.C., mayor Marion Barry is arrested and charged with drug possession and the use of crack cocaine. After serving his sentence, Barry re-enters D.C. politics and is elected to the city council and once again in the mayoral election in 1994. In January 1999, Barry returns.

Harold: Will He Or Won't He?

You might say the big local political question right now is:

Will Paul Harold run again?

Harold, who last November was elected Norfolk County Register of Deeds, has this year left on his current City Council term.

And there is a line of potential candidates forming in the wings waiting for the answer to the will-he-or-won't-he question.

A vacant council at-large seat would put some zip into Election Year 2001. And probably open up at least one ward seat. Maybe two.

The only thing apparently certain is that Harold will finish out his term.

But, he has given no indication yet on whether he will seek another term.

"It's too early," he says. "I'm just getting my feet wet as Register of Deeds."

Translation: He apparently wants to see if there is any problem carrying out the duties of two jobs -- register and city councillor.

Tim Cahill has had no problem doing that as councillor and Norfolk County treasurer.

Harold assures that he will make his decision known soon enough so candidates can make their plans for this year's election.

If he should decide not to run again, the vacant seat would be a lure for a number of candidates including probably, a ward councillor or two.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico is among those interested. Possibly Ward 2's Dan Raymondi.

Others being mentioned as potential candidates:

Former Councillors Michael Cheney and Peter

Kolson;

Joseph Finn, who made a strong showing in his political debut in 1999;

Rosemary

Wahlberg,

former executive director of the

Quincy Community

Action Program

who has become a regular attendee

at the council meetings and almost ran in 1999;

and Brian

McNamee, former Ward 6 council candidate. McNamee is now the treasurer of the South Essex Sewerage

District regional wastewater treatment authority but still a Quincy resident.

Others

may be interested.

But definitely not interested is

Ward 3 Councillor Pat McDermott who is now Harold's executive assistant at the Registry of Deeds.

McDermott is content to hold onto his Ward 3 seat and will seek re-election this year.

But looking to the future add him to those who would like to be the next mayor when incumbent Jim Sheets decides to call it a career. He's very interested in that. Never a dull moment in politics.

JERRY RYAN, former president of Quincy College and his wife, Gail, miss Quincy but are quite happy in Somerville, N.J., where he is now president of Raritan Valley Community College.

They keep tabs on Quincy through a mail subscription to The Sun.

Ryan sends along a note:

"Gail and I very much enjoyed your 2000 retrospective in The Sun. We continue to keep in touch with the many friends we have from our four years in Quincy. We miss the city and its people.

"Speaking of the people, I would like to nominate Tom Galvin for your Citizen of the Year Award.

"I was so impressed by his service to so many organizations. It he hasn't been recognized in the past, he deserves it.

"Our life here is going very well. The college is a terrific place with a wonderful board."

And, he muses: "The Chief Financial Officer even reports to me!"

HIS HONOR Jim Sheets received a special award from pre-schoolers at the Beechwood Community Life Center.

The four and five year-olds remembered visiting his office recently and asking him what his favorite candy was. "Jelly beans," he replied.

So when he was at Beechwood the other day to speak at a Seniors Breakfast, the youngsters who heard he was coming presented him with a large jar of jelly beans.

They called them "energy beans for energy, because you have such a hard job."

Making the presentation were Darby Thomas, Cole O'Brien, Jamine Solis and Robbie Dyer.

Darby, who has a little girl crush on His Honor gave him a big hug. Sheets bent down and kissed her on the cheek.

And for the rest of the day, Darby was proudly telling everyone she saw that "Mayor Sheets gave me a kiss right here," pointing to her cheek.

Applauds Inclusionary Zoning

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I am writing to applaud Councillor Greg Hanley and his recently proposed Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance.

While there are probably amendments that may be made in his "working document," it is certainly a great step forward in ameliorating Quincy's affordable housing crisis. As has been highlighted in the press over the last few years, housing costs and rents are skyrocketing. Many families can no longer afford to live in their home town.

I urge the rest of the City Council and the mayor to act as quickly as possible on Councillor Hanley's proposal. It was a wonderful Christmas present to all of us concerned about affordable housing.

Former Crewman Defends USS Salem

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
My name is William Anderson and I am a former Crewman of the USS Salem. I served on board the Salem during the Korean War 1948-1952.

For the last four years, I have been a tour guide on weekends giving tours to visitors to the USS Salem. My expertise was Radar Data Collection and Dissemination in the Combat Information Center. I currently hold hands-on demonstrations in C.I.C. for Boy Scouts during their Overnight Program. The Boy Scouts get a big thrill out of seeing a real-live Radar and Plotting Course and Speed of Targets. The parents especially enjoy the interchange of information about life on such a magnificent ship as the USS Salem. It's hard for them to believe that everything on the ship works. She is in excellent shape, hardly an old "rust bucket."

My weekday activity involves teaching Physical Science on board the ship to Quincy Public School students. This ship is a virtual classroom of applications of Physics and it is such an eye opener to a 60-pound student to be able to lift up 200-pound projectiles with the help of a pulley. These types of hands-on demonstrations are not possible in the average classroom but are such a cinch on board the USS Salem. It should be noted here that the USS Salem is now an integral part of the Quincy Public Schools Education Program and not just a ship tied up in the Fore River Shipyard.

during classes on board the USS Salem is to remind the students that this ship was built in Quincy, by Quincy residents, probably their grandfather or grandmother, and stands as a testimonial to the expertise and talent of Quincy labor! My hope is that this ship will have a long life in Quincy and serve as an educational experience to all who come to visit her. I look forward to seeing you on board the USS Salem in the near future.

Sees Dereliction Of Duty Over USS Cole

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Some months back the USS Cole was badly damaged by terrorists in Yemen while being refueled. I wrote an article about this and no one bothered to reply so I am again writing to determine why the Captain of this guided missile destroyer was not court-martialed nor was Admiral Vern Clark asked to retire involuntarily.

Don't forget 17 sailors were killed and it appears this entire matter is being swept under the rug just like the 232 marines who were killed in Lebanon with no military personnel on guard to protect them.

No one was court-martialed for this dereliction of duty.

What bothers me is that no Navy personnel has complained to their Congressmen or Senators.

Possible Nuclear Power Plant In Squantum

By PAUL HAROLD

Quincy Atty. George Flavin, a member of the National Association of Railroad and Utility Commissioners, said that Squantum could be the site for a nuclear generating plant.

"There is a strong indication that Boston Edison, which owns the tract of land in Squantum, contemplates the construction of a nuclear plant at the site when the production of the source has been perfected," he said.

Boston Edison purchased the land years ago. It was the site of the old Victory Plant and later the Naval Reserve Air base. It was purchased for the expressed purpose of building a multi-million dollar generating plant. Since its purchase there have been no definite plans for its use. Part of it was used by the Boston Harbor Marina.

LAW WOULD CREATE RAILROAD SHRINE

Legislation filed by Rep. Joseph Arlick would provide for a "railroad shrine" at the site of the first commercial railroad in the U.S. in West Quincy.

Under the plan, the MDC would acquire the incline where granite was transported from the Bunker Hill Quarry to the Neponset River to Charlestown for the construction of the Bunker Hill Monument.

Among those supporting Brett's plan was Charles Eliot II, grandson of the president of Harvard who was president of the original Bunker Hill Monument Association which built the monument in 1825.

HERBERT SEEKS NEW DPW GARAGE

DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert called for the replacement of the 29 year-old Sea St. garage, built as a WPA project, because of safety concerns.

The reinforced concrete floor in one section had fractured to the point that building inspector Arlick Weidman rated it as dangerous. He noted that the weight of some of the snow removal equipment stored there, when loaded with snow, exceeded 22 tons. Adding to the dangerous situation was the paint shop located under the garage where six men were assigned.

For the ninth time, the city council waived the mandatory retirement law to re-appoint 80 year-old Tupper Smith as foreman in the sewer department. He reached retirement age in 1954, but because his pension was only $8.87 a week, he asked to continue work. Councillor David McIntosh, who made the motion, said that despite his age Smith had the strength to work more vigorously than a younger man. Joseph B. Grossman was presented an appreciation citation from the Marine Corps recruiting station for making the Art Theater available to them. . . Costanzo Pagnano was nominated to another five year term on the Quincy Housing Authority. He was president of the International Granite Cutters' Union. . . A "Haggis" was flown in from Scotland for the Burns night celebration sponsored by the Mr. and Mrs. Club at the First Presbyterian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jack of Taber St. were co-chairmen. . . The licensing board granted the Bowladrome on Quincy Shore Blvd. a license for five pocket billiard tables. . . The Theodore Roosevelt Lodge met at the Masonic Temple for the Master Mason Degree. . . Police speculated that the thieves who stole $325 from Fratus Motors in North Quincy were the same group that stole $900 from Old Colony Laundry. . . The city council voted to widen Whitwell St. from 40 to 50 feet from the city hospital to Adams St. The cost of land-taking was estimated at $2,100. . . A son was born at Quincy City Hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Koch of Newbury Ave. . . Weddings by Mabelle opened on Hancock St., operated by Mabelle Fogg. . . Asian Lunar New Year Celebration Jan. 20 At NQHS

Entertainment begins at 4 p.m. with a traditional Dragon Dance to welcome the lunar New Year. Entertainment will include dance and cultural presentations from different regions of China as well as Vietnam, the Philippines, Laos, and other regions of Asia.

A supper of Asian cuisine follows the entertainment.

Tickets are $10 for and adults and $5 for seniors and children. Tickets will be available at the door. However, to avoid disappointment in case the event is once again sold out, patrons are advised to purchase tickets in advance.

Tickets are available from Arthur Keogh, executive director of the CIR, at (617) 376-1322, from Wollaston Lutheran Church at (617) 773-5482, or from the Wollaston Senior Center at (617) 471-9354.

The Asian Lunar New Year festival dates back to ancient agricultural societies which were governed by planting and harvest times. During the winter there was respite from the usual work and farmers could relax and enjoy themselves before the busy planting season.

Reidy Family Strolls For 'Meals On Wheels'

Quincy resident Eleanor Reidy and her family were among the more than 400 walkers who recently raised more than $19,000 for "Stroll the Mall for Meals on Wheels" at the South Shore Plaza, Braintree.

Reidy serves on the board of directors for South Shore Elder Services, Inc. (SSES), which conducted the 11th annual walk.

During the walk children made Thanksgiving cards for homebound elders. All youth were given special T-shirts, featuring the walk's mascot, a dinosaur wearing hiking boots and a backpack. And there was a steady stream lined up to have Petunia the Clown make balloons for them.

Children of all ages entered the contest to name the dinosaur. In keeping with the Meals on Wheels theme, the walk committee selected "Sir Lunch-a-Lot" as the official name for the mascot. The mascot, Roger Connor of Milton, president of the board of directors of SSES, strolled the mall with the walkers.

"We were thrilled with the support for the walk," said Edward J. Flynn, Jr., executive director. "In addition to raising more money than last year, we were successful in creating a fun, family event. Eleanor's family was among many families which had three generations participating."

Since 1977, SSES has worked to promote and maintain an optimal level of elder independence through coordination of resources, advocacy and caregiver support.

SSES is a non-profit Aging Services Access Point designated by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs to coordinate services for elders in Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Services include but are not limited to: homemaking, personal care assistance, Meals on Wheels, money management, caregiver support programs, the Senior Pharmacy Program, housing programs, protective services and the Elder-at-Risk program.

Encore Performance For Raffael's Dinner Theater

By CRAIG SALTERS

How far does one have to go to find a dinner theater, a fine dining establishment, and professional entertainment?

How about putting it all in New Bedford?

Like Quincy, but in the Raffael Restaurant and JM Productions, partnered for the first time last year to provide a dinner theater season combining the best of the area's talent and theater scene with the top notch dining experience Raffael's has offered now for more than a decade.

And, as they say in show biz, it's a hit.

"It's been a real success," said Elio Ricci, co-owner of Raffael's with his wife Dee. "We had 3,500 people in the first six months and that says a lot."

Quincy native John McDonald, executive producer of JM Productions, agreed. "We were tremendously pleased with the response," McDonald said. "Over 800 patrons attended the Christmas show alone."

But, as Dinner Theater at Raffael's kicks off its second season in February with Broadway In Love, McDonald, a graduate of North Quincy High with decades of experience in the performing arts, said he wasn't surprised with the dinner theater's success.

"It's obvious to me that people on the South Shore have a need for this type of

Sun Spotlight

"all inclusive" entertainment," said McDonald, who noted the show's success with seniors and organizations looking for a fun evening out. "It's really one stop shopping. People get free parking, an elegant restaurant, and the chance to see a show, and it's all in the same place. It just works for them."

And patrons of the dinner theater, Ricci said, can expect the same quality of service they've come to expect from Raffael's over the years, including generous portions and personal attention. Ricci added that he takes personal pride when audience members tell him "We'll be back" after a show.

"Elio knows the restaurant business and I know the entertainment business, so there's an equal amount of focus on both," said McDonald, who added that both he and Ricci take a "hands-on" approach to their areas of expertise.

For his part, McDonald meets guests personally as they enter and exit the show, thanking them and asking for ways to make every show better than the next. In fact, McDonald credited input from a customer questionnaire as to why the new season would present its six shows every other month rather than monthly.

"The shows are more spread out now because we felt our patrons liked to take a little break," he said.

And doors open at 6:30 p.m., with the show starting promptly at 7 p.m., in recognition of patrons' busy schedules. "This way, they can have a good meal, see a show, and still be fresh for work the next morning," McDonald said.

Broadway In Love, which opens the season Feb. 2, 7, and 8, arrives just in time for Valentines and boasts a dozen love songs from Broadway musicals such as Les Miserables, Phantom of the Opera, and Beauty and the Beast.

The songs, said McDonald, weave a storyline chronicling the various stages of romance and feature the husband and wife team of William and Brenda McColgan.

One show McDonald is particularly excited about is October's Ain't Misbehavin', featuring the music of Fats Waller, "the soul of Harlem swing in the 1930's."

"I have never seen a South Shore theatrical organization attempt to stage a musical such as Ain't Misbehavin'," McDonald said. "It's a show where everyone will recognize the songs ('This Joint is Jumpin', 'I Can't Give You Anything But Love') but it's a show which just isn't done."

other bold move by the dinner theater as it presents selections from one of the 60's most timeless and prolific songwriters and performers, whose songwriting resume includes such classics as "I Feel The Earth Move," "You Make Me Feel Like a Natural Woman," and "You've Got A Friend."

"Some people think of musical theater and just think Broadway," McDonald said, "but we wanted to give a more contemporary flair to the season."

The 2001 season of Dinner Theater at Raffael's includes: Broadway In Love, Feb. 2, 7, and 8 with a matinee performance also scheduled for Feb. 2; Gotta Get Gershwin, April; Tapestry: A Tribute to Carole King, June; The Taffeta's (the female version of the 50's musical Forever Plaid), August; Ain't Misbehavin', October; and What Christmas Means to Me, December.

Ticket prices for all evening performances are $45 per person and matinee tickets are $35 per person. Patrons will find free parking at the complex and a ticket price which includes performance, dinner, tax, and gratuity.

The menu includes a garden salad; choice of chicken, beef, or fish dinner; a vegetable medley, potato, and dessert along with coffee or tea and a cash bar.

Group ticket sales are available at reduced rates by calling JM Productions at (617) 786-SHOW.

For credit card reservations, contact Raffael's directly during normal business hours at (617) 328-1600.

Raffael's is open for dinner Tuesday through Sunday and for lunch Tuesday through Friday and features a Sunday brunch from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Raffael's is located in the 7th floor of the Solomon Willard Building at Enterprise Drive in North Quincy's State Street Complex.

Walk For Prostate Cancer Research Sunday

In an effort to raise funds for prostate cancer research, the second annual "Take A Walk For Prostate Cancer" will take place Sunday, Jan. 21 at 9 a.m.

Donations earned through the four-mile walk, which will begin at the George F. Bryan VFW Post, 24 Broad St., Quincy, will benefit the American Cancer Society and its research and education about prostate cancer.

Prostate cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death in men. In 2000, there were an estimated 180,400 new cases nationwide, including 4,200 in Massachusetts. An estimated 700 in Massachusetts lost lives from prostate cancer in the year 2000.

Hank Bradley of Quincy is the co-chair of this year's event.

"Last year, we had 21 participants and were able to raise almost $7,000 for ACS," Bradley said. "Hopefully, this year even more people will realize that although prostate cancer strikes only men, it has an effect on everyone else in the family."

Walkers can pick up donation sign-up sheets at the Quincy Veterans' Services located at 24 High School Ave. behind the Quincy Fire Headquarters or by calling co-chairmen Hank Bradley, Fran McMorrow or Tom Stansbury at (617) 376-1194.

Funds raised should be turned in the day of the walk. Checks should be made payable to the American Cancer Society. Or contributions can be sent to: Cancer Walk, c/o Veterans' Services, 24 High School Ave., Quincy, MA 02169.

Bar Association Offering Free Evening Legal Clinics

The Bar Association of Norfolk County will hold free evening legal clinics as a public service one Wednesday a month from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Quincy and Dedham District Courts.

A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for one on one consultations to discuss legal questions. All consultations are confidential.

Dates for the clinics in Quincy will be Feb. 7, April 4, May 2, July 11 and Aug. 1; in Dedham they are March 7, June 6 and Aug. 8. No appointment is necessary.

For further information, contact Executive Director Adrienne C. Clarke of the Bar Association at 471-9693.

Planning Meeting For LaBrecque Park Jan. 23

The Quincy Park and Recreation Department will hold a planning meeting for LaBrecque Park Tuesday, Jan. 23 at 7 p.m. at its office, One Merrymount Way.

A master plan will be presented by director Tom Koch. The community will then be asked for their input and ideas.

All members of Houghs Neck HOPE (Help Our Playground Evolve) and other interested parties are urged to attend.

Houghs Neck HOPE will hold a meeting and recruitment session immediately following the Park Department meeting.

TIPS ABOUT CUSTOMS
Shopping is a popular activity for many people traveling abroad. Don't forget, though, about getting through customs when returning to the United States. Penalties for misrepresenting your foreign purchases include confiscation of the goods, fines and even imprisonment. While restrictions and fees vary according to the country you have visited, know that you must declare to a customs official the goods you have acquired while traveling. An oral declaration is fine for small purchases, but you must complete a form for more than a liter of alcohol, 200 cigarettes, 100 cigars, or total purchases that exceed your personal exemption - usually $400. Families can pool their exemptions, so a husband and wife can exempt $800 worth of goods.
Whether you're an experienced traveler who breezes through customs or looking forward to your first travel adventure, PRIME TRAVELER is committed to turning you into a confident, seasoned traveler. And although we are fully automated, we are not computer dependent. We understand the importance of the personal touch. Come experience our dedication to service excellence for business travel, a long-awaited vacation, or a relaxing weekend getaway. We're located at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay, PH: 617-472-3697.
P.S. In general, you will be charged a duty of 10% of the total value of all items exceeding your personal exemption.

Bernazzani Honors Fallon Ambulance, Clark Chiropractic

The Charles Bernazzani Elementary School recently held ceremonies to honor Clark Chiropractic and Fallon Ambulance Services for their longstanding educational partnerships with the school.

In addition, a new state-of-the-art Electronic Bookshelf made possible by Fallon Ambulance was dedicated in memory of Paul Fallon, the ambulance company's former vice-president of Operations who died tragically in a 1999 car accident at the age of 34.

Both companies, said Bernazzani Principal Richard Hutchison, received plaques in recognition of their partnering relationships, which began in 1997. "They are our oldest and most active partners," Hutchison said.

Diane Fallon, widow of Paul Fallon, also received a Bernazzani Medallion in memory of her husband and in recognition of Fallon Ambulance's generosity.

Fallon Ambulance has been a very generous benefactor of this school," Hutchison said. "Their contribution, along with our other partners, enabled us to purchase an IMAC computer and the accompanying scholastic software program. Scholastic Reading Counts, to create the Electronic Bookshelf.

"It seems fitting to honor his memory in this way," said Principal Richard Hutchison at the dedication ceremonies.

"Students can go online at the school library, access a number of children's literature books, and have the opportunity to immediately test their knowledge and comprehension. It's a great teaching device and we're very pleased to have the assistance from Fallon Ambulance."

"We think it's very appropriate to dedicate this new educational tool in memory of Paul Fallon," continued Hutchison. "We know that he was very pro-education and was involved in community projects, and it seems fitting to honor his memory in this way."

Peter Racicot, vice president of Business Development at Fallon Ambulance, and Paul Fallon's brother, said, "It's very touching for us to know that Paul will be a part of something as important as this new program at the Bernazzani School. We are grateful to Rick Hutchison and the Bernazzani School for honoring our brother in this way."

Fallon Ambulance and Clark Chiropractic have been involved in working with the Bernazzani School since 1997, when they joined the Quincy School-Community Partnership.

Fallon Ambulance Service was founded in 1936 by James R. Fallon, Sr., and remains a family operated business to this day.

Impact Quincy Targets Underage Drinking In City Media Campaign

Impact Quincy (IQ) is stepping up its ongoing media campaign in the city dedicated to reducing underage drinking among teens.

"The concept behind our overall campaign is 'the loving arms of the community' with the four building blocks being teachers, police, family, and the youth itself," said Lilly Michnik, program director for Impact Quincy. "These four structures form the net in which teenagers can land if something goes wrong."

Billboard campaigns highlighting the role of youth and police in curbing underage drinking have appeared across the city, Michnik said, with billboards honoring the role of teachers out Jan. 22 and of the Quincy family Feb. 19.

In addition, IQ has produced parent-oriented educational materials printed bi-monthly in both local newspapers -- such as "Tips For Parents" or "Parents, Do

You Know That ..." -- and has developed overhead posters with the "Think Again!" theme for buses frequented by middle and high school teens.

Other projects include the creation of 30-second TV spots which are broadcast on Cable TV between teens' favorite programming. The "Think Again!" commercials were repeated roughly 250 times during one month alone.

"We're trying to think of as many venues as possible to get our message across," said Michnik, who added one goal of the campaign was to combat the seductive sales techniques used in the advertising of alcohol.

The first IQ billboard, titled "Think All Quincy Kids Drink? Think Again!" from the ongoing series of the same name, was initiated by IQ with the help of AK Media last July.

Since then, the same billboard has been mounted three times and has received positive feedback from the community. It can presently be seen at the corner of Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery, near the Roche Bros. Supermarket.

A second billboard was mounted in December at four locations in Quincy. It was dedicated to the role of the Quincy Police Department in the lives of the city's teenagers, especially the QPD's efforts in IQ's fight for the reduction of underage drinking.

Billboards were located at: the intersection of Hancock and Elm Sts.; the intersection of Hancock St. and Revere Rd.; the intersection of Willard and Crescent Sts.; and the intersection of East Howard St. and Des Moines Rd.

Impact Quincy seeks local input concerning its campaign to curb underage drinking. Residents with suggestions or questions should contact: Lilly Michnik, IQ Program Director, 15 Cottage Ave., Quincy 02169, (617) 472-6027.

IMPACT QUINCY's second billboard in its media campaign against underage drinking honors the Quincy Police Department and the QPD's role in keeping kids safe. The billboards are displayed in four locations across the city, this one at Washington St. and Sumner St.

THE MAJORITY of Quincy kids do not drink, reminds a billboard sponsored by Impact Quincy in its efforts to stop underage drinking in the city. This particular billboard, the first of which was installed in July, can currently be seen at the intersection of Quincy Ave. and Southern Artery.

McCauley Seeks MCAS Update

Councillor Frank McCauley submitted a resolution at Tuesday night's meeting of the City Council requesting that Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon, or his representative, appear before the council's Education Committee and report on the results of the MCAS tests.

McCauley said his purpose was to have the five-member committee review recent scores and trends concerning the statewide tests with the superintendent and keep informed on the matter.

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin serves as chairman of the Education Committee.

The Class of 2003, currently in Grade 10, will be the first class whose members must score passing grades on the MCAS tests in order to receive their diplomas.

piece set and whisk it from under the auctioneer's gavel. The offer had to be turned down.

"It would have cost too much to cancel the sale," said Bennett. "We have a contract with Sotheby's that carries huge penalties for not going through with it. They have gone to the expense of advertising, printing the catalogue, hiring the world-renowned experts to research and write about the silver being offered."

"It is always possible to renegotiate a contract but we chose not to do it for ethical, economic and legal reasons."

Bennett said the church could also have sold the silver quietly to private collectors.

"We chose not to do that," he said. "We didn't want people to come back and say that they would have purchased it if they had known about the sale. This way everyone has a chance."

Sotheby's expects the auction of the church silver to bring in between $900,000 (the starting bids) and $1.3 million (a more realistic expectation), which the church will use to repay a loan taken to do emergency repair work on the roof, now almost completed.

"We won't know exactly how much until noon Friday," said Bennett, who will attend the auction with a few church leaders. "If there is a surplus after the debts are paid, we plan to set up a fund to assure the future of the building."

The cups, beakers and tankards have no religious significance but were household items donated to the church, usually by childless couples as a way of being remembered when their family lines died out.

The church was founded in 1639 and the building, fourth in the line, was built in 1828 on land donated by John Adams. He and his president son, John Quincy Adams and their wives are buried there. It is on the National Register of Historic Places.

Badly needed repair work started on the church structure in January 1999 with a $235,000 grant from the Massachusetts Historical Commission and a $1.7 million loan from the church's endowment with the silver pledged as the collateral.

"We had no choice but to go ahead with the work," said Bennett. "The roof was in such bad shape that a heavy snow storm would have brought the whole thing down. We've spent most of the $1.7 million."

"Most of the work has been completed. We've rebuilt the roof structure with 16 new steel trusses. We have replaced the slate roof. We are restoring the ceiling. Now we have to repay the loan."

The most expensive item in the auction is the so-called Joanna Yorke Cup, which was donated to what was then known as the "Braintree church," in 1685. Bidding on the cup starts at $250,000 and is expected to reach $350,000. The value of the two handled, gourd-shaped cup is enhanced by the fact that it carries the initials of both Robert Sanderson Sr. and his son, Robert Sanderson Jr., two of the most prominent Colonial silversmiths. Only six objects with the marks of the two Sandersons are known to have survived.

Other items in the auction, with date of gift, starting bid and expected price) include:

Richard and Alice Brackett Cup (circa 1660) $200,000 & $300,000

William Needham Cup (circa 1660) $200,000 & $300,000

Tufts Cup (circa 1690) $30,000 & $50,000

Bass-Veasey-Rugge-Whalesby Cup (1694) $10,000 & $20,000

Hon. Edmund Quincy Cup (1699) $80,000 & $120,000

Norton-Quincy-Tufts Tankard (circa 1720) $40,000 & $60,000

Edmund Quincy III Beaker (1738) $30,000 & $50,000

Mehetabel Fisher Beaker (1741) $20,000 & $30,000

Sarah Adams Tankard (circa 1760) $20,000 & $30,000

The silver rarely saw the light of day while in church custody. It was kept in a bank vault and used once a year at the church.

"It was too valuable to use," Kevin Tierney, a silver specialist at Sotheby's told the New York Times. "They couldn't even insure it."

IRS Expands E-Filing, Offers Free Taxpayer Help

From a new paperless E-filing option to expanded customer service features, taxpayers will find more and easier ways to get help from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) during this year's tax filing season.

More than 40 million tax packages have started arriving in mailboxes across the nation.

The tax packages and forms reflect the small number of tax law changes for 2000. But the IRS has made a number of improvements aimed at making this tax season smoother for people filing an estimated 130 million individual returns this year.

"The IRS has streamlined several important areas to reduce paperwork and cut red tape," IRS Area Director Steven Daiga said. "We are determined to improve service and take as much of the headache out of tax time as possible."

This year, the IRS will help taxpayers by:

• Expanding E-Filing: For the first time, millions of taxpayers can file taxes electronically without submitting any paperwork. This new version of paperless filing will be available to taxpayers who self-select a Personal Identification Number (PIN).

The self-select PIN -- along with adjusted gross income and tax amounts from last year's tax return -- will serve as an electronic signature for an E-filed tax return. With this option, a paper form for a signature will no longer be needed.

• Adding A New Checkbox Disclosure Authorization: A new feature on the tax forms will be a checkbox allowing easier communication between a person's tax preparer and the IRS.

Taxpayers may check this box to authorize the IRS to discuss processing problems over the phone directly with a person's paid preparer.

With more than half of tax returns coming from paid preparers, this change eliminates a barrier that slowed communication between taxpayers, practitioners, and the IRS. Because the IRS can talk directly to practitioners, the checkbox will reduce the number of IRS letters to taxpayers.

• Improving Telephone Service: The IRS is putting in place an improved call routing system that will lead to more efficiency and help more taxpayers get better telephone service. This is one of the highest priorities during the IRS reorganization and modernization effort. More work remains, but the IRS is taking steps forward to provide better telephone service.

"These changes add up to making things easier for taxpayers," Daiga said. "We still have more work to do, but we are making progress in our effort to provide world-class service."

With the help of new features such as the self-select PIN, E-filing will be easier than ever this year. The IRS has added 23 new forms this year that can be filed electronically, meaning almost all taxpayers can now use E-file.

More than 35 million returns were filed electronically last year and the IRS expects the number to top 42 million this year.

Taxpayers who E-file get their refunds in less than half the time of paper returns. When choosing direct deposit with E-file, taxpayers get refunds in an average of 14 days.

"The secret to getting the fastest refund is to file early, use E-file, and choose direct deposit," Daiga said. "More and more Americans are discovering that E-filing is fast, easy, and accurate."

E-filed returns are more accurate because math errors -- one of the most common tax return mistakes -- are caught automatically.

The result? Taxpayers who E-file are far less likely to get a letter from the IRS than those filing a paper return.

Throughout the 2001 filing season, the IRS will provide telephone help 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 1-800-829-1040. Several other toll-free services are available day or night, such as automated refund information and TeleTax's recorded information on common tax topics (1-800-829-4477) or requesting copies of forms and publications (1-800-TAX-FORM or 1-800-829-3676).

The IRS has also added more features and helpful information on its award-winning web site at www.irs.gov. People downloaded more than 150 million forms and publications in Fiscal 2000, helping make the site one of the most frequently visited on the Internet.

"Taxpayers can count on the IRS to get help around the clock, whether it's from the Internet or our toll-free services," Daiga said.

For those who prefer to visit an IRS office, walk-in service is available at more than 400 locations nationwide, including the Quincy office at 1250 Hancock St. Suite 503 S.

Filing season walk-in hours for the Quincy office are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. with the office closed for lunch from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m.

South Shore YMCA Helped Rehabilitation After 4 Brain Surgeries Randolph Man To Receive United Way 'Courage Award'

After four brain surgeries, a Randolph man credits the physical therapy he receives at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy with improving his physical and mental confidence.

For the last three years, the YMCA has supervised 42-year-old Bobby Ware's rehabilitation regimen, helping him regain some control over a leg and learn to walk again with the aid of a cane.

On Wednesday, Jan. 24, Ware will be recognized for his stamina and positive outlook with the United Way of Massachusetts Bay's "Courage Award" at its annual meeting at Boston's Park Plaza Hotel at 1 p.m.

The award honors individuals and groups who show exemplary spirit and strength, and how a United Way agency can make a difference.

"I would be less than who I am without the 'Y,'" Ware said.

Although his body doesn't work in the same ways it did before he was diagnosed with a baseball-size brain tumor, he says "this place has given me so much confidence. I had lost all my strength, both mental and physical, but this place helped me get it back."

In addition to the award presentation, the results of the 2000 fundraising campaign will be released. Funds raised during the campaign help support 200 human service agencies in 80 greater Boston communities.

For example, the South Shore YMCA in Quincy receives approximately $178,000 from the United Way of Massachusetts Bay. The organization serves people regardless of age, also families, and those suffering financial hardships. They also target individuals with disabilities through special programming.

Each year, about 200 volunteers help the United Way determine allocations to agencies. After review and evaluation of the agency requests, including a site visit, funds are awarded in June.

Daniel Flynn Wins National Association Awards Scholarship

Quincy resident Daniel S. Flynn, a senior at Merrimack College in North Andover, was recently selected as a recipient of the "Catch a Rising Star" scholarship by the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators (Region I).

The award is given annually to one student from each of the New England states.

Flynn was chosen to receive this award for his significant contributions to the campus and his interest in the field of Student Affairs, and because he demonstrated academic achievement and exceeded expectations in leadership positions. Flynn, a political science major, is currently Student Government President of Merrimack College's 2000 students.

Dan has been a tremendous asset to the college as we have addressed the various challenges and opportunities that have prevented themselves during the past few years," said Bruce Baker, Ph.D., vice president for Student Life at Merrimack College. "Whether addressing one fellow student leaders on issues of civility or working on our campus center project, Dan has always left the impression of a thoughtful, competent student leader.

"He has always been faithful to his responsibility to represent the student body, and has brought student issues and concerns to the attention of the faculty and administration in diplomatic fashion. Those of use in student affairs deeply appreciate his efforts and have enjoyed working with him."

At Merrimack, Flynn has been involved in many leadership roles throughout his college career. He has served as a resident assistant, orientation leader and student athlete. He has also worked as an intern in the Office of Student Life and is now researching graduate programs in higher education.

Dan is the son of Kevin Flynn and Diane Carlson, both of Quincy.

Sheriff's Office Names Falcone Communications Director

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti has named David Falcone as Director of Communications for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

Before joining the sheriff's office, Falcone served as deputy press secretary for Suffolk County District Attorney Ralph Martin and had worked as a reporter at The Attleboro Sun Chronicle and The Boston Herald.

"I'm pleased to bring David on board," Bellotti said. "His experience as a reporter and his ability to work with the press, as well as the spirit of cooperation he brings, will go a long way as we expand our community outreach and program initiatives."

Falcone, 32, will also be responsible for handling all press inquiries at the sheriff's office.

"This is an exciting and challenging opportunity," Falcone said. "I've been lucky to work for some outstanding people and organizations and I'm happy to be at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office."

A graduate of Catholic University in Washington, D.C., Falcone earned a master's degree in journalism at Northeastern University.

He lives in Canton with his wife, Lauren.

10 Residents Are Cadets Aboard Mass Maritime Sea Term Cruise

Ten Quincy residents joined fellow Massachusetts Maritime Academy cadets in leaving Saturday for the annual Sea Term Cruise.

Cadets include: Bryan Dunn, Coleman Nee, Daniel Mochen, Daniel Sault, Derrick Almond, Dominic Catrambone, Jason Lisowski, Jeremiah Mulcahy, Johanna Anshewitz, and Philip Miceli.

This year, cadets will be at sea for 50 days and visit Curacao; Limon, Costa Rica; St. John's, US Virgin Islands; and New Orleans.

The Sea Term is a critical component of a cadet's academic life at the Academy. During the month-and-a-half at sea, each cadet undergoes rigorous training in several different academic disciplines including: marine engineering, marine transportation, marine safety, and environmental engineering.

Massachusetts Maritime Academy is a four-year state college of Marine Science and Engineering and is located on Cape Cod.

Roche Bros. Program Benefits NQHS Students

Volunteers from the NQHS Senior Stay-Out 2001 Committee will collect cash register receipts at the Quincy Roche Bros. store Thursday, Jan. 25 between the hours of 5 and 8 p.m.

If unable to purchase groceries at that time, shoppers may purchase certificates during these hours at the Quincy store. Gift certificate purchases will be credited to the NQHS Senior Stay-Out.

Roche Bros. is providing this program to promote substance-free parties for high school seniors. The supermarket chain will donate five percent of the total cash register receipts collected on a specified day and time to support after-prom parties.

Legal Assistance Provided To Elderly Each Wednesday

Attorney Betsy Crimmins of Greater Boston Elderly Legal Services will be available to dispense free legal services on the first Wednesday of every month.

Priorities include representing tenants, residents of nursing home, wards who seek to oppose their guardianships and people with problems relating to Social Security, Medicare, Mass Health and other government programs.

BEHIND THE WHEEL

While car buyers may put a great deal of effort into checking price and safety features, they can learn a lot about a vehicle simply by putting themselves in the driver's seat and getting a feel for it. They should begin by confirming that all the sight lines behind the wheel are clear. That is, they can see over the hood and to the end of the trunk. Headrests should be supportive and not restrict vision. Prospective car owners should check to see that they can easily get in and out of the vehicle and that they can reach pedals and dashboard controls comfortably. Finally, a vehicle should fulfill the purposes for which it is intended.

For most of your car's maintenance needs, including it's cooling system, rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. 'Big Win' For North Quincy Girls Over Barnstable

By CHRIS POISSON

About four minutes into last Friday night's game, Barnstable's Kiley Stewart sank a three-ball from the top of the key to give her team its first lead of the game at 9-6.

At the time, who knew that it would also be the last.

In a weekend with the NFL's AFC and NFC Championship games, the North Quincy girls' basketball team previewed a Ravens-esque defense and a Giants-like offense over the next eight minutes, separating itself from the Red Raiders of the Cape with a mind-boggling 26-4 outburst en route to a 69-58 victory at home.

Only three days removed from a tough loss to top dog Bridgewater-Raynham, the win moves North Quincy (5-2, 3-1) into second place, while Barnstable (6-4, 3-2) slides to third in the Old Colony League.

"It's a big win," said head coach Doug MacFarlane after the game. "Barnstable was 3-1 in the league and the only team they lost to was Bridgewater-Raynham, who we lost a tough game to the other night. It's a good win and I'm real pleased with the way we're playing."

North Quincy will need to keep up this pace as it has approached the most difficult portion of its schedule. Over the next two weeks, which began Tuesday against Plymouth South, North Quincy plays five games all on the road. Today (Thursday) it faces Abington in a non-league match and Saturday afternoon (3:30 p.m.) it goes head-to-head with Quincy.

In last Tuesday's 51-42 setback at Bridgewater-Raynham, the Red Raiders, who were missing starter Jen Conley (sick), went to the wire with the league's powerhouse but were unable to catch the Trojans, snapping a four-game win streak.

"For not playing well, I thought we did a good job of staying with Bridgewater-Raynham because they're the best team in the league," MacFarlane said. "We didn't step it up real big against Bridgewater, which we needed to do with Jen out, but we stepped it up [Friday night]."

Indeed, particularly in the first half when sophomore Kristen DiMatio came off the bench to tally an unexpected 13 big ones. The first-year center resided in the paint as if she had shelled out her first and last month rent. She scored on three layups, a post move, a short-jumper and hit 3 of 4 free throws.

"Kristen DiMatio was the difference in the first half," MacFarlane said. "We were up 15 and she had 13 points. To me that's the difference. I don't expect that from Kristen, being a sophomore and not playing varsity last year. She has done a nice job for us. I'm real pleased with the way she has played."

Barnstable played a 1-2-2 set defense and when senior point guard Casey Ridge (6 points, 10 assists) wasn't engineering the fast-break attack, the Red Raiders picked it apart with sophomore forward April Suprey manning the high post.

Suprey finished with 16 points, 9 rebounds and a couple of nice assists from the foul line, leading senior guard Kellee Conley and DiMatio for easy layups.

"When people play a 1-2-2 against us, which they were doing, we go into a 1-3-1 or 2-1-2 set," MacFarlane said. "We want to get the ball into April because she does a nice job of either dishing it off or shooting it. This is like the second or third game teams have tried to play that defense and we've done well."

"April Suprey had a great game," he added. "She's a girl that has just come along so well. She had a lot of talent as a freshman last year and she's doing exactly what I thought she'd be doing this year."

The Red Raiders had built a lead as high as 21 points, but Barnstable began to dig into the hole when it closed the half with a 10-4 run to make it 38-23.

"I told the girls at half-time, 'We're up 15, but the game is not over, and don't let down because this team won't back off at all,'" MacFarlane said. "They're tough kids. They scrap. They hustle. They're all over the place. They don't quit."

In the second half, Barnstable, led by sophomore sensation Amy Lyon, made its run as it cut the deficit to 8 points a couple of times. Lyon, who leads the league in scoring with 20.2 points per game, scored 13 of her game-high 19 points in the final frame.

With about six minutes left, Barnstable closed the gap to 8 points again after Lyon converted a turnover into a layup.

"I was worried," MacFarlane said. "I'm never satisfied. We could be up 18 and I wouldn't be satisfied. I don't believe you can ever count any team out in high school basketball."

North Quincy answered with three straight buckets for a 58-44 lead. Suprey canned a jumper from the high post, Conley drilled an outside shot and junior Lauren Sleeth (17 points) scored on an offensive putback.

"I thought Jen's basket in the second half, the one basket she scored, was big," MacFarlane said. "They had been making a run at us. It's nice to see her score. She has a nice outside shot. I didn't know what to expect from her because she had been out three days. She stepped it up big."

Quincy, North Boys' Basketball Renew Rivalry Saturday

By CHRIS POISSON

When the North Quincy boys' basketball team makes the short trip to Coddington Street Saturday to take on Quincy, both teams will put their seasons on hold as they rekindle another year of this heated rivalry.

In 2000, the Presidents got the best of their neighboring nemesis, sweeping the season series, 2-0. Quincy pulled out a 48-44 win on the road in the first meeting and then held on for a 49-47 home victory in the rematch.

If you can take anything from the series history, it's that the new millennium will most likely produce another round of close clashes.

"The last four or five years it has been the most entertaining game in town," said Quincy head coach John Franceschini. "I don't care what the records are; this game is purely a very emotional game. It's always a battle."

"It's going to be your typical war," said North Quincy head coach Ted Stevenson. "It's Quincy-North Quincy. It's going to be a good game. Those are the two games you circle on the schedule at the beginning of the season. Those are the fun games."

"Our kids want to get back on the winning side and beat them, and I do too," he added.

Before their games Tuesday night, both teams had a 4-4 overall record. Quincy held a 2-2 mark in the Old Colony League, while North Quincy checked in at 1-3. With the records and the similarity of their personnel, both coaches believe it's an even matchup.

"Neither of us possess a big center," Franceschini said. "We both have kids that work hard. Our styles are similar. We're upbeat, quick tempo teams. We try to get our offense off of our defense."

"It seems to be even," Stevenson said. "Neither one of us is big size-wise. Right down the line, I think it's going to make for a good match. Quincy's intensity has been very good. I think the team with the most intensity on that night will win it. It's at their gym so we're going to have to be ready."

Quincy is coming off a heart-breaking overtime loss last Friday night at Plymouth South in which Panther forward Greg Besegnar buried a baseline jumper at the buzzer for a 76-75 win.

The Presidents, which never trailed in overtime and had a five-point lead, were whistled for an inbounds violation that set up Plymouth South's last chance. Senior Mark Robertson and sophomore Kevin O'Connell each pumped in 20 points.

"I can only say that it was an unbelievable back-and-forth performance by both teams," Franceschini said. "To do what we did on their floor,

I couldn't be much prouder. The kids' attitudes have been great. Even with the loss, they proved that they can play with anybody. Hopefully, a couple of those bounces will go our way over the next 12 games."

After starting the season 0-2, Quincy won four of five before falling to a strong Plymouth South team (7-2, 3-2). In the preseason, Franceschini said if his team was at the 500 mark around this time, it had a great chance to make the state tournament.

"I still believe that," he said. "Basically we've gone through the league and we've been very respectful, whether we won or lost. We've been in every ball game. It's very realistic to say, if some thing fall our way, we can make it."

Meanwhile, North Quincy is fresh off a 55-39 win over Boston Latin Sunday, a game originally scheduled for Dec. 30 as part of its Christmas tournament. Junior John O'Connell scored a team high 14 points and senior Brandon Sleeth (11), junior Phil McGillicuddy (9) and senior Joe Holleran (7) also contributed.

It was an important win because it snapped a two-game losing skid. In those losses to Bridgewater-Raynham and Barnstable, the Red Raiders were plagued by horrid free-throw shooting and defensive lapses.

Quincy To Honor High Scorer Dan Kelly

When the Quincy boys' basketball team hosts rival North Quincy Saturday at 5 p.m., a brief ceremony will be held prior to the game for Dan Kelly, honoring him as the school's most prolific scorer in boys' basketball.

Quincy will unveil a banner with Kelly's name and point total printed on it. Kelly, who graduated last year, finished his career with 1,026 points.

Local Champs Crowned In In Elks Free Throw Contest

Six Quincy boys and girls were recently crowned city champions in the Elks National "Hoop Shoot" Free Throw Contest sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks and supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department.

They are: Matthew Goreham and Catherine O'Connell, 8-9 age group; Stephen Connolly and Aileen Croke, 10-11 age group; and Julianna Eagles and Terrance Sibley, 12-13 age group.

There are over three million boys and girls involved in the first level of "shoot outs," and more than 250 Quincy residents took part in the contest at local neighborhood gyms. The Recreation Department has been conducting the event for the Quincy Lodge for over 20 years.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said that he "continues to be grateful for the continued support of the Quincy Lodge of Elks. This program is a wonderful experience for the youngsters, ages 8-13. The Elks always have the interest of our youth as a primary goal of its organization. I particularly want to thank Exalted Ruler Terry Cullen and Hoop Shoot Chairman Ed Miller for their work on the Hoop Shoot."

The Elks presented trophies to Quincy's first three places in each age group. Each gym winner received a trophy and was eligible for the city championship. Miller, the athletic director at Quincy High School, made the trophy presentation to each youngster at the city championship.

Runners-up in each age group were Emily Boyd and Joe Edgerly (8-9), Elizabeth Block and Matt Jaehnig (10-11), and Tom Power and Fyfe O'Connell (12-13).

The third place trophies went to Mikayla Buttmore and Tim Stille (8-9), Sally Black and Danny Munkley (10-11) and Joe Carita and Kelly McNally (12-13).

Other center champions in the contest were: Bethany Mahar, Ashley Brancaccio, Alicia Rucker, girls 8-9; Matthew Gibson, Ryan O'Toole, Stephen Ritchie, Matt Blowers, Keith Gramer, Derek Andrews, Sean Peitner, Liam Cain, Cian O'Connor, boys 8-9; Mary Stille, Sarah Troy, Melody Sanchez, Rebecca Goreham, Sara McCoubrey, girls 10-11; Tom Conley, Mike Horgan,

North Blanks Plymouth South, Bows To Falmouth

By CHRIS POISSON

What was the North Quincy hockey team's reward for shutting out Plymouth South, 5-0, on the road last Friday night — its second straight win to get back to the .500 mark?

It had to face Old Colony League juggernaut Falmouth 24 hours later at Quincy Youth Arena.

"I was a little nervous about what type of team was going to show up [Saturday night]," said head coach Bob Doyle. "We've been kind of turning the program around a bit with two solid wins in the past week. I was wondering how much reserve was in the gas tank with my boys playing hard down at Plymouth South."

The Red Raiders (4-5, 2-2) proved they were up to the challenge through two periods, but by the final frame it looked like they had caught a glimpse of Medusa, as their legs and skates turned to stone and they watched the Clippers (8-0, 4-0) tack on three goals to secure a 4-0 victory.

"In the third period, the stronger team prevailed," Doyle said. "Our legs weren't strong enough, and we kind of stopped skating and watched the plays develop. I think it was more of a passive, laid back, see what Falmouth has to offer. Shame on us for doing that because against a team like Falmouth you definitely need to be on your game."

"We had a hard week in practice and having back-to-back games was tough," he added. "I'm certainly not making excuses. Falmouth was the better team by far. They outshot us and they capitalized on their chances."

After last Wednesday's 13-2 thrashing at Taunton, South Quincy would have had three days off to prepare for Falmouth, but the Jan. 3 game against Plymouth South was postponed and, unfortunately, rescheduled for last Friday.

And the schedule didn't get much easier after that. On Monday, North Quincy traveled to Duxbury for a non-league tilt and yesterday (Wednesday) it returned home to face off against Bridgewater-Raynham.

Five games in seven days. That's the definition of a grueling week.

In the Plymouth South game, sophomore Rob Mooney and junior Charlie Sorrento each potted a pair of goals and junior Joe Fitzpatrick tallied one to power the offense. Senior goalie Matt Delorey, meanwhile, racked up 25 saves to blank the Panthers for his third win of the season.

"Matt Delorey did a good job and he's feeling good about himself," Doyle said.

North Quincy, however, has a trio of senior netminders and Doyle said he will use a rotation until he feels one of them seizes the position. Against Falmouth it was Matt Gregory's turn to man the pipes, while Delorey and Pat O'Donnell cheered from the bench.

"The kids are pulling for one another," Doyle said. "There's a lot of support there, which is good to see. Going into the year I knew I was going to have some headaches about which goalie to start. All three have been working their tails off in practice."

Gregory delivered the goods against the Clippers, keeping the score 1-0 after two when it easily could have been 3-0. He made a couple of sensational saves — none prettier than early in the first when he a Clipper stepped in front and Gregory gobbled his quick shot with his glove. "Matt Gregory is a solid goaltender," Doyle said. "I feel bad for him right now. I purposely stood up in the locker room and sung his praises. He has played some tough games so far this year. He's given me everything.

Even though his record is 0-4, it doesn't do him justice. I think he really has done a tremendous job and he will continue to do so."

The Red Raiders were clearly running on fumes when Falmouth struck for three goals in the third, particularly when it netted two goals in the final five minutes.

"I was very pleased with my team's performance in periods one and two," Doyle said. "I was disappointed in my team at about the seven minute mark of the third period. Rather than all-out forechecking and going in there trying to create something and steal a goal, we went the other way. We kind of packed it in and it showed. That's why Falmouth got its last two goals to make it 4-0 instead of a 2-0 game, which it realistically was."

WARTS VS. CORNS

Do you have a wart or is it a corn or callus? Very often patients come to the office and think they have a corn and it ends up being a wart. The reverse also happens.

Although a wart and a callus may appear very similar, they are different lesions that allow us to distinguish between the two. It is important to differentiate between the two because the treatment for each is different.

A callus is caused because of a structural deformity with the bone. After curing (or debriding) the callus, a patient will have relief, but the callus will return eventually. A wart is a virus that is treated by removing the wart by a variety of methods. If a wart is not treated, it may spread.

If you are concerned that you have a wart or a callus or corn, see a qualified Podiatrist for diagnosis or treatment.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

Creating A Positive, Healthy Lifestyle

Clinicians at Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital remind us that health care is a partnership between physicians and their patients, and that effective disease prevention begins with a positive, healthy lifestyle in 2001.

Here are some tips to help you continue a healthy plan throughout the year.

- Make up your mind to be successful. Throw all the reasons you haven't achieved your goals out the window. Find out what's holding you back and decide there are no more excuses.

- Gather support from friends and family. Tell friends and family about your goals and get them on your team. They can help motivate and break down physical and mental barriers to your success.

- Schedule your workouts. Make your exercise workout a part of your busy schedule three to five times per week. Treat it like any other important appointment with the understanding that you may need to shift items around to allow time to eat right and exercise.

- Ease into exercise: If you haven't exercised in a long time (or ever), start slowly and be realistic. Set yourself up for success with achievable weekly goals. Always contact your physician before beginning any workout.

- Consume six meals per day. Six small, well-balanced meals eaten throughout the day help you sustain your energy and maintain a healthy metabolism.

- Drink 10 glasses of water per day. Water helps to keep your body hydrated and distributes vitamins and minerals effectively. It also can help control your appetite.

- Give up smoking or help someone else stop.

- Do regular preventive dental and periodontal care and maintenance.

- Talk to your kids about alcohol and drugs. No matter how old they are, make sure your children know they can always discuss anything with you.

- Start 2001 with a clean bill of health — schedule a complete physical examination. A check-up will not only determine your current health status, it will help you maintain a relationship with your physician. Your physician will conduct tests that are appropriate for your age, background and health history. This should include a blood pressure measurement and cholesterol test.

- Reduce stress. Some techniques recommended by experts are to think positive thoughts. Spend 30 minutes a day doing something you like. Avoid difficult people when possible.

- Protect yourself from pollution. If you can't live in a smog-free environment, at least avoid smoke-filled rooms, high traffic areas, breathing in highway fumes and exercising near busy thoroughfares. Exercise outside when the smog rating is low. Exercise indoors in air conditioning when air quality is good.

- Wear your seat belt. Statistics show that seat belts eliminate many potential injuries in car crashes.

Free Glaucoma Screenings

Dr. Steven Nielsen of the Lambert-Nielsen Eye Center will offer free glaucoma screenings during January and February, in honor of National Glaucoma Awareness Week starting Jan. 28.

To schedule a free glaucoma screening at the Lambert-Nielsen Eye Center in Quincy, at 100 Congress St. in Crown Colony Office Park, or in Hingham at 99 Derby St., call 1-800-273-5655.

"Glaucoma can occur in people of all ages, but more likely in those over 55 years of age, those with diabetes, or those with severe nearsightedness," said Dr. Nielsen. "The condition occurs as a build-up of pressure in the eye and causes optic nerve damage."

Millions of Americans have glaucoma, an eye disease that has no early symptoms, and many do not realize they have it. If glaucoma is not detected and treated, it causes permanent loss of vision and is a major cause of blindness. Early diagnosis and treatment of glaucoma is the key to preserving vision.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"
Where to purchase a hearing aid.

You thought I would say HERE please! Sorry if I disappointed you. It's not that I don't want your business- I do! What's more important is that you feel comfortable where you go, you get excellent service, you hear as well as possible and for a fair price. You do not want to feel rushed into making a decision without exploring all of your options. If your doctor recommends a hearing aid and conveniently sends you across the hall, that is not giving you much choice. Good service is very important and you'll need it for the life of the hearing aid. Select carefully and go with the professional that has the most qualities. Bring your hearing test results to two or three other Hearing Instrument Specialists. Shop for a professional that is caring, is fully equipped, highly experienced and fairly priced. If you feel like you're in a factory, then you're in the wrong place. Hearing aids can require a lot of service, it's a marriage between specialist and patient. Select carefully and have a pleasant experience! Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

A funeral service for Harold "Harry" Gray, 97, of Quincy, a retired clerk at the South Postal Annex in Boston, was held Jan. 5 at the Cartwright-Venuti Funeral Home, 845 Washington St., Braintree.

Mr. Gray died Jan. 2 at Milton Healthcare Center after a long illness.

Mr. Gray worked at the annex for more than 25 years, retiring several years ago.

Born in Scotland, he came to the United States at age five.

He grew up in Quincy and attended Quincy schools.

He was a World War II Army veteran.

Husband of the late Josephine (Szymczak) Gray, he is survived by a daughter, Louisa H. Clerici of Holbrook; a son, Lawrence A. Gray of Braintree; two grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Pessimists say, 'It can't happen,' when it will; 'The boss won't buy it,' and he does; 'We have never done it that way,' but now we are."

Orrin Wright flew his airplane 120 feet. Macaroni sent his signal across the ocean. Old mobile advertised that it was cheaper to buy a car than feel and table a horse. And it was... Dr. Norman Vincent Peale called this triumph of "can-do."

The Power of Positive Thinking.

Beethoven was deaf. Edison's grades were poor in school. Churchill hesitated during childhood. But men like these, men who might have been contented not before they began, somehow turned history against pessimism. And now nobody loves a pessimist anymore. It seems pessimism is a dying art...

People are learning not to accept the impossible, the improbable, the inevitable, or the prediction of defeat or failure.

They are also learning that for one man to move the world, he must first move himself...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might feel a mite "sheepish" about a mistake involving a close friend. But a full explanation soon clears the air. An elderly relative has something to tell you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've gained ground by staying on course with your plans. But don't relax yet. The resistance factor is still strong and could throw up a new obstacle.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A change in an important personal relationship might have caught you by surprise. But there's much you'll learn here if you try to work things through.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A personal situation that began to develop over the holidays suddenly presents you with a major challenge.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A business contract might be less precise than you expect. The wise Leo or Leona should work to sharpen each clause so that it actually means what it says.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An associate presses you to come through with a promise, but you might not be ready to do so. A full explanation should ease the strain between the two of you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A new personal relationship seems to be heaven-sent. But don't let your "angel's" glittering halo blind you to signs of potential problems.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Speak up about that workplace problem so that it can be resolved before it becomes a job-threatening situation. Coworkers rally to support you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) As a truth-seeker, you will soon come to value startling (maybe even shocking) information confided by a friend or family member.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't deplore it; explore it. That vexing family problem is not beyond help. Dig for some hidden truths that will help bring about a resolution.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Prompt attention to a physical problem soon restores your good health. A personal relationship also needs attention.

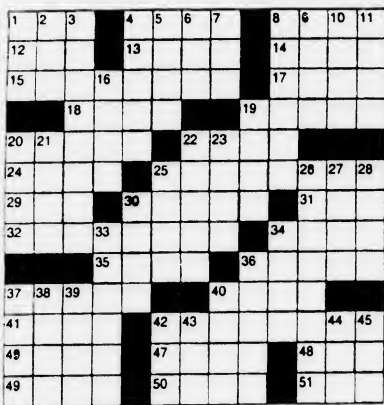

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A real estate offer holds more "pluses" than are readily apparent. Ask more questions, and you could be pleasantly surprised.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for bringing people together to work out their problems. Have you considered running for president?

Dr. Philip Maloney Receives Oral Surgeons Education Award

Philip L. Maloney, DMD, a life-long resident of Quincy, was recently presented the 2000 Donald B. Osborn Award for Outstanding Educator by the American Association of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons (AAOMS) at their 82nd annual meeting in San Francisco.

More than 5,200 attendees from the United States and around the world gathered for the Association's annual meeting.

The Osborn Award is given annually to a single educator who exemplifies the highest standards in education and patient care and who, through active involvement has fostered research in the specialty of oral and maxillofacial surgery.

Dr. Maloney is a Professor of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at the Boston University Goldman School of Dental Medicine and Clinical Professor of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at Tufts University School of Dental Medicine. In 1967 he was appointed Director of Dentistry & Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at Boston City Hospital. He continues in this capacity at Boston Medical Center's Harrison Avenue Campus. More than 200 oral and maxillofacial surgery residents have studied under him. In 1982m he served as President of the Medical & Dental Staff at Boston City Hospital.

A Diplomate of the American Board of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery, Dr. Maloney was President of the Mass Society of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons in 1982 and President of the AAOMS in 1986. He is a Fellow of the International College of Dentists.

In addition to the Osborn Award, Dr. Maloney has received a number of honors and awards throughout his career. In 1995, he received the Commissioner's Award for Distinguished Service and Excellence in Patient Care at Boston City Hospital. In 1986, he received the William Harrigan Award from the oral and maxillofacial surgeons at Bellevue Hospital in New York. In 1988, he received the William J. Gies Award for Distinguished Achievement in Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery. Dr. Maloney received the AAOMS Distinguished Service Award in 1989 and in 1992 he received the Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery Foundation's Torch Award.

In October 1999, the Alumni Association of Oral & Maxillofacial Surgery and Dentistry at Boston City Hospital Boston Medical Center, in concert with the OMS Foundation established the endowed Philip L. Maloney Trauma Lecture Series. The first Maloney Trauma Lecture will be given in September 2001 at the AAOMS annual meeting in Orlando, Fla.

Resolution Seeks Update On City Use Of Internet

Councillor Frank McCauley submitted a resolution at Tuesday night's meeting of the City Council requesting Charles Phelan, director of Data Processing, to update the council on the city's use of the Internet in the operation of city government.

McCauley, who praised Phelan's work, said the purpose of the resolve was to discuss how city matters could be handled with the new technology, giving the example of the possible online payment of parking tickets.

Two Residents On Franklin Dean's List

Two Quincy students have been named to the Dean's List at Franklin Institute of Boston for the fall semester.

The students and their majors are Chi Wu, computer engineering technology, and Yiu Ho, electronic engineering technology.

Overcoming Genetic Disorder A Challenge For Walsh Family

"What you take for granted for a little child, you just can't do."

This is how Quincy resident Carol Walsh describes some of her earliest feelings about life with her son Rick, who as a toddler was first diagnosed with Neurofibromatosis, a genetic disorder more prevalent than Cystic Fibrosis and Huntington's Disease combined.

Learning to live as a parent with a child with Neurofibromatosis is a difficult proposition.

Rick Walsh was diagnosed at around five weeks because of the number of "cafe au lait" spots he evidenced.

"My husband and I were very lucky," Carol said. "We received exceptional care and support from our pediatrician, Dr. Leslie Blackman in Quincy, and a pediatric neurologist, Dr. William DeBassie, also of Quincy, and a physician at the Children's Hospital Clinic."

Neurofibromatosis symptoms include tumors that grow along the nerves anywhere in the body at any time. An extremely high percentage of those affected by NF have a variety of learning disabilities.

Indeed, Rick was challenged by a series of developmental problems and learning disabilities. He had a number of difficulties with coordination and was diagnosed with Attention Deficit Disorder.

He spent several years in speech, language, occupational, and physical therapy at Braintree Hospital. At the age of ten, he was still experiencing difficulty with balance and performing functions that were normal for most children.

Middle school and the early years of high school were difficult for Rick and his family.

"We really sheltered him as a child in choosing a small private elementary school, which gave him the sense that he was the only one with a condition that he was constantly being treated for and, in retrospect, that was not doing him a favor,"

Carol explained.

"In the seventh and eighth grades he wasn't as coordinated as others and had problems with his social skills," she continued.

"It was really more a question of how I perceived myself rather than how others perceived me," suggested Rick.

When Rick got to North Quincy High School, his life got better. He became involved in sports and began to make more friends.

"I developed friendships with other kids, some of whom had learning disabilities, too," Rick said. "I began peer counseling with other kids that I thought had it all together and saw that they were not as together as I had imagined."

Now, Rick is a student at Westfield State College. "I've made many friends at college who also have learning disabilities and that's made it easier to talk about it," Rick said.

Little by little, he's spent his life overcoming NF, not dwelling on it.

This year Rick was one of the few freshmen to be elected as a representative to the student senate from his building. In fact, he was named one of two outstanding first-year senators and will be a resident assistant next school year. He's decided he wants to teach because of the great impact a few teachers had on his life and a desire to do the same for another generation of students.

Rick constantly works at ways to compensate for his learning disabilities by developing different strategies for both verbal and written work.

He also works at maintaining a positive attitude. "I just have to work a little harder than other people," he said.

Rick's father Dick also has Neurofibromatosis. He worked for the MBTA for 24 years, retiring three years ago. He now works for Dave Dinger Auto, which has recently merged with Herb Chambers Autos.

"Having Neurofibromatosis has never prevented me from working," Dick DICK WALSH and his son Rick of Quincy prove that having neurofibromatosis, a genetic disorder which can also cause learning disabilities, is no obstacle to leading a productive and satisfying life. The two will run the Disney Marathon in January as part of the National NF Marathon Team.

said. "Over the years I've had tumors removed but that never stopped me."

Dick also grew up with learning disabilities. "It's really important for people to understand that, while Neurofibromatosis creates more challenges, it is still something you can overcome."

Showing people that they can do anything is now driving the Walshes to participate as father and son on the National NF Marathon Team in the Disney Marathon in January.

"Our doing this is truly exciting," Dick said. "It's a great challenge and another way of demonstrating that we can overcome obstacles."

"We'll be part of a great group of NF supporters from New England and all over the country who have chosen to raise sponsorship monies and go for free to Disney," added Rick.

Some NF Team participants have NF but many do not. "You can walk, jog, or run in the marathon with world class runners or just go and cheer," Dick said.

Through the National NF Marathon Team program and many other projects, the entire family is very involved with the Massachusetts Chapter of the National Neurofibromatosis Foundation.

"The only way that I could generate a sense of control over this was to get involved, to work with the NF Foundation to raise money for research and for public education," Carol said.

MIAA, Keating Form Wellness Partnership

The Massachusetts Inter-scholastic Athletic Association and Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Keating have established a wellness partnership aimed at helping young people in Quincy and across the county to make healthier choices.

Keating and MIAA Deputy Director William Gaine, Jr. made the announcement during a recent forum at the Norwood Elks Club. Quincy Police Lt. Thomas Malvesti and Officer Jack Haines joined more than 70 athletic directors, wellness coordinators and law enforcement officials attending the session.

As the first step of the partnership, the MIAA and the District Attorney's office will discuss plans for a two and a half day conference that would train school and law enforcement personnel on how they can better resources and affect lesser partnerships. Along with the Anti-Detention League, the MIAA and the DA's office will also sponsor a respect and racial diversity workshop Feb. 16 at MIAA headquarters in Franklin.

According to Keating's office, Norfolk County saw

1,718 juvenile matters processed in 1999, with property damage, violence, and drug and alcohol offenses topping the list.

"I honestly think that together we can establish a day-to-day working relationship in this county that can spread to other counties as well," Keating said.

Gaine discussed the MIAA Wellness Program, which offers guest speakers at no charge to secondary and middle schools across the state. The events are funded by several grants that the MIAA elicits annually. As a major focus, the MIAA has sponsored statewide workshops for superintendents, school committee representatives, principals, athletic directors, coaches, teachers, parents and police chiefs. The MIAA also offers high school captain workshops, preparing students to mentor younger teammates.

Keating's office provides programs on a variety of topics, including family and relationship violence, safe Internet use, child abuse and neglect, sexual assault and rape.

Only A Few Marina Bay Residents Tour Salem But Some Liked What They Saw

By LANCE MORGANELLI

Despite an invitation to all Marina Bay residents for a free tour of the USS Salem at its Fore River Shipyard berth over the weekend, only a few attended.

But most of those who did seemed to like what they saw.

The invitation came as a result of a meeting on Jan. 4 at Marina Bay at which some residents voiced opposition to the proposed move of the USS Salem to MDC's Squantum Point Park in Marina Bay.

The idea was to allow the Marina Bay residents to view the ship first-hand to see what it offers and the significance it has to the city. Joanne Condon Walsh, executive director of the USS Salem, sent 500 invitations to the households of Marina Bay.

"It's our goal to go there and be a good neighbor as a business," Condon Walsh said. There will be no traffic problems as the Salem receives a limited amount of visitors per day even during its peak summer season, according to Condon Walsh.

"Sometimes if you can get to one person, (that person) will influence others," she said.

One Marina Bay resident, Bob Harrington who lives in the community's high rises, said he was visiting the ship in favor of the proposed move. He noted that the ship served the country and currently is aiding in teaching local students such programs as physics classes.

"I think we should have to show people what helped keep us free," Harrington said.

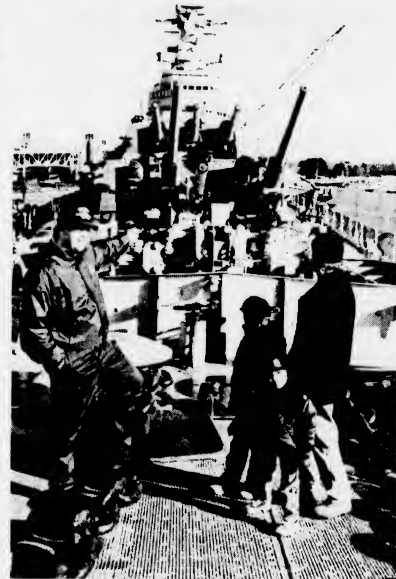

The need for re-location from its current site at the Fore River Shipyard to MDC's Squantum Point Park in Marina Bay comes because the reconstruction of the Fore River Bridge will need the Salem's berthing dock for supply shipments and building. The reconstruction will take approximately 10 years.

"We need people to see we are not funded by taxes," Condon Walsh said. The U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum raises its own money through admission tickets, private parties renting out sections of the ship, and corporate sponsorship, according to Condon Walsh.

Mayor James Sheets, chairman of the shipbuilding museum board of directors, was on board in a show of support for the ship.

"Every time I get on this ship I get excited because of what it stands for," Sheets said. "Because you preserve the honor of this ship, you preserve the shipbuilding industry."

Referring to the controversy of the relocation,

HERB SIMPSON, a volunteer, welcomes residents from Marina Bay for a free tour of the USS Salem over the weekend.

Sheets said, "We'll find a way to work those problems out," and added, "This is what a democracy is all about."

Although the USS Salem, which was commissioned from 1949 to 1959, did not serve in any wars, it played a role in maintaining international relations with several countries.

"It'll bring more people to the Bay -- it's historical," Roger Lammers, a resident of the Harbor Side houses at Marina Bay, said Sunday.

"Someone should take care of our history. Why not Marina Bay?" Lammers said.

Kathy O'Donovan, of Marina Bay Drive, said, "It's beautiful," referring to the USS Salem. Later, she said she had not thought about the move much but initially she does not mind it.

"It's not a rusty ol' bucket... it's a museum," Condon Walsh said.

The USS Salem is the largest artifact in the United States Shipbuilding Museum.

Within the museum, Military Archivist James Fahey runs the Military Archives and Ordnance Collection which covers all military history from the Revolutionary War to the Persian Gulf War.

"I'm pleased that people took the time to visit. They had a chance to interact with people who are on the ship," Condon Walsh said. "About 15 former crew members and officers of the USS Salem were on board giving tours and explaining navy life and history to the visitors."

The USS Salem must be brought through approvals from federal, state, and local authorities before its placement on the dock at Squantum Point Park. The three main stages of approval will be: regulatory approvals for design and dredging, regulatory approvals for design and construction of dock structures, and approvals for ship movement and mooring.

The process is expected to be completed by the end of 2001, Condon Walsh said.

$50-60 Million Project Proposed By Quincy 2000

300 Residential Units Planned For Hancock Lot

HANCOCK LOT PROPOSAL: An artist's rendering of the Quincy 2000 proposal to develop the John Hancock Parking Lot into a 300-unit apartment complex with a 3-story, 1000-space parking garage. The $50-$60 million dollar project, still in preliminary stages, would be privately financed and be aided by the construction of Phase II of the Quincy Concourse Project. Rendering shows Revere Rd. in foreground with the Quincy District Court House on Chestnut St./Dennis Ryan Pkwy. at right.

(Rendering by JSA, Inc.)

By CRAIG SALTERS

After more than a year of study, Quincy 2000 has created a development proposal for the John Hancock Parking Lot in Quincy Center which would privately finance 300 residential units complete with a three-story garage capable of handling 1,000 vehicles.

The garage, half below grade and half above-grade and incorporated into the design of the apartments, would have 600 spaces for public parking with the rest allocated for use by apartment residents.

The $50 to $60 million dollar proposal goes hand in hand with road improvements in the downtown, specifically Phase II of the Quincy Concourse, a $5 million state project which will directly connect Quincy Center with major highways and which is as yet unfunded.

The $5 million dollar Phase I of the Quincy Concourse, which creates a bridge and road connecting Burgin Parkway to Ross Way, is on schedule and will be completed in September.

"This plan creates additional parking at no cost to the city," said Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mammirino, noting that public parking space will increase 15 percent from Hancock Lot's existing 520 spaces. "Our concept has always been to add public parking and bring more people to the downtown."

Mayor James Sheets said his office has been consistently updated on the proposal and likes what it sees.

"I think it's a good proposal," said Sheets. "The Hancock Lot needs to be developed and we need to have residential activity that will support the retail and other businesses."

Mammirino, who said no developer has been chosen although several inquiries have been made, was scheduled to lead an informational meeting on the master plan Wednesday at 6:45 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall, a meeting called by Ward 5.

For Outstanding Community Service

Carol Herbai Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Carol Herbai, who for more than a half century has dedicated herself to helping others as a volunteer at Quincy Medical Center and with the American Red Cross and other worthy causes, is The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year for 2000.

A vivacious, young 78, and mother of three and grandmother of six, she was selected for the honor by a panel of judges from a field of 38 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

The 16th annual recipient of the award for outstanding community service, she will be honored at a reception in March at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Mrs. Herbai underwent surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital Jan. 17 and was informed there Monday by Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth of her selection as The Sun Citizen of the Year.

"That's wonderful," she ex-

CAROL HERBAI -- 2000 Quincy Sun Citizen Of The Year claimed, "You've made me feel good already."

Bosworth congratulated her as "a most worthy recipient" and also congratulated the other 37 nominees.

"Being nominated is an honor in itself," he said. "And we again this year had a number of outstanding nominees."

Mrs. Herbai was nominated for the award by Donald Uvanitte, who has first hand knowledge of her work as a volunteer. He is chairman of the Quincy Medical Center Foundation Board and vice chairman of the hospital Board of Trustees.

Mrs. Herbai Tuesday was hoping to be transferred to Quincy Medical Center for her transitional care.

"That's like going home," she said.

Mrs. Herbai has an impressive volunteer track record: 32 years at Quincy Medical Center, 56 with the American Red Cross and 23 at Beth Israel Hospital.

And, she has even served as a volunteer at a Leper colony off Trinidad with the British Red Cross.

Her Quincy roots are deep. She lives on Littlefield St.,

800 Gallons Of Donated Oil Heat 8 West Quincy Homes

West Quincy residents displayed a strong sense of community and more than a touch of Yankee ingenuity recently when 800 gallons of free home heating oil were distributed to eight local families in need.

The opportunity arose when C. Robert Foy of Assurance Realty Corporation and James DeCelle, owner of DeCelle Engineering, came upon a large oil tank which had to be removed from a West Quincy property.

Rather than let the oil go to waste, Foy and DeCelle sought a company to pump out the oil for re-use, finding such a volunteer in Reggie's Oil Company.

"It's really a very innovative idea," said Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, who facilitated the donation along with Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP). "We were able to recycle the oil and, through QCAP, identify local homes who might need it."

D'Amico praised the efforts of Foy, DeCelle, Reggie's Oil, and QCAP and said the new idea could become a trend in the future.

"There's an ever increasing demand for home heating oil," said D'Amico, adding that QCAP received over 800 new applications for its home heating assistance program this winter.

Restaurant Plans On Hold For Traffic Check

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Plans to open the Orchard Princess, a Tai Restaurant at the former West Coast Cafe on 1659 Hancock St. were put on hold Tuesday as the License Board referred the request to the city's traffic engineer Jack Gillon.

Prospective owners told the board that the restaurant plans to serve a variety of foods, primarily Tai food and will also have take out and delivery. Hours of operation would be from 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week.

Customers may also eat in the nine seat restaurant.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the fact that the site was moving from a coffee shop to a full service restaurant needed a survey from the traffic engineer.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association said in the past, delivery trucks have taken up a parking space on a regular basis. She urged the new owners to arrange for a specific spot for the trucks to park so as not to take up a parking space.

Shea said the traffic report would be ready either for next week's meeting or the week after.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

• Granted a one day license to the Lions Club for their fourth annual Run/Walk for Sight Saturday, April 28 at 10:30 a.m.

The rain or shine 5K (3.1 mile) route will include Southern Artery, Viet Nam Drive, and Quincy Shore Drive. Spokesperson Janet Lydon said they expect about 500 persons to participate.

• Granted a change of corporate name from The Chantey, Boston Harbor Marina Co., Inc. 33 Victory Rd., to The Chantey at Marina Bay, Inc.

• Granted a transfer of an all-alcoholic retail license held by Kenneth Beagle to Smit, Inc. doing business as Regal Beagle, 385 Hancock St. The former Murpny's Package Store is across the street from Sacred Heart church in North Quincy. Niruben Patel will be owner.

Burke Felt He Had To Bring Quincy Tankard Back Home

By TOM HENSHAW

Attorney George Burke was reading his copy of The Quincy Sun last Thursday when one sentence in the caption under a Page One photograph of the Quincy Tankard caught his eye.

The silver tankard, donated to the United First Parish Church by Col. John Quincy in 1767, was expected to be one of the least expensive of the 11 pieces of silver put up for auction by the church to pay a $1.7 million bill for badly needed repairs to the church building.

The auction netted $2.7 million for the Church of the Presidents, about twice as much as expected.

The sentence in The Sun that caught Burke's eye read: "Pastor Sheldon Bennett hopes that a local bidder with historical concerns will be able to retrieve it (the tankard) from auction Friday."

"I felt that sentence was directed at me," said Burke, a former city councilor and state representative. "I felt that I could be that local bidder."

So Burke hid himself down to The Sun office, borrowed a copy of the auction catalogue, read up on the rules of the bidding and promptly at 10:15 a.m. Friday placed a call to Sotheby's auction house in New York where the bidding was held.

Calling from his office in North Quincy, Burke was assigned a Sotheby's aide named Elizabeth to handle details on the other end of the telephone line. He bid on seven items but every time he did, he said, "the bidding got out of hand."

John Quincy Tankard May Be Displayed In Sun Window

Then it came down to the last item, the Quincy Tankard, No. 261 on the Sotheby's list. Bidding was down to start at $30,000 and the piece was expected to go for $50,000.

"I agreed that it was a shame that the tankard had to go out of the city," he said. "I read the history of the tankard. John Quincy was a lawyer in Quincy. I've been a lawyer in Quincy for 42 years. John Quincy was a state representative. I was a state representative. He dedicated his life to public service and so did I. And he's the Quincy the city is named for."

"I made a commitment to bring the tankard back to

The bidding reached and then surpassed the expected $50,000.

"I began to sweat," said Burke.

The bidding reached and then topped $100,000.

"I began to have heart palpitations," he said.

Then it reached $150,000.

"I had never bid at an auction before," said Burke. "But I got caught up in this thing."

"Here I was up against some of the best silver and antique experts in the United States. They knew the value of the tankard. I didn't. I was bidding on its history."

But he shed the cost from his mind and plunged on. The bidding reached $155,000. "The bid is with you," Elizabeth told him over the telephone. Burke took a deep breath and raised his bid to $160,000.

"I could hear the auctioneer talking and all the sounds of the auction," said Burke. "Finally, Elizabeth came back on the phone and said, 'You have won.' I felt a rush of adrenaline. I felt wonderful."

ATTY. GEORGE BURKE admires the Quincy Tankard shown in a Sotheby catalogue and for which he was the successful bidder in last week's auction of United First Parish Church silver. Burke's bid was $160,000. But he estimates the final price tag will reach $200,000 including sales tax, Sotheby's commission and a guard to bring the tankard from New York City to Quincy.

McCauley And The Titanic

Frank McCauley has been a familiar figure in Quincy politics and government for 28 years.

But if it hadn't been for fate, you probably never would have heard of him.

In fact, if it hadn't been for fate, there might never have been a Frank McCauley. Here. Or anywhere.

It all has to do with McCauley's father, Hugh McCauley, Jr. And, the Titanic.

Hugh was the youngest of five children of the Hugh McCauley, Sr. family living in County Armagh in Northern Ireland.

Two brothers, twins James and William, came to the U.S. in 1905 and settled in Everett. They later urged Hugh to join them. Two sisters went to England.

In April, 1912, Hugh booked steerage passed on the Titanic. That was the ill-fated trip when the so-called unsinkable liner hit an iceberg in the North Atlantic April 14 and sank the following day with a loss of 1,503.

"Immigrants in those days traveled in steerage class, well below on the ship," says McCauley. "Most of those lost on the Titanic were in that steerage class."

But Frank's father-to-be wasn't among them.

Frank's grandfather had taken ill before the Titanic sailed and Hugh, Jr. cancelled his passage to stay with him. He came over later on another ship in October.

"If he had been on the Titanic, it is doubtful he would have survived," says McCauley.

"And," he muses, "there wouldn't be a me."

Hugh arrived safely in Boston aboard the other ship and settled in Everett where he met Mary McKeown who was born there. Her family moved to Houghs Neck in 1920. And Mary and Hugh were married here Oct. 12, 1924.

Frank, their only child, was born Dec. 27, 1929.

"The fact that my father cancelled that trip on the Titanic changed the whole course of Quincy politics," McCauley muses.

McCauley has had a lot to do with the course of Quincy politics: four years as Ward 1 councillor, eight years on the school committee, eight years as mayor and now in his eighth year as a councillor at-large.

"I'll be seeking re-election," says McCauley, who has become the council's financial watchdog.

In addition to elective office, he served four years on the Quincy Draft Board, five as a Quincy Housing Authority commissioner and six as executive director of the State Retirement Board.

He certainly has had a lot of influence in many areas down through the years.

Which might never have been if his father was aboard the Titanic in 1912.

McCauley sees a little political humor in the fact his father missed that trip.

Recalling the 1981 mayoral race in which he defeated Dan Raymondi, he says:

"If I wasn't around that year, Dan would probably have won and be in his 10th term by now. Jim Sheets might still be Ward 4 councillor."

And, on a personal note, he adds, jokingly:

"And if my father had made that trip on the Titanic, Sandra would have missed out on me."

She smiles and says something like: "Well, that's an interesting point."

SANDRA

WONDERING IF Mike McFarland is going to seek re-election to the School Committee this year? He apparently is.

McFarland became City Auditor, succeeding Robert Foy, after being elected to the school committee in 1999.

He decided to fill out the term to see if there would be any problem serving two jobs.

"I've had no problem," he says. "So, at this point I intend to seek re-election."

There is no political or ethical conflict holding the two jobs.

McFARLAND

YOU CAN ADD Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly to that list of potential city council at-large candidates if Paul Harold doesn't seek re-election.

"I'm interested," says Kelly who was elected to six terms and served two as city council president.

KELLY

SPEAKING (ABOVE) OF Frank McCauley, some 600 copies of his book on Quincy's political history have been sold with 400 left.

The book, Quincy, Massachusetts: A Political History 1889-2000, is available at the Quincy Historical Society and Abigail's Crossing at Hancock St. and Temple Sts. Price: $19.95 plus tax.

McCauley wrote the book at Mayor James Sheets's request as part of the city's Millennium celebration with assistance from his wife, Sandra. It was a two-year labor of love.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930's postcard view of the Dennison Airport on the corner of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive in Atlantic. This is now the site of a Dunkin' Donuts' shop. Harold Dennison, a Quincy architect, built these buildings and a few dirt runways on filled marshland leased from the U.S. Government in 1927. One of his financial partners was Amelia Earhart who later learned to fly here. In its heyday the airport hosted a variety of activities including weekly air shows, private flying clubs and scenic passenger flights for the public. In 1941 the government took back its property to expand the adjacent Squantum Naval Air Station. Housing was later built here to serve Squantum and South Weymouth naval personnel. The 27-acre parcel was recently conveyed by the Navy to Quincy's non-profit Elder Housing Corp. for its 152-unit Squantum Gardens senior citizen complex.

Quincy's Yesterdays Meat Shortage Continues

By PAUL HAROLD

Shoppers over the weekend cleaned out Quincy markets of the last remaining scraps of beef, lamb, and pork. Butchers said that they would be lucky if they had hamburger for sale next week. Three markets in the city reported having no meat for sale.

Despite the strike by mid-west suppliers there were reports that some supplies were trickling into Boston from the West. Most markets said they had supplies of chicken, fowl, rabbit and cold cuts.

MATTEWSON IN PEACETIME PRODUCTION

Matteuon Machine Works in North Quincy was planning for a conversion of their production of outboard motors from defense department uses to peacetime. Matteuon's famous big outboard motors, designed for amphibious warfare, played a key role in all major invasions during the war. The company planned to manufacture six models for commercial uses 20, 40, 105, 115, 165 and 330 horsepower engines, with varying weights from 1,000 to 20,000 pounds.

CONSULTANT TO PLAN FOR SCHOOL NEEDS

The school committee voted to hire a consultant, at $50 a day, to make recommendations for future school construction needs.

Committee member Paul Marini voted against hiring, questioning why the committee should pay for information they already knew. He said there was no need for new schools, pointing out that there was one existing school boarded up and 70 empty classrooms across the city. Added to this was the construction of two parochial schools in the north end of the city with the expectation that a parochial high school would also be built.

New QHS At Merrymount Or Faxon Park A Bad Idea

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Now that the site on Quincy Avenue has been eliminated from the discussion for a new high school location, some would say that Pageant Field, Merrymount Park or Faxon Park make the best locations. I say not so fast. For those who complain about the cost of land takings, I suggest the following: attach a value to the open space that the school would be built on. Measure the value of the park land to this city for the past 100 years and the next 100 years. What is the value of Merrymount Park to this city? How about Faxon Park? The answer is simple. The values far outweigh the costs of any land purchases the city might have to make.

You can crunch all the numbers you want, but the one thing Quincy can't afford is to lose the precious open space that we have left. A new Quincy High school at Merrymount Park or Faxon Park is a bad idea.

USS Salem 'A Wonderful Museum'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am a resident of the City of Quincy and live in North Quincy. I also have maintained a boat at Marina Bay for 38 years. I am a volunteer on the USS Salem and am offended by the remarks in The Ledger about the USS Salem and the proposed relocation to Squantum Point Park at Marina Bay.

My experience with the ship is: very positive. I have assisted with functions aboard such as the Halloween Haunted Ship event, the Christmas Enchanted Village event with Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny egg hunt aboard the ship, the haircuts provided on Father's Day to dads in the existing 50 year old barbershop, and the summer Sunday music series provided and enjoyed by many seniors living in Quincy.

I have also observed the weekend Boy Scout & Girl Scout Overnight Program, military memorial events, and a wide variety of visitors who both enjoy the ship and remark about what a wonderful experience they have had aboard. The USS Salem is full of displays about life onboard a Navy ship, memorabilia, and exhibits from other Navy ships that have served our country in both peace and war. We also have a wonderful classroom filled with Quincy Public School children on Mondays and Wednesdays, learning Physics from a former crewmember who is also a Ph.D.

I can continue to tell you what is aboard but I suggest that those who have not visited take the time to visit the ship and learn for themselves before they comment on the USS Salem. The USS Salem is a wonderful museum, filled with information and volunteers. They care and want to help provide this artifact for the benefit of those who did not help build this ship in Quincy or serve aboard one of our many ships built for World War II in Quincy. My husband was proud to work at the shipyard and did in fact help build the USS Salem. We are preserving the past for our future generations to learn.

Readers Help Red Cross Holiday Stocking Program

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many readers of The Quincy Sun who took part in our annual Holiday Stocking Program for needy children served by the American Red Cross.

Through the generosity of your readers, we were able to make Christmas "Merry" for over 600 children in the city of Quincy alone. Your good and generous readers donated "filled to the brim" stockings to these children, ages 1-12. Thanks to their genuine concern to make the stockings the very best, the children were treated to all kinds of entertaining, educational and creative toys. Those gifts that did not fit in the stocking were gamely tied onto the stocking.

I would like to share the following with you: it is a letter addressed to "Santa's Helper" at the American Red Cross and is says, in part, "My mommy told me you got me a stocking for Christmas. I am only seven, but thank you very much. It made me happy to know you care." So simply and beautifully said by this little girl. You see, there is much more going on than just the giving of toys, most importantly, it is the knowledge that we care.

Best wishes for a happy, healthy and peaceful New Year.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Anisette Biscotti

Recently at a family holiday party our niece Elaine brought some anisette cookies (biscotti) to the event that seemed a lot moister than the ones I usually make. So I naturally got her recipe and with the addition of only one egg, it made a huge difference. Here is the revised recipe.

Anisette Biscotti

1 stick butter (or margarine)
1 cup sugar
3 1/4 cups flour
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 cup milk
3 eggs (beaten)
1 teaspoon anise oil (if using anise extract, add 1 1/2 teaspoons)

Melt butter and mix with sugar. Alternately, add the eggs, flour, milk, anise flavoring until dough is smooth and not sticky. At this point, you may have to add a bit more flour until you can knead the dough smoothly.

On greased cookie sheets, make logs out of the dough shaping them as round or flat as you want.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 15 minutes. Try pushing a toothpick in the center and if it's clean, the cookies are done.

Cut in the size you would like from a half inch to a bit thicker. If you want to toast the biscotti, place the cut cookies on a dry cookie sheet and bake until lightly toasted. Keep watching them to make sure they do not burn.

If you don't want them toasted, just cut and place them in a plastic container tightly closed, or a covered tin box. They will keep for days and days.

If you want to ice them here is the easy recipe for the topping.

Simple mix some powdered sugar with milk and a bit of anise flavoring until smooth. Brush on the log before cutting and sprinkle with colored candies.

THE ALTRUSA CLUB of Quincy recently donated 40 handmade blankets to the Quincy Police Department to be used in emergency situations. Lillian Greene and Sue Duggan of the Altrusa Club presented the blankets to Police Chief Thomas Frane. Project Warmth is designed to place a blanket in the trunk of every police cruiser. When an officer comes across an emergency situation, such as when an individual has been put out of their home because of fire, someone has fallen through the ice, an automobile accident victim that may be in shock, or a homeless person, the officer gives that individual a blanket to keep them warm. The recipient may keep the blanket. The Altrusa Club is committed to Project Warmth and is continuing to make blankets to keep up with the anticipated need during the coming winter months.

William Aylward Publishes Two Books

William G. Aylward, publisher of the Black's Creek paper, has recently published two books, The Fitzjames Diary, and Inaccessible Light.

While the Black's Creek paper treats mainly environmental issues, and follows the political scene at City Hall, the two books offer something different.

The two books use the background of Barcelona, the Pyrenees, and the Mediterranean coastline, to register reflections about growing up in modern day culture and society. The main theme revolves around how individuals shape themselves in the context of family, church and state.

The Fitzjames Diary, features an informal diary style

Inaccessible Light, is more philosophical in nature. The title is a biblical metaphor that suggests that the meaning of life is too elusive to be captured in words.

Aylward has been publishing the Black's Creek paper for the past seven years. A native of Boston, he graduated from Boston College in 1958. He lived in South America and Spain, before relocating to Quincy in 1990.

The two books are $19.95 each and are available at The College Book Store, Abigail's Crossing, in Quincy Center and Creeds Crossing in Wollaston.

The Quincy Lions Club: Serving The Community

CITY COUNCILOR and Quincy Lions Club member McCauley (right) presents club officers with a city citation honoring the club for its many years of service to the community. Accepting the citation are Michelle Lydon, Lions Club third vice president; John Pickering, first vice president and Club President Tom Zukauskas.

ROGER PERREULT and Uncle Sam Romseville register new voters at the Stop & Shop on South to Artery. More than 100 new voters registered for last November's election thanks to the Lions Club drive.

MEMBER DON UANETTE registers a Quincy resident for a free vision and glaucoma screening in the club's Eyemobile in front of City Hall. Nearly 50 residents were provided with free vision and glaucoma screenings as part of Lions Week in Quincy.

LIONS CLUB MEMBERS John Reed and Vin Moscardelli work the grill at the club's annual Pancake Breakfast fundraiser at 1000 Southern Artery. Since 1990, Quincy Lions have contributed more than $125,000 to worthwhile causes such as scholarships, free eye exams, eye glasses, hearing aids and holiday dinners for the blind. The club has also made significant donations to the Massachusetts Eye Research Foundation.

THOMAS CRANE LIBRARY Director Ann McLaughlin demonstrates a specially adapted computer to John Reed, chairman of the Quincy Lions Club's Vision With A Purpose Program. The club is donating several computers adapted for use by blind and visually impaired persons for the "Vision With A Purpose Room" in the library's new wing.

CLUB MEMBER Joanne Condon Walsh and President Tom Zukauskas discuss Lions Club week activities on WJDA's "Party Line" program.

THE LIONS CLUB Eyemobile arrives outside City Hall staffed by club members to provide free vision and glaucoma screenings for residents.

Grossman Finalizes Faxon Property Purchase For $2.7 Million

The Grossman Companies of Quincy has consummated its previously announced plans to buy the Faxon Family Trust property adjacent to Quincy City Hall.

The purchase price was $2.7 million, said company President Louis J. Grossman.

Key Realty of Quincy represented both parties in the transaction. Playing a key role in the transaction was the head of Grossman Acquisitions and Finance, Dana Wolfe.

In October, The Grossman Companies, a family business with roots in Quincy dating back to the 1890s, revealed plans to buy and redevelop the trust property at a cost of nearly $20 million. The property includes the landmark two-story Munroe Building at 1229-53 Hancock St., plus two parking lot parcels separated by the Quincy Center MBTA station bus driveway. Mayor James Sheets has praised the project, and others said that, when completed late in 2002, it will help to "wake up the downtown."

The project has three companies:

- The Munroe Building, which consists of 67,500 square feet on two floors and the lower level and is home to some 35 retail and office tenants, may undergo exterior cosmetic improvements.

- A proposed eight-story, 111-unit luxury apartment building on a 27,000 square-foot parcel, to rise above an existing parking lot adjacent to the Munroe Building with retail shops on the first floor.

- A two- or three-story parking garage on the third parcel. Exterior improvements to the existing structure and traditional architectural design for the new building will help unify the block. Architect for the project is John Sheskev and Associates of Quincy.

The Grossman Companies, which owns a portfolio of office, retail, industrial and residential properties throughout New England, offers a broad range of commercial real estate brokerage, consulting, property management and development services.

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!
CAYMAN ISLANDS

An hour's flight from Miami, the trio of Cayman Islands is an excellent Caribbean destination. Grand Cayman's Seven Mile Beach, located in the capital of George Town, is the most popular beach. For more privacy, try the northern coast of Grand Cayman, the southwestern end of Cayman Brac, or Little Cayman's eastern tip. When you are not basking in the sun or lolling in the crystal clear water, there is great opportunity for adventure. The Cayman Islands are one of the world's best spots for diving. Try Grand Cayman's West 3697.

Bay or the mouth of North Sound and Little Cayman's Bloody Bay Wall or Jackson Point. For a once-in-a-lifetime experience, ride a submarine to see some incredible sea life.

Anyone who has ever visited the Caribbean knows there are no natives quite as friendly, no sandy beaches quite as inviting, no water quite the same color and no vacation quite so wonderful. Whether you're traveling with family, friends or on your own, join the many who have added the Caribbean to the list of the wonders of the world. Let PRIME TRAVEL get you to the Cayman Islands or other islands of your dreams. We're easy to find at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay, PH: 617-472-3697.

P.S. Check out Hell, a popular tourist spot, while in Grand Cayman's northwest.

Burke Felt He Had To Bring Tankard Back Home

THE QUINCY TANKARD purchased by George Burke at auction for $160,000 may be displayed in The Quincy Sun window.

But $160,000 is not the final figure. Burke got the bill for his foray into art world Monday --- $190,837.50, including Sotheby's $21,000 commission and $9,087.50 in New York State sales tax. Not included: The cost of a guard to bring the tankard to Quincy.

"I figure the whole thing will cost me more than $200,000," said Burke. "If I went down to New York to pick it up, it would cost me even more, including the city sales tax. But it was worth it."

It was worth it to the United First Parish Church, too. The $1.3 million expected from the auction to help repay a building repair debt of $1.7 million suddenly burgeoned into $2.7 million.

"We are thrilled with the sale," said the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, the minister. "We had no idea that it would be this successful. And we're delighted that George Burke was able to return the Quincy Tankard to Quincy."

Bennett and about a dozen members of his congregation attended the auction and knew in the first few minutes that the auction was going to be the tremendous success that it was for the church.

"The first piece offered was the Brackett Cup," said Bennett. "It was expected to bring $300,000. When the bidding reached $400,000 it became clear that the total sale would be a success. Eventually it went for $775,750."

The price for the Richard and Alice Brackett Cup, an American silver wine cup fashioned circa 1660 by John Hull and Robert Sanderson, two of Colonial Boston's finest silversmiths, was a record for early colonial silver at auction.

Bennett said the unexpected windfall of more than a million dollars will be invested and used for the long-term preservation of the 173-year-old church building in Quincy Square and for the church's social mission.

"The congregation will decide over the next few weeks on plans for a specific use of the money," said the minister.

Meanwhile, Burke, who has yet to lay eyes on the object for which he is paying some $200,000, plans to display it, under guard, to the people of Quincy as soon as it arrives from New York.

Its first appearance is tentatively scheduled to be in the window of The Quincy Sun at 1372 Hancock St., only a hundred or so feet from United First Parish Church, where it all started.

"After that," he said, "I'm going to talk to the mayor and see what he thinks is the best use of it. Then I'm going to call the Citizen's Bank and find out if they have a place for it in their vaults."

"I spoke to Mr. Bennett and told him that, anytime the church needs it, it will be his for the asking. I want the congregation to have the full use of it."

A full list of the items auctioned (with the expected price and the realized price, including Sotheby's commission, in parentheses) includes:

Richard & Alice Brackett Cup ($300,000 & $775,750)
Joanna York Cup ($350,000 & $665,750)
William Needham Cup ($300,000 & $610,750)
Quincy Tankard ($50,000 & $181,750)
Edmund Quincy Cup ($120,000 & $137,750)
Tufts Cup ($50,000 & $115,750)
Edmund Quincy III Beaker ($50,000 & $137,750)
Mehetabel Fisher Beaker ($30,000 & $115,750)
Norton-Quincy-Tufts Tankard ($60,000 & $98,500)

REAL ESTATE

First-Time Homebuyer's Workshop At Tufts Library

Neighborhood Housing Services, an MHA and HUD approved First-Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold a free informational First-Time Homebuyer's workshop in partnership with Century 21, Fulfish and Clancy Real Estate.

The workshop will be held Wednesday, Jan. 24 at the Weymouth Public Library, 43 Broad St., Weymouth, from 6 to 9 p.m.

Agenda will be comprehensive as well as individualized. The topics will be on different aspects of the homebuying process, including how to locate a property within your budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program for your needs.

Each participant will have the opportunity to meet individually with a mortgage professional from South Shore Savings Bank. Participants will learn how they can purchase property with little or no money and how to best utilize local down payment and closing grants now available across the South Shore.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. For more information or to register, contact either Debbie Kidd at Neighborhood Housing Services at (617) 770-2387, ext. 24, or the office of Century 21 Fulfish and Clancy at (781) 331-3232.

Quincy Community Action Program Receives Homebuyer 'Seal Of Approval'

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) was one of 28 Massachusetts non-profit agencies recently awarded a new certification to run homebuyer education and counseling programs for low- and moderate-income households.

The "Collaborative Seal of Approval," awarded by the Massachusetts Homeownership Collaborative, certifies the QCAP's homebuyer counseling program meets or exceeds a minimum standard in providing effective, pre-purchase homebuyer counseling and education.

The Homeownership Collaborative, managed by Citizens' Housing and Planning Association (CHAPA) was formed in 1996 to help recognize, improve and standardize the quality of homebuyer education services offered to low- and moderate-income households across the state.

Karen Wiener, CHAPA Director of Homeownership Initiatives, applauded QCAP

QUINCY COMMUNITY ACTION Program was recently awarded a new certification to run homebuyer education and counseling programs for low- and moderate-income households. From the left, Nelson Wong, QCAP Housing Coordinator; Heather Hennessey, Massachusetts Housing Partnership; and Trish Appert, QCAP Housing Director.

"for providing comprehensive homebuyer education to households who might otherwise not have access to good quality information about buying a home."

QCAP Housing Program Director Trish Appert and Housing Coordinator Nelson Wong were on hand to receive the Seal of Approval at a presentation ceremony in Boston.

"I am very proud of the work we do at QCAP to educate homebuyers and help them make intelligent choices about their purchase," Appert said. "It is gratifying to have our work recognized by a collaborative of peers and members of the lending and real estate communities."

MEMBERS OF THE judging panel for The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award with Publisher Henry Bosworth and Editor Robert Bosworth at the ends of the table serving as moderators were, from left, John DeCarli, vice president Quincy Sons of Italy; Rhonda Merrill, city Director of Events and Tourism; Michelle Lydon, Lydon Funeral Home and chairwoman of the Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration Committee; Ron Adams, Social Studies and Language Arts teacher at Broad Meadows Middle School and immediate past recipient of The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award; Rev. John Swanson, pastor Union Congregational Church; Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association; Tiffanie Williams, president Tiffanie Williams public relations and consulting firm; and City Council President Paul Harold.

Carol Herbai Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Carol Herbai Sun, 50, of Quincy, is the 2000 Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year. She is a Navy widow, a paraplegic, and a mother of three children. She was born in Quincy, Mass., and grew up in Quincy, Mass., and in which she was born.

Her three children are Dr. Daniel Schlosser of Merrimack, a psychiatrist; Patricia Herbai of Charlestown and Carol Pienarski of Tucson, Ariz.

Mrs. Herbai received the Clara Barton Humanitarian Award, the Red Cross highest honor, in 1998 for her bodywork, "the spirit of our standing dedication to easing human suffering and providing humanitarian service to those in distress."

She founded the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary since 1994 and has served on its board since 1990 and 1991.

During her tenure, the auxiliary has raised over $100,000 for hospital equipment and other needs for the operating the Gift Shop, conducting Heart Tag Days, Book Sales and other activities.

But she and her Auxiliary colleagues don't keep track of the money figures.

"We don't think of that," she says. "We just think of doing it."

She is Chairwoman of Volunteers for the American Red Cross Greater Boston Chapter and a member of the Central Area Red Cross Board.

Mrs. Herbai began volunteering with the Red Cross in 1945 near the end of World War II while her husband was in the Navy, stationed in the U.S., in the Caribbean Sea area and Trinidad.

She traveled with him and wherever they stopped, she looked for the local Red Cross office and volunteered. It included eight chapters in five states.

And while her husband was stationed in Trinidad in 1950-53, she volunteered at the Caribbean Medical Center operated by the British Red Cross.

And, she served at a Lepet colony on the island of Chakachaka one day a week while at the medical center.

Since the 1970s, she has spent a minimum 12 hours a week at the Greater Boston Chapter. And volunteers for other organizations, including the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus.

"I like politics," she mused.

Maryrose Mirick, executive director of Development and Volunteers at Quincy Medical Center, had this tribute:

"She's unbelievable. A bundle of energy. She believes in her causes. She believes in the hospital. She's a doer. She gets things done and in a nice way."

Mrs. Herbai keeps a close relationship with the American Red Cross South Area based in Quincy.

"She's wonderful," says Jackie Gardner, South Area director. "She really puts her heart into everything she does. And, she does a lot."

37 Other Nominees For Sun Citizen Of The Year

There were 37 other nominees for the 2000 Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award.

They are, in alphabetical order:

Laura Asci who was a dedicated and hard working guidance counselor at North Quincy High School for more than 20 years.

William G. Aylward who informs Quincy residents about what is happening on critical matters via Blacks' Creek newsletter.

Paul Baharian, executive director of Seniors Citizens Center, Inc., at 1000 Southern Artery, who does so much for the seniors living here.

Henry (Hank) Bradley, Quincy Veterans director, who puts all his effort into helping all people, not just veterans.

Sandra Buckley, director of the Quantum Community Center, who has dedicated many years improving the Quantum community with her hard work and dedication to its people.

George Burke, a prime example of what an outstanding citizen in a community represents, giving back to the city of his talents, his time and his generosity.

John Cain, a great dad and a good citizen and coach.

Joseph Desmond, who has given his heart and soul as well as 40 years of volunteer service in many capacities to the city he loves so much.

Michael Draicchio, a physical education teacher at Sterling Middle School, for dedicating endless hours to the city of Quincy and being a role model for the youth of the city.

Stephen J. Giove, former woodworking shop owner who gives his free time and volunteers for days a week at the Brockton VA Hospital at the age of 86 as well as teaches woodworking to some patients.

Al Grazioso and Malcolm McNeil, for their commitment to the youth of Quincy as presidents of the Quincy Youth Hockey Board of Directors and Quincy Youth Soccer Board of Directors respectively.

Anthony Gulizia, owner of a Quincy hair salon, who displays courage, leadership and charm; his personality is beyond compare.

Kaye Jordan, 80+ years old has been the volunteer nurse at the Houghs Neck Community Center for over 20 years who walks to people's homes in Houghs Neck to help out in elderly care.

Paul Kennedy, for his community service which includes serving as president of the Parish Council at Star of the Sea Church, a member of the Quincy Open Space Committee and co-chairman of the Quincy Conservation Commission.

Tom Koch, executive director of Quincy Parks, Cemetery and Forestry Department, who, along with the people who work for him, have made Quincy's parks, playgrounds, cemeteries and streets so beautiful.

Frank LaPierre for his approximately 40 year commitment to youth activities (hockey and T-ball) in the City of Quincy. His programs emphasize participation of all children regardless of their ability level which fosters self-confidence in young children.

John Leahy, a nice man who talks to me and also takes me food shopping.

Bernice Mader, who led the effort to reduce noise caused by airplanes over Quincy and for effectively working on Quincy projects — including saving the Tide Water Mill on Southern Artery — without self publicity.

David and Rose McCarthy, a "shining example of a couple who have faith in each other and in their city. They are true heroes who are committed not only to the city but to their family and each other."

Frank McCauley, one of the city's most active and committed community leaders of the 20th century, for devoting the past two years of his life to writing a comprehensive history of Quincy — Quincy, Massachusetts: A Political History, 1888-2000.

Susan McKeon, active in the founding of the QUILL program which brings adults with special needs and learning impairments into a structured academic environment where they learn to use computers and other life living skills.

Earl Metzler, principal of Sterling Middle School, who has made Sterling one of the best middle schools in the city. He's a hands-on type of principal — if there's a problem, he is there to solve it.

Fr. Bob Monagle, for his work with citizens of all ages in Quincy, from youth to seniors. Never says no.

George Nason, a dedicated, hard-working volunteer for Habitat for Humanity, Bethany Congregational Church, Telephone Company Pioneers, and many other community affairs.

Gregory Newton, for his dedication to a number of very important local community issues, including environmental concerns.

Kenneth O'Connell, a wonderful husband and father who volunteers at school, church and at Cub Scouts.

Morgan and Ruth O'Shea for their continuing service to St. John's Parish and volunteer serving at Quincy Medical Center.

Annette Paglierani for more than three decades of volunteer dedicated service to the Quincy Art Association and her three years of volunteer services co-chairperson of the new and successful Quincy ArtsFest.

Matteo Panarelli who attends every City Council meeting and asks questions that need answering for the benefit of the citizens who cannot attend.

School Committeeman William Phelan because he worked so carefully and diligently with great integrity to protect the students and teachers of Quincy High School.

Zaida Hassan Shaw, a ray of hope for the General Dynamics employees who have gone through so much in the past and present and for her unselfish dedication and work for the growing Islamic community.

Ed Spargo, a pillar of the community. He sends hundreds of letters and articles on healthy living and keeping a positive and thankful attitude.

Richard T. Sweeney, Jr., who leads a very busy life but puts his family first. He would do anything for Quincy, his hometown and the place he loves the most.

Louis Tozzi, Special Education Director at Quincy Public Schools, who has served so well over these many years and has also helped in the Jimmy Kennedy Race for Lou Gehrig's disease research.

Rosemary Wahlberg for her successful efforts in bringing school lunch to Quincy and for helping those in need over many decades.

USS Salem Move May Be Delayed Several Months

A proposed summer re-location of the USS Salem from its berth at the Fore River Shipyard to the MDC's Squantum Point Park off Marina Bay will most likely be delayed several months, confirms the museum ship's Executive Director Joanne Condon Walsh.

"It may be the fall before we can re-locate," said Condon Walsh, adding that the approval process for dredging and mooring of the ship was moving forward but that the $600,000 dredging job would probably not be accomplished before the Feb. 15 deadline, after which the site is off-limits during the summer spawning of shellfish.

Condon Walsh, however, faces a more daunting challenge to the Salem's re-location plans in the form of Marina Bay residents opposed to the move and a resolve passed Jan. 16 by the City Council going on record against state mitigation funds for the re-location.

The resolve, authored by Ward 6 Councillor and re-location opponent Joseph Newton, was passed unanimously by a voice vote and is one example, Condon Walsh says, of the lack of constructive dialogue on the issue.

"Quite candidly, I'm pretty disappointed," Condon Walsh said of Newton's resolve. "To make such long lasting decisions without hearing both sides is irresponsible."

Condon Walsh said she has written, phoned, and faxed Newton in an attempt to discuss the issue but has received only one fax in return.

"There's no dialogue," said Condon Walsh, repeating her request that Newton meet with her or the board of directors to whom she answers. "There are two sides to the issue and I think the councillor is only hearing one side."

Newton responded that he had in fact requested that all communication on the controversial issue be put in writing but countered that he had listened to both sides and had agreed with his constituents.

"We're at opposite sides of the spectrum," Newton said of his and Condon-Walsh's positions. "I've already taken the position of my constituents not to support the move. I can meet with the board, and I have nothing against the Salem, but I am adamantly opposed to re-location. It is just not the right fit for Marina Bay."

Condon Walsh also took issue with the wording of the resolve, which she called "somewhat confusing."

"We are not looking for new state funding. We are accessing funds that are already available for these type of activities," said Condon Walsh, explaining that some funds were available from the Waterways Division of the Department of Environmental Management and that other funds could be available as mitigation from the Massachusetts Highway Department, which has already given similar mitigation funds to Salem neighbors Harbor Express and Twin Rivers as it continues with the Fore River Bridge Project, the 10-year project which makes the moving of the Salem necessary.

Newton disagrees. "Regardless of how you say it, it's state funding and why is state funding being used for a private corporation?" he asked. "Why would the government help a private company move out to Marina Bay, to a place where area residents don't want it?"

Newton and Condon-Walsh also disagree as to the traffic business impacts the moving of the Salem would have on the area, all of which leaves little room for discussion.

"We're a ship in a shipyard or a boat in a boatyard," said Condon-Walsh. "Either way, it's a marina and I don't know what else you'd expect in a marina."

"It seems like a logical place to go to me."

Ayers Discusses Pharmacy Benefits With Ward 4 Seniors

Rep. Bruce Ayers met recently with seniors at the Ward 4 Community Center to discuss the Senior Pharmacy Benefit Program and update them on legislation related to senior citizen issues.

"We as elected officials have an obligation to protect our seniors and it is extremely important with the high cost of medical coverage that the seniors know this program is available to them," said Ayers.

Accompanying Ayers was Paul Bulger, assistant director of the Senior Pharmacy Benefit Program, to help outline the application process, benefits and eligibility of the plan during a question and answer period. Seniors who are inter-

Robert Galligan Appointed Governor By Best Western

Robert Galligan, Innkeeper of the Best Western Adams Inn in North Quincy, has been appointed a regional governor by Best Western International, Inc.

"I had no questions in asking Bob to serve as governor of Region 7-21 and we were very pleased when he accepted," said Nyan Patel, director of District 7 for Best Western. "Since Bob joined the Best Western system in October of 1995, his property has always shown an outstanding level of achievement by having received the coveted 'Directors Award' for each of his six property inspections."

To receive such recognition, Patel said, a property must receive a score of better than 950 out of 1000 points during an unannounced inspection.

Galligan, Patel said, has been recognized twice by Best Western's Design Staff and Committee and recently served on the Ethics Committee which established ethics standards for Best Western International.

In addition, Patel noted Galligan's position as co-chairman of the New England Co-Op, which represents Best Western International both nationally and internationally. "His efforts have shown a keen understanding of the international traveler and allowed for growth in our market share," Patel said. "He has contributed in many ways to the success of his property and that of Best Western International."

Located at 29 Hancock St., the Best Western Adams Inn features 99 rooms along with meeting and function space. The Adams Pub offers limited late all year-round while the "Gazebo" is a seasonal function facility which can accommodate up to 200 people and overlooks the Neponset River.

Yoga, Meditation Workshop Feb. 9-14 At Faxon Commons

The Art of Living Foundation will present its six-session Art of Living Yoga and Meditation Workshop from Friday, Feb. 9 until Wednesday, Feb. 14 at Faxon Commons, 1037 Southern Artery.

Workshop cost is $250. Cost for seniors is $125 and for students, $75. All proceeds benefit the Art of Living Foundation, a non-profit educational and charitable organization.

Based on ancient Vedic knowledge, the course teaches breathing techniques to eliminate stress. One of the techniques taught, the Sudarshan Kriya, offers a powerful yet simple breathing technique which releases stress in the system and rejuvenates the body.

"The breath," says Dr. Ronnie Newman, director of Research for the Art of Living Foundation, "is the connecting link between the mind, the body, and the emotions. The breath is a key to vibrant health."

Hail To The Presidents In OT Thriller, 74-72

Quincy Back At .500 After Comeback Win Over North

By CHRIS POISSON

It lasted about a second, but it seemed like eternity for the Quincy and North Quincy boys' basketball teams.

When North Quincy's Brandon Sleeth let a three-pointer fly from nearly three feet beyond the arc at the end of overtime, both benches stood on their feet to watch the ball's parabolic flight.

It made a smooth landing onto the rim and appeared to be sinking to the bottom of the net, but then the ball suddenly felt some turbulence, took a cruel bounce and crashed onto the floor below.

The Red Raiders looked up at the scoreboard in disbelief, while an animated Dave Centrella jetted to the other end of court and dove onto the hardwood, where he was toppled by his teammates as they celebrated an unbelievable 74-72 thriller at home last Saturday.

"I thought it was in," said North Quincy head coach Ted Stevenson. "I wish it was in. I felt bad for the kids. They played very hard."

"Oh boy, that was half way in. Half way in," said Quincy head coach John Franceschini following the game. "What can I say? This was just a great Quincy-North Quincy basketball game."

Indeed, this heated rivalry has turned into an electrifying event in the past few years. With Quincy taking the last three contests against its neighbors by a combined 8 points, the Feb. 16 rematch at Hancock Street should only fuel another backyard brawl.

For Quincy (5-5, 3-4), the win means more than just bragging rights; it pushes them back to .500 as it heads into the second half of the season. Coming off tough losses to Plymouth South and Bridgewater-Raynham, a loss to North Quincy would have left postseason hopes on life support. Instead, the victory injects confidence as the Presidents saddle up for a tourney run.

"I can't tell you how much this means to the team," Franceschini said. "These kids were really focused on the fact that we needed to get to 5-5 going into the second half. I think that meant as much or more than beating North Quincy. To come back now and be 5-5 is a great shot in the arm for us."

For North Quincy (4-6, 1-5), it was the fourth loss in its last five games and it will need a huge second half of the season if it wants to avoid missing the playoffs for the third straight year. On Tuesday it hosted second-place Silver Lake and tomorrow (Friday) it takes on Taunton at home at 7 p.m.

"If we can turn it around starting now, we have a good shot at making the tournament," Stevenson said. "Going down the stretch, it's all teams we can beat."

In the first half, North Quincy had its way with Quincy on both ends of the floor. By the break, thanks to a 13-2 flurry in the middle of the frame, the Red Raiders enjoyed a comfortable 37-24 advantage. The Presidents looked sluggish, hitting only six field goals. If it weren't for its 10-of-14 free throw shooting, it would have had a crater to climb out of.

"We played a very good first half of basketball," Stevenson said. "But that has been our problem all year. Except for the first two games, we haven't played a complete game yet."

In the Quincy locker room, seniors Mark Robertson (10 points) and Centrella spoke to their teammates first. "They simply said, 'Guys, this is not how we can play. And there is no way in our last year we want to go out this way in front of our home crowd,'" Franceschini said. "It sort of ignited something."

For the first two minutes, though, it looked like their speech was a dud, as the Red Raiders opened the second half with a 7-0 spurt for a 20-point lead. But then sophomore guard Matt Ramponi buried a three as the shot clock expired — and Quincy began pecking away at North Quincy's lead.

"We became more disciplined, and when you become more disciplined you get better shots," Franceschini said. "I think the big thing was we got good shot selections and obviously we made some big shots. More importantly, we made big free throws."

The Presidents shot a perfect 13 of 13 in the second half and an impressive 24 of 31 for the game. The Red Raiders, on the other hand, struggled from the charity stripe, shooting 17 of 30.

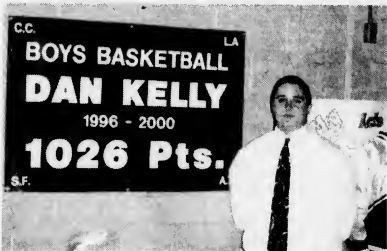

Quincy engineered a 17-3 run over a five-minute stretch to pull within 53-49 with 6:56 remaining. Centrella, who had 8 points in the first half, began to heat up, scorching the Red Raiders for 21 second-half points while adding tenacious defensive play.

"Dave turns into a gear that I don't even know where he gets it from," Franceschini said. "Not only in the shots that he made, but in his defensive intensity. We feed off of him. He's at the point of our press and I swear when the kids look at him they start juicing it up. It's just infectious."

"Our defense was awesome," he added. "That is our bread and butter and it was again [Saturday]. When we had to, we either stole the ball or caused a turnover."

Trailing 66-59, Centrella nailed a huge try to slice the lead to 4 points with 40 seconds left. North Quincy's Phil McGillicuddy, who was held to 5 points, fouled out with about two minutes left and the Red Raiders felt the effects without their top ball handler.

They turned the ball over on their next two possessions and the Presidents capitalized both times. The last was when sophomore Kevin O'Connell drove to the hoop for a layup that knotted the score at 66 to send the game into OT.

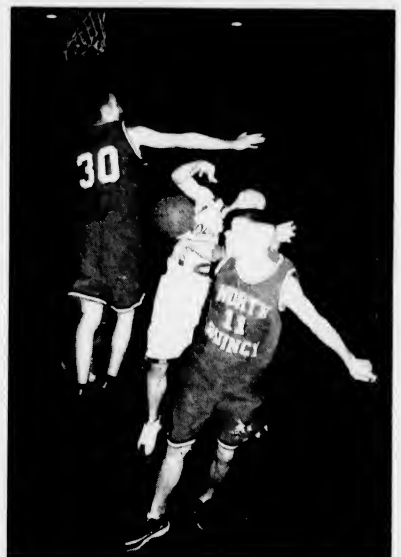

In the extra session, Centrella delivered in the clutch again. He canned another three that evened the score at 70 and followed that with a spectacular drive for Quincy's first lead of the game with 34 seconds remaining.

After Sleeth (23 points) drilled a jumper to even the score at 72, Quincy came back down the other end and O'Connell found the ball in his hands with time running out. The first-year varsity player drove baseline, lost his dribble under the basket and somehow managed to wiggle through the defense for the game-winner.

"Kevin, in all honesty, was fighting the flu," Franceschini said. "He took a beating in the B-R game. That kid, I'll tell you, he's gold. He just made some real good decisions at the end."

"I can't be any prouder for these kids," he added. "It's nice for the seniors to beat North, but we want to get to the dance and that's what's more important right now."

QUINCY'S DAVE CENTRELLA (12) is fouled as he drives to the hoop against North Quincy's John O'Connell (30) and Joe Holleran (11).

North Bounces Quincy, Improves To 8-2

By CHRIS POISSON

In the pre-season, head coach Doug MacFarlane believed the North Quincy girls' basketball team would get off to a quick start, but he never pictured it would have an 8-2 record at the midpoint of the season.

"I'm real pleased with the way the girls are playing," MacFarlane said. "We're 8-2 now. I never dreamed we'd be 8-2 at this point in time. I figured 6-4 and I would've been happy."

With last Saturday afternoon's 53-28 dismantling of rival Quincy, the Red Raiders have now won four straight games for the second time this season. Their only losses were at Randolph in the season opener and at Bridgewater-Raynham earlier this month.

North Quincy holds a 5-1 mark in league play, which places them second behind Bridgewater-Raynham (7-0). On Tuesday, it traveled to Silver Lake and tomorrow (Friday) it heads to Taunton.

"Things are really going well," MacFarlane said. "As long as we keep working hard, I think we're going to have a successful second half of the year, too."

Quincy hosted Taunton Tuesday and tomorrow it will play Barnstable at home at 7 p.m.

In last Saturday's meeting, North Quincy simply overmatched the Presidents, which have struggled the entire season and are still searching for their first win of the year.

In what has become a tradition, MacFarlane started the senior roleplayers in the city show-down. Nicole Grazioso, Kellee Conley, Jen Conley, Jen Diert and Laura Clark earned some quality playing time at the start of the game.

"We do it every year," MacFarlane said. "We give those kids some time because they work hard in practice. They deserve it. It's a big game. They didn't come out as strong as I hoped they would."

And Quincy took advantage by doing some nice things to build a 6-0 lead. Senior forward Kerry Eaton scored two buckets in the paint and senior Christina Keenan also scored in the post.

But when starters Casey Ridge and Lauren Sleeth entered the game with 11:36 left in the half, the Red Raiders went on a scoring binge with a 20-0 run over the next eight minutes. Sleeth, the fifth leading scorer in the OCL with 14.7 points per game, tallied 9 points in this stretch. She also made three consecutive steals, with her scoring two layups and Conley one.

"Once we got our regulars back in the game we took a big lead," MacFarlane said. "It was a nice game because I got to play everybody."

Eaton scored Quincy's final six points of the half as it trailed, 22-12. In the second half, the Presidents scored the first basket to cut the lead to 8 points, but were never a real threat after that as the Red Raiders used runs of 13-2 and 10-0 to blow the game open.

For Quincy, the lone bright spot in the second frame was senior forward Andrea Pelletier, who scored 8 of the team's 16 points.

Quincy Wrestlers Lydon, Hern State Contenders

By CHRIS POISSON

As the Quincy High School wrestling season unfolds, two grapplers have emerged as legitimate contenders for the state championship in their respective weight classes.

Senior Rory Lydon (215 pounds) and junior Joe Hern (152), ranked third and fourth in the state, respectively, have put together a Goldberglake winning streak this season.

In last Wednesday's 60-12 home win over Taunton, Quincy's first OCL victory, Lydon and Hern trampled their opponents to extend their records to 23-0 in dual-meet competition. Earlier in the season, Lydon racked up an impressive third-place finish at the highly competitive Lowell Holiday Tournament.

While Hern's success may not be a surprise, considering his fifth-place finish at the state tournament last season, Lydon's performance has been like the Perfect Storm, as he has popped up out of nowhere to make his name known around the mats.

"He has surprised everybody," said Lou Venturelli, who is in his 14th season as head coach. "Rory has only been wrestling for two years. People are like, 'Who is this kid?' He just came upon the wrestling world this year. Nobody really knew who he was, and all of a sudden he's doing what he's doing."

"When kids look at him on the mat, they think they might have an easy match. But he's really very quick for a 215 pounder and he's very strong. I can attest to that from being on the mat with him."

Last season, Lydon compiled about a .500 record and didn't place in the sectionals. "But then he went to work in the summer," Venturelli said. "He got himself into pretty good shape. He dropped about 20 pounds before the year started."

And it's that work ethic beyond the mat that has pushed both Lydon and Hern into the spotlight.

"The great thing about both Joe and Rory is that they consider wrestling a 12-month a year sport," Venturelli said. "They both run in the morning before school. They do that extra leg work. And last summer they both went to camps."

Hern traveled to Orlando, Fla., to participate in the AAU National Scholastic Duals Wrestling Tournament, where he placed fourth in his weight class. Lydon, meanwhile, took part in a 30-day intensive training camp at Boston University with legendary coach Carl Adams. "He did that on his own," Venturelli said. "It cost him about $1,300 to do that."

While Lydon and Hern are the so-called "stars of the team," Venturelli believes juniors Mike Murphy (119) and Scott Kelley (160), both 16-5, have a shot at the state tournament. Murphy, who finished seventh in the 112-pound weight class at the states last year, might have the better chance.

"He comes in with people knowing that he is a good wrestler," Venturelli said. "He's in a tough weight class this year, so he has picked up five losses. But he has been improving as the year has been going on, so I'm hoping he can qualify for the states. He has a real good shot."

Although senior Dan Dorsey (14-9) may not be ranked high in the 130-pound class, Venturelli appreciates what he has done this year and praises him for his dedication. "He has wrestled in every match," he said. "He's been there for us. He's had a tough year with injuries and illnesses, but he has fought through them all. I give him a lot of credit for sticking it out."

Sophomore Dan Coleman, who struggled as a rookie last season, has made great strides in his second year. Wrestling in the heavyweight class, he has put together a 9-10 record. "He has really come a long way," Venturelli said. "As a freshman, I think he had only one win all year. He's only a sophomore, so I'm hoping he can lose a little weight and get into good shape."

Other wrestlers contributing to the team this year are:

Assistant coach Mike Gendron is in his third year with the team.

Sacred Heart Eighth Grade Boys Win Archbishop Williams Tournament

The Sacred Heart eighth grade boys' basketball team from North Quincy recently finished ahead of 12 teams to win the Archbishop Williams Holiday Basketball Tournament.

In the championship game, Dean Sandonato pumped in 22 points to power Sacred Heart past a tough West Roxbury squad, 45-42. Kyle Costa's steal and subsequent foul shot in the final 15 seconds sealed the title.

David Jaehnig, who played a great game at the point, scored 6 of his 8 points down the stretch in what was a see-saw battle for the trophy. Chris Marinelli (8 points) and Nick Malvesti were outstanding on the boards. Rick Schifone played tough defense and scored an important second-half basket.

Sandonato and Jaehnig were named Co-MVP's of the tournament. Marinelli was given a special award by Archbishop Williams head basketball coach Ged Phelan. Phelan, who was co-captain of the 1974 North Quincy basketball team, was pleased to see the first annual tournament won by a North Quincy-based team.

In the semifinal game, Jaehnig scored all 11 of his points in the first half to help Sacred Heart to a 39-31 win over Braintree. Sandonato scored a team-high 19 points, while Costa and Marinelli pitched in with 4 apiece.

In earlier games, Sacred Heart crushed Hingham, 37-17, as Costa drilled two long three-pointers on his way to a game-high 12 points. Marinelli added 11 points. Mike Faherty, Robert Gardner (3 points) and Malvesti played strong defensive games.

Sacred Heart knocked off cross-town rival St. Ann's (Wollaston), 44-15, as Faherty netted 8 points. Tom Ross, Tim Groceffa and Schifone also turned in fine offensive efforts. For St. Ann's, John Fitzgerald, Tim Kennedy and Megan Foley played well.

The Quincy High School 50's Alumni will hold a Valentine Scholarship Dance in memory of Bob "Pap" Papile Saturday, Feb. 3 from 7:30 p.m. to midnight at Sons of

In the opening round, Sacred Heart defeated an aggressive Weymouth team, 55-29. Malvesti, Groceffa and Faherty each scored 6 points.

Players receiving championship awards were Kyle Costa, John Dahlquist, Kevin Donovan, Mike Faherty, Rob Gardner, Tim Groceffa, Dave Jaehnig, Nick Malvesti, Chris Marinelli, Tom Ross, Dean Sandonato and Rick Schifone. The team is coached by Mark Jaehnig and Fran Sandonato.

North Girls' Track Posting Victories

The North Quincy High School girls' track team continues to rack up wins and high places with outstanding performances at the Brown Invitational, Red Auerbach Freshman-Sophomore, Dartmouth Relays and meets with OCL foes.

At the Brown Invitational, the high jump relay of Krystle Neves, Katy Mercurio and Maria McGinness took second place with a combined total of 13'9". The shot-put relay of Sherie DeMonte, Jackie Murphy and May Ho finished in fifth place with a combined 84'10".

With an impending blizzard, North Quincy only brought one relay for the second day — the shuttle hurdle team of Makini Thompson, Laura Wells, Colleen Lahar and Neves. The Red Raiders were doing well when Neves hit a hurdle and hyperextended her knee falling to the track. She managed to finish, but the team placed eighth.

"I thought her season was over," said head coach Geoff Hennessy. "But she's going to be fine. No ligament damage was detected."

A week later Neves was back leading her team at the Auerbach meet. She took fourth in the high jump, clearing 5'0" — her best ever indoors. Brenna O'Brien was also a bright spot, running 1:52.8 in the 600 meters.

In a tri-meet, North Quincy lost to Bridgewater-Raynham, 60-40, and to Barnstable, 52-48. Despite the losses, the Red Raiders brought the house down by running the fastest time to date in the 4x200 in 1:52.6. The quartet of April Rodgers, Sarah Gregory, Katelyn McDonald and Thompson missed the school record by three-tenths of a second.

The 4x400 team of Natalie Caron, Lahar, Brenna O'Brien and Kellyrose O'Brien ran 4:31.0 — a state qualifier. Kellyrose O'Brien, McDonald and Lahar also qualified in the 300 meters.

In the OCL JV meet at Taunton, DeMonte qualified for the states with a 30'8" toss.

At the Dartmouth Relays, Kellyrose O'Brien ran 66.01 in the 400 meters despite getting tripped with 50 meters left. DeMonte finished fifth in the unseeded shot-put.

At the Paul Davey Invitational for freshman and sophomores at Franklin High School, Mercurio won the high jump with a 4'8" clear, and Jessica Jacques finished sixth in the 600 meters.

North Quincy took the annual Quincy meet, 21-16. It rested many of its top athletes with the state relays the next day, giving some of the younger girls a chance to shine. Alicia Cronin and Rachel Enos finished 1-2 in the 55 meters and May Ling Luc and Melissa McKenna took 1-2 in the 300 meters.

Lily Luoran a personal best of 4:02.1 to win the 1,000 meters and Lisa Rubino won the mile. Jacques won the long jump in 14'11/2". Katie McKenna finished second in the 600 meters. Elyse Dolbec and McGinness finished 1-2 in the high jump and DeMonte and Murphy 1-2 in the shot-put.

The 4x200 relay team of Catherine Tan, Cronin, Enos and McKenna ran an unofficial 2:05.4, with Cronin and McKenna clocking 30-second splits.

At the state relays, North Quincy scored 8 points, but managed to place in the high jump (third), shuttle hurdles (sixth) and long jump (sixth), while just missing in the shot-put (eighth), 4x200 (seventh), shuttle dash (ninth) and 4x400 (10th).

"We managed to do our season best in nearly everything," Hennessy said.

North Quincy's next meet is the McIntyre Relays Sunday at the Lewis Center.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

The Winter Blues: Seasonal Affective Disorder

By PHIL QUINN, Sc.D.,
Licensed Psychologist
Bayview Associates
A Program of South Shore
Mental Health

Days are shorter, the temperature outside is in the single digits, and you just can't shake those blues. Doctors happen on every other "If so, you could be one of the millions of people throughout the world who suffer from Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD), or the milder form of the disorder referred to as the "Winter Blues."

What IS SAD?

Seasonal Affective Disorder, also called SAD, is a form of depression that occurs in the darker seasons of the year. It usually begins in the fall and starts to go away by the springtime. It is brought on by insufficient light. As the days shorten in the fall and winter, we are exposed to less light and this causes changes in our brain chemistry.

Could I Have SAD?

The symptoms of SAD are the same as the symptoms of depression. The difference is, people suffering from SAD experience their depression starting in late September or early October and the symptoms often begin to improve in the spring. The symptoms of SAD can include:

- Loss of energy
- Fatigue
- Overeating and weight gain
- Oversleeping without feeling refreshed
- Loss of interest in normal activities
- Less outgoing and social
- Inability to concentrate
- Irritability

- Alcohol abuse
- Suicidal thoughts

Where Do I Go For Help?

If you suffer from SAD, you may be helped by increasing your exposure to natural or artificial light. To do this, increase the amount of light you get, especially early in the morning. It can be helpful to spend between 15 to 45 minutes in bright light (3 to 5 times brighter than a normal room light) every day. This can be accomplished both indoors or out. It is important not to stare directly into the light source and, if you are going to be outside, make sure you protect your skin from sun damage.

If your depression persists, you can discuss these symptoms with a mental health professional. SAD can be successfully managed with therapies utilized in treating other forms of depression. A mental health professional can discuss these options with you.

PHIL QUINN, Sc.D., Licensed Psychologist at South Shore Mental Health, warns that some symptoms of Seasonal Affective Disorder (SAD), a form of depression that occurs in the darker seasons of the year, can include loss of energy, fatigue, overeating, and oversleeping.

Bayview Associates, a program of South Shore Mental Health, has licensed psychologists, social workers, and psychiatrists who can help. For more information, call (617) 847-1950.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"
When do I need a hearing aid?

This question is debatable, but there are several things to ask yourself. Are you turning up the TV louder than others can tolerate? Do you avoid social situations that often prove embarrassing? How often do you ask people to repeat themselves? All these symptoms point to a hearing loss that is affecting your lifestyle. A hearing loss is a frustrating experience. You should always have a loss examined in case of underlying medical conditions. If you choose to try a hearing aid, it is because you want to live life to its fullest. It's a mentally tough person that says "I want to hear better; I don't care what it takes." Years ago vanity was an issue; now with completely in-the-canal models it isn't. Background noise also has been greatly reduced with the advent of digital and programmable products. The human brain wants to hear; it is more difficult to recover from a hearing loss when you wait too long. Hearing is a learned process and the brain needs continuous practice processing information sent from the inner ear. We offer a sixty day trial, so "what are you waiting for?" Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

WHAT TO DO ABOUT THAT BACK PAIN

Most people will experience some degree of back pain at one time or another in their lifetime. Experts point to the general trend in our society to do more and more sitting, coupled with a general decline in our level of physical fitness as possible causes. Regardless if the back pain is brought on by an accident, poor posture, straining while working around the house, or playing a sport, or by doing too much bending and lifting, there is a lot of confusion as to what to do for treatment.

There are some general recommendations that often prove helpful to patients suffering from lower back pain. In my practice, I strongly urge patients to apply ice immediately after injuring their lower back. The ice tends to reduce any swelling or inflammation while also serving as a natural pain reliever. People with lower back pain should avoid excessive sitting because the seated position dramatically increases the structural pressure on the lower back. The recommended posture is known as the fetal position, whereby the patient lies on his/her side with both knees brought up toward their chest. Excessive exercise, bending, twisting and/or lifting should be avoided, as these actions tend to aggravate an injured lower back.

While I have taken the liberty of offering some basic suggestions on the care of back pain, there is no substitute for a thorough evaluation and examination to correctly diagnose the cause of the problem. The doctor of chiropractic, with intensive training and knowledge of the spine, is eminently qualified to treat patients suffering from lower back pain.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment, please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Any time a lie comes forth from our lips, we have dishonored ourselves, eroded our integrity and cast mud on our own character and name. . . . There was a time not so long ago when our name was extremely important and our honor above price. Either our word is dependable or it is not. We are either honest or we are not. It doesn't matter if you are a preacher, politician or parent. No one will place more value on your name than you do. . . . Whatever occupation or service our lot in life may be, we need to bring to it integrity and honor. If it is a job that cannot be approached honorably, then we should not have any part of it. The price is too high.

Maintaining honor has always been a battle. George Washington said, "Few men have virtue to withstand the highest bidder." MacIntyre said, "The measure of a man's real character is what he would do, if he knew he would never be found out."

John Prescott, 70

Former Norfolk DA Prosecutor

A funeral Mass for John C. Prescott, 70, of Quincy, a criminal case attorney, was celebrated Tuesday at St. John the Baptist Church.

Mr. Prescott died Jan. 18 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston after a short illness.

Born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, he was raised in Somerville and attended parochial schools in the Somerville area.

He graduated from Malden Catholic High School in 1948, and later from Boston University and Suffolk University Law School. He passed the bar exam in 1964.

He was a prosecutor for former Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt in the early 1970's. He was also a public defender and ran the Boston office of the Massachusetts Defenders Committee.

As a prosecutor and defense lawyer, he tried many high-profile cases and taught a number of training programs through the Boston Bar Association and the Committee for Public Counsel Services.

He was a Quincy resident for the past 40 years.

He coached Quincy youth baseball and hockey for many years and was a life-long athlete who played goalie for New England Office Connection of the Quincy Senior League until he died.

He was an Air Force veteran of the Korean War.

He is survived by his wife, Gertrude H. Corcoran Prescott, three sons, John Prescott of Duxbury, Glen Prescott of New Orleans, and Dean Prescott of Norwell; three daughters, Beverly Cammone and Sharon Healey Mahoney, both of Norwell, and Lori Carta of Albany, Ga.; two brothers, Jerry Prescott of Bellan Beach, Fla., and Stephen Prescott of Clearwater, Fla.; two sisters, Shirley Seavey of Epping, N.H., and Carol Smith of Clearwater, Fla.; 14 grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

Donations may be made to Quincy High School Hall of Fame, c/o Russ Erikson, 20 Bunker Hill Lane 02169.

Carol Holden, 60

Retired Office Employee

A funeral service for Carol L. (Andrews) Holden, 60, of Quincy, a retired office employee, was officiated by The Rev. Fred Klittich Jan. 20 at South Weymouth Church of the Nazarene, 385 Ralph Talbot St.

Mrs. Holden died Jan. 17 at home after a long illness.

Mrs. Holden worked at Russ Electric Co., Hingham for five years.

Born in Boston and educated in Canton, she graduated from Canton High School. She lived in Canton before moving to Quincy 40 years ago.

The wife of Kenneth C. Holden, she is survived by four sons, David C. Rivard, Michael A. Rivard, and Albert H. Pagnano of Quincy, and Paul J. Rivard of Brockton; a daughter, Marie T. Rivard-Postell of Weymouth; a stepson, Charles A. Holden of Randolph; two stepdaughters, Connie Sue McIntyre of Canada and Charlotte A. Fulghum of Weymouth; a brother, Albert H. Andrews of Florida; two sisters, Joan K. Henderson of Randolph and Claire Reardon of Canton; and 10 grandchildren.

Burial was in Pine Hill Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy Center.

Ernest Allen Logren, 81

Former Salvage Yard Owner

A memorial service and burial for Ernest Allen Logren, 81, of Silver Springs, Fla., formerly of Quincy, a former salvage yard owner, will be scheduled in Massachusetts at a later date.

Mr. Logren died Jan. 16 after a short illness.

Mr. Logren owned and operated E.A. Salvage in Quincy for many years until he retired and moved to Florida in 1975.

He was born and raised in Quincy.

He is survived by his wife, Catherine (Palmasano) Logren of Silver Springs, Fla.; three daughters, Barbara Cristina of Hanover, Marilyn Romeo of Hanson, and Christine Logren of Quincy; four grandchildren; and one great-granddaughter.

Funeral arrangements are being made by Hiers Funeral Parlor, Ocala, Fla.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Information from a relative needs to be shared with other family members. Some people's feelings might be hurt, but your explanation should smooth things over.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Workplace progress is slow but steady. Meanwhile, all you Ferdinands and Ferdandas can lift your winter-weary spirits by surrounding yourself with flowers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Partnerships — domestic or professional — come under some strain these days. Talk things out coolly and calmly to avoid raising the tension levels.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) With that personal problem either resolved or close to a resolution, you can start to lay the groundwork for that career change you've been contemplating.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Leonine courage helps you decide about a possibly risky but promising career change. Moving into a new den in a new city could follow.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to let your strong Virgo sense of skepticism keep you from taking on a challenge that could make an important difference in your life.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Despite several setbacks, that new venture you started on a while ago can still work out. You need to make some readjustments to get yourself back on track.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Pluto (one of your ruling planets — the other is Mars) favors prudent financial investments at this time. A pesky health problem begins to clear up.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Change is strong in your aspect. Look into the possibility of moving into a new career. A chance to travel also opens new opportunities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Spend more time with your spouse or partner. Travel is favored — especially if you plan to go somewhere other than your usual destinations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That personal relationship has improved under your tender, loving care. But some problems remain. A trusted third party might help you resolve them.

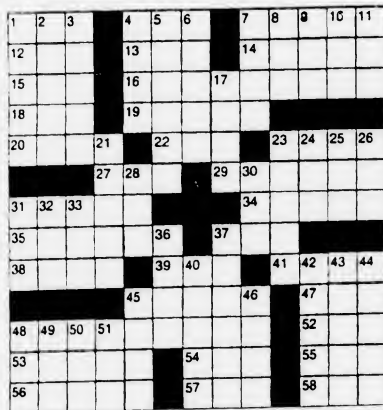

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Put your strong Piscean intuition to work to help you assess the true motives of someone who is trying to appeal to your compassionate nature.

THIS WEEK: You are a dreamer who gets things done. You also inspire others to follow your determination to make the world a better place.

Docket No. 00E0104PP1
To: Eustachio Cusianna of Quincy in said County and Adele J. Cusianna of Quincy
in said County, respondents, and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Luigi Servizio of Beverly in the County, Essex representing that he holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County Norfolk and briefly described as follows: the land in that part of said Quincy called Atlantic, being lot numbered Four Hundred Thirty, on a plan of "Norfolk Downs," by Charles D. Elliot, dated April 1892, and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, Book of Plans 14, Plan 640, and bounded and described as follows:

NORTHERLY by Billings Road, fifty-five (55) feet, EASTERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Thirty-
One, on said plan, one hundred twelve and 9/10 (112.9)
feet.

SOUTHERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Eleven on said plan, forty-five (45) feet and

WESTERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Ten on said plan, one hundred nine and 1/10 (109.1) feet.
Containing or believed to contain plan of 400 square feet of land.

Whereby conveying all of my right, title and interest in the above premises conveyed to me and to Eustachio
Cusianna and Adele J.
Cusianna, husband and wife, by deed of Frank Wynne, of said Quincy (erroneously referred to in said
deed as being of Suffolk County, Massachusetts)
dated April 15, 1969 and recorded with said Registry in Book 4586, Page 1, setting forth that he desire that - all
- of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $300,000.00 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance
of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided,
either at private sale or pub-

David Browne Plays With Inaugural Band

David Browne of Ardell Street, Quincy, was at President George Bush's inauguration Saturday as a member of the nationally recognized University of Massachusetts Minutemen Marching Band.

The 300-member band was one of 38 bands selected to march in the 1.65-mile inaugural parade up Pennsylvania Avenue. The band last marched in an inaugural parade in 1981 and performed at the inaugural ceremonies in 1985.

"This is a prestigious honor for the Marching Band and for UMass," said George Parks, the director. "I'm especially pleased by the opportunity for our students. They will remember this event forever."

RIGHT UNDER YOUR NOSE

There are some car problems that owners can detect with their noses. For instance, a light, sharp odor is often an indication of an electrical short and burning insulation. As a matter of safety, try not to drive the vehicle until the problem is diagnosed. The smell of burning sulfur (rotten eggs) usually indicates a problem in the catalytic converter or other emission control devices. This smell should also prompt immediate diagnosis and repair. The smell of gasoline vapors after a failed start may mean that the engine is flooded. Wait a few minutes before trying again. If the odor persists, there may be a leak in the fuel system, which is another potentially dangerous problem.

requiring immediate attention. Notice a strange smell when you drive your car? Bring it to LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. If you need us to look at any system in your car or truck, our ASE Certified technicians have the skills to handle it. You'll find us located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. 300 Residential Units Planned For Hancock Lot

Councillor Stephen Durkin to gather resident and business feedback on the issue.

Mannarino will be joined in the presentation by DPW Commissioner David Colton; Planning Director Richard Meade; Mo Freedman, an engineer and urban planner familiar with the project; and representatives from Earth Tech, the firm handling the Quincy Concourse Project.

"We've tried to touch base with everyone," said Mannarino, who said the next step for the project will be public input and dialogue in an attempt to build consensus prior to appearing before the City Council for the project's RFP (Request For Proposals) stage.

Quincy 2000 will address a general membership meeting of The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) Jan. 30 at 8:30 a.m. at The Fleet Bank Conference Room, Chestnut St.

"We're waiting to see the details of the proposal and also intend to see what kind of impact there will be during the construction phase," QCBPA Executive Director Maralin Manning said Tuesday.

Quincy 2000 also intends to meet with the Quincy Concourse Citizens Advisory Committee and various other associations in an attempt to address possible concerns over the project.

Mannarino said Quincy 2000's Real Estate Committee, led by its chairman, State Street Vice-President Thomas Cataldo, studied all the alternative proposals for the site, including the mixed-use retail and residential "Dickinson Proposal," but decided that the current plan was best because it ensured more parking and more downtown residents at no city cost.

"The Dickinson Proposal was a great proposal, but it always depended on a city commitment to fund a public parking garage, and we were never able to obtain that," Mannarino said.

The current proposal, said Mannarino, has taken steps to blend in with the existing neighborhood along Revere Rd., creating a multi-dimensional "townhouse-look" with four-story buildings at Revere Rd. rising to seven or eight-story buildings as the project moves toward Cottage Ave.

"Obviously, more (planning) time had to be devoted to the Revere Rd. section," Mannarino said.

As for traffic, Mannarino concurred with the DPW's Colton that the Quincy Concourse Project had always incorporated a development on the Hancock Lot into its design. "There's less traffic impact with this proposal than with the Dickinson Proposal, or any other proposal," Mannarino said.

The proposed units would also be placed farther back than the existing footprint and would include landscaping improvements.

Noting the growing concern for affordable housing in the city, Mannarino added that he fully expects the project to have "linkage" where funds are set aside for affordable housing construction in the city.

As for construction of Phase II of the Quincy Concourse, DPW Commissioner Colton said state funding had not been allocated but was part of the state's Transportation Improvement Plan for the Boston area.

"It's on the list and we just need to know which year it will be funded" said Colton, adding funds could be made available by Fiscal Year 2002 (Fall of this year) or Fiscal Year 2003 at the latest.

The $5 million state cost for Phase II, Colton said, is for construction costs and does not include necessary land takings which will be undertaken by the city.

Colton confirmed that Phase I work was on schedule to finish in September of this year and that a 25 percent design plan for Phase II had been submitted to the Massachusetts Highway Department last spring.

Both the fully completed Quincy Concourse and the Hancock Lot Development, Colton said, were designed to work in tandem but it was not essential that either one or the other be completed first.

"Both projects should be done," said Colton, who underscored the city's commitment to both phases of the concourse project which will connect the east and west sides of Hancock St.

Phase I of the concourse connects the Burgin Parkway to Ross Way. Phase II begins at Ross Way and connects to Hancock St. via the former site of Kincaide's Furniture and joins with Mechanic St. and Revere Rd.

As of press time, Councillor Durkin could not be reached for comment on the proposal.

Under Police Security During 9 AM - 4 PM Display Quincy Tankard On First Public View At Sun This Friday

By TOM HENSHAW

The Quincy Tankard, rescued from the auction block by former Rep. George Burke, will be displayed to the public for the first time Friday, Feb. 2, in the window of The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St.

The 234-year-old solid silver tankard will be displayed from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. under police security provided by Mayor James Sheets. It will then be placed in a vault elsewhere in the city for safe keeping until its next public viewing.

The tankard, donated to United First Parish Church by the city's namesake, Col. John Quincy, in 1767, was among 11 pieces of colonial silver auctioned off by the church to pay for desperately needed repairs to the church building.

The auction at Sotheby's in New York brought an unexpectedly high $2.7 million to the church. Burke paid $160,000 for the tankard, plus $21,000 in commission to Sotheby's, $9,087.50 in New York State sales taxes and other expenses.

"We are proud and pleased that George Burke has selected The Quincy Sun as the site for the first public display of the Quincy Tankard," said Sun publisher Henry Bosworth.

"The tankard is a precious link to Quincy's history and to the man, Colonel John Quincy, for whom Quincy is named. And incidentally, we pronounce

Cedrone: All 12 Remaining To Be Closely Evaluated

'No Front Runners' For New QHS Site

By CRAIG SALTERS

The New Quincy High School Siting Commission has 12 locations left on its list of possible high school sites.

And every site on the list, emphasized Commission Chairwoman and School Committeewoman Christine Cedrone, will be evaluated on its own merits.

"There are no front-runners," said Cedrone. "We're going to weigh the pros and cons of every possibility on that list."

Having said that, Cedrone said she was buoyed by the many good locations on the list and remained confident the commission could select a site well before the May 2 deadline established by the School Committee.

"The goal is to find the best possible site for the new Quincy High School," said Cedrone. "There are definitely sites on the list which, I believe, are feasible."

Sites still on the table for discussion are:

Flood Relief Project Key To Hancock Lot Development

Although initial reaction to Quincy 2000's proposal to privately develop the John Hancock Parking Lot in Quincy Center has been generally favorable, several hurdles remain before what is now a concept can become a reality.

Most notably: the $5 million dollar final piece of the state's Town Brook Flood Control Project, which has gone without funding for years and which would alleviate the longtime flooding problems in the neighborhoods around Miller Stile Rd. and Bigelow St.

"We can't even begin to address the particular merits of the (Hancock Lot Development) proposal until the Town Brook Flood Control Project is addressed," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who said flooding in the area has been a problem for decades. "It's irresponsible."

Another major consideration is the funding and construction of Phase II of the Quincy Concourse, as well as parking issues and the need for zoning variances.

"There are constraints and opportunities," DPW Commissioner David Colton said of the plan to a general membership meeting of The Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA) Tuesday, adding that the additional Town Brook relief conduit, which would run under Revere Rd. and deposit storm water further down the brook, "has to happen in conjunction with this development, even before."

Colton made his remarks as part of a presentation of the proposed Hancock Lot Development, which calls for the private financing and construction of nearly 300 market-rate residential units

Gift Shop Seeks License To Sell Coffee And Bagels

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Plans to serve coffee and bagels at a new gift-card shop were thwarted temporarily Tuesday as the License Board told manager Rene Sirois that she would have to first go to the zoning board of appeals.

Walter White, director of building services and board member told Sirois that a change of use in a building needs the approval of the Zoning Board.

Sirois is planning to open the The Witches Brew Cafe and gift shop at 266 Water St. this week, but has to wait for a common victualer license later.

The site was formerly Skoler's a retail store and then most recently, McDonald's Ski Shop.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico stressed a parking problem in the area of Water and Quincy Streets. However, Sirois said she had written permission from tenants living on the second floor of the building who do not have cars that four spaces are available.

D'Amico scoffed at the idea and said the owners may purchase a car at a later He then reiterated that a first request was held in November from the same location for an old gold license, but was withdrawn by Sirois' partner Robert Watts.

This time, the proposal was for a card and gift shop catering to "all religions" according to Sirois.

D'Amico said that neighbors were opposed to coffee being served. D'Amico pointed out that the area of Brewer's Corner is being revitalized with the opening of a deli at the site of the old pharmacy. When asked about parking in that area, he said there were "two parking spaces in the back."

Sirois, who said she had 88 signatures of neighbors in favor of the shop and asked D'Amico "if there are so many neighbors opposed, where are they today?" At which time D'Amico had no answer. However, one neighbor, not an abutter, was there only to say she was a new resident on Quincy Street and likes to keep abreast as to what is happening in the neighborhood. Sirois invited her to the store at anytimewhere she can see first hand what type of business it is, and what kind of parking it would ensue.

Sirois asked Chairman Joseph Shea if she could address D'Amico. She then asked D'Amico why he hadn't returned calls on her cell phone.

Also Sirois said that last Friday, D'Amico was supposed to visit the store, but did not show up. However, D'Amico said he was a little late in arriving, but did not see Sirois who he said "may have been in the back of the building."

Shea praised Sirois, who had previously worked at the Coffee Break Cafe but said he was "disappointed that Sirois didn't realize that parking would be an issue and called the Water St. shop a "tough location."

He said he would ask city Engineer Jack Gillon to visit the location and report back to the board.

A motion to table the request pending approval from the zoning board was made by White, seconded by acting Police Chief Trench Kelly.

CONCOURSE ON SCHEDULE: Construction workers at work laying the foundation for Phase I of the Quincy Concourse, which is scheduled for completion in September. The $5 million state project will connect The Burgin Parkway to Ross Way, shown here in far background. Phase II of the project, which would connect Ross Way to Hancock St. via the former lot of Kincaide's Furniture, has reached the 25 percent design phase but is as yet unfunded.

A Political Man's World

Politically speaking, you'd have to say that Quincy is still pretty much a man's world.

It isn't easy being a woman running for public office.

Oh, women don't seem to have too much of a problem getting elected to the School Committee. Women and children have a strong, natural link.

But the City Council and the mayor's office are a far different story for them.

Eighteen women have won School Committee seats in Quincy's 112-year history as a city.

But only three have made it to the City Council.

And not one to the mayor's office, although four have tried to get there.

Things have been pretty lopsided in favor of men ever since Quincy became a city. Despite the fact that women voters have outnumbered men voters here for many years now.

How lopsided?

Councillor and former Mayor Frank McCauley in his book, Quincy, Massachusetts: A Political History 1889-2000 notes:

Since 1889, 456 individuals have been elected to municipal office here. Of which 436 have been men and only 20 women. (The first woman elected was Mabel Adams to the School Committee in 1896).

Seventeen served exclusively on the school committee. One, Patricia Toland, was also one of the three women councillors.

The four women who have run for mayor: Rita Anderson (1971), Grace Saphir (1973 and 1975), Joanne Condon and Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, both in 1985.

Quincy's first woman councillor was Edna Austin, an attorney, who was elected in 1942 -- 54 years after the city's first election. She retired in 1959.

It was 18 years later before the second woman was seated in the council. Joanne Condon was elected to the Ward 6 seat in 1977.

CONDON

AUSTIN

She served until 1985 when she gave up the seat to unsuccessfully challenge Mayor McCauley who won a third term. Now Joanne Condon Walsh, she is executive director of the USS Salem Naval and Shipbuilding Museum.

The third, and so far last, woman councillor was Patricia Toland, who came over from the school committee in 1981. For four years, she and Condon were an historic footnote: two women in the council at the same time.

Toland served 11 years and was the only woman ever elected council president, considered the second highest elective office to that of mayor.

Toland resigned from the council in 1993 to become assistant city clerk, a career that was cut short when she died in September, 1994 after a courageous battle with cancer.

It has been an all-male city council since.

Several women have tried to change that without success. Among them:

Linda Tracy, Arline Goodman, Gretchen Grant, Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg and Maryann Mahony. The latter says she will definitely try again this year for the Ward 6 seat held by Joseph Newton.

Women are still doing well on the school committee. Three -- 50 percent -- of the elected seats are held by Vice Chairwoman Jo-Ann Bragg, Christine Cedrone and Linda Stice.

STICE

One of them could be the next woman councillor. And, looking ahead in this new millennium could there one day a Quincy mayor named, say, Christine, Jo-Ann, or Linda?

Or maybe there's a little baby girl in a crib somewhere in Quincy who we will hear from later.

Don't know about you but I would like to someday see a Her Honor in the mayor's office.

Certainly would be interesting.

Scenes From Yesterday

Hancock Square, Quincy, Mass.

THIS 1908 postcard shows Hancock Street in Quincy Center looking south from Granite Avenue towards School Street. Although this section of Hancock Street is now included in the Quincy Historic District, only a few of the old buildings shown here are still extant. All the old wooden buildings used for commercial purposes have been replaced. However, the brick Greenleaf Building, out of view on the right, and the three-story Durgin and Merrill's block shown on the right, were built before 1900. In 1915 the dirt roadway in this view was widened to 80 feet and paved with granite cobblestones. It was resurfaced with what we now know as blacktop in 1920. Sanborn & Damon's Hardware Store was located on the same spot on the left for over 60 years. On the street level at right was the Quincy Department Store.

READERS FORUM

Thinks USS Salem 'In Pristine Condition'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am writing with regard to the proposed move of the museum ship USS Salem from the Fore River Shipyard to Marina Bay. I would suggest that those who are concerned about the move take the ship's Executive Director Joanne Walsh up on her invitation to visit the museum to learn more about the project from her and to see what a fine looking ship Salem is. I am convinced their concerns will be assuaged once they have a full understanding of the project.

The cruiser is in pristine condition, having just recently completed a $2 million restoration. She is arguably one of the most beautiful ships our Navy has ever built. I am also told that the site being proposed for the ship is such that views of the bay from oceanfront housing and the boardwalk will not be obstructed.

The matter of any adverse impact on the environment will be adjudged by federal and state and local entities responsible for ensuring compliance with applicable regulations. I feel safe in saying that these agencies will not give permission to any proposal that will risk significant damage to the environment.

I am familiar with similar relocations of museum ships in other communities. In my own area, citizens in nearby condominiums were opposed to the repositioning of the battleship USS Wisconsin to downtown Norfolk, VA, for some of the same reasons expressed by persons in your community. With the ship now in place, nearly all of those who had voiced objections are embracing the project, saying that the ship is a significant improvement over the building it shields and that their fears of the harbor view being obstructed were unfounded.

If visitation to the museum should reach as high as 75,000 annually, triple what it has been to date, this still means not more than 100 cars per day, spread over a six-to-eight hour visiting period. With adequate parking at the ship being part of the project, it should be nearly impossible to note any increase in traffic resulting from the siting of the ship.

Quincy's Priorities: USS Salem Or Schools?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a disabled war veteran, I am very concerned about veterans issues. And when it comes to the Salem, I have to tell it like it is.

The Salem is an expensive way to honor shipyard workers and provides a good photo-op for politicians, but it is not a veterans benefit. The idea of honoring veterans and bringing tourists to Quincy with a warship may have sounded good at first, but anyone can tell you that, as a tourist attraction, the Salem is a failure. In fact, the city's politicians only asked for the Salem after failing to get the USS Lexington Aircraft Carrier.

Quincy received a one-time only grant of $2 million for the Salem; this year, Quincy received a $1.8 million one-time grant. When these grants run out, we will have to find a way to pay for the Salem ourselves. And then we must decide whether to cut veterans benefits, take money from education, or raise taxes yet again.

As teachers in our public schools work their hardest to help Quincy's youth reach their great potential, Mayor Sheets cuts the proposed education budget every year and then decides that a toxic waste dump would be the perfect place for the new Quincy High School. Quincy Public Schools should be the top priority, but instead the politicians have made the Salem their priority. The same politicians who bought a $3.5 million toxic waste dump to build a school on, and lost $13 million in Quincy taxpayer money on the shipyard, are now promising us that the Salem will cost us nothing, and they really mean it this time.

But the fact is, you can't get something for nothing. Maintaining a large warship will cost us millions of dollars over the years. So I am asking the politicians of Quincy to tell us the truth. How are we paying for the Salem? By cutting the school budget, raising taxes, or both?

Quincy's Yesterdays

Squantum Gardens Opening Ceremonies

By PAUL HAROLD

Officials from the First Naval District announced plans for the formal opening of the air base housing in North Quincy for next week. The opening ceremonies would take place even though there were already a dozen families living there.

The 150-unit housing project was built by the St. Paul Construction Company for $1.3 million.

The housing would be occupied by Naval personnel. Any vacancies would be first offered to Marine families, then to members of other armed forces, then to employees of the Navy and finally to members of the public.

FIRE DESTROYS ART STUDIO

A two-alarm fire destroyed the Myrtle St. studio in North Quincy of the late Amadeo Nardini, a prominent sculptor. Fire Chief Thomas Gorman estimated the loss at $9,000. The fire was started by a plumber's soldering iron.

Nardini's most famous work was a bust of President Franklin Roosevelt that was reproduced for display in hundreds of schools.

Low pressure and a frozen hydrant added to the difficulty in fighting the fire in the barnlike structure.

STALEMATE OVER RECREATION POST

The city manager and the city council were in a stalemate over the appointment of a new director of the Recreation Department. The council said they wouldn't fund the job until they knew the person selected from a field of 17 candidates. Meanwhile, the manager said he couldn't appoint the new director until the job was funded.

The Recreation Commission unanimously recommended three candidates and said they would support the choice of manager William Deegan. Those recommended were William Ryan, recreation leader in Dedham; Stanton Curtis, recreation leader in Brunswick, Maine; and William Boyer, Quincy teacher and part-time recreation leader.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLINIO

Suzie's Tuna Stuffed Peppers

You wouldn't think that our daughter Suzie would have any time to make stuffed peppers, with young twins walking around and four more little darlings around. But she made the most delicious ones with a tuna fish stuffing. She called me on the phone one day so excited about this new kind of stuffing, and insisted I go to lunch so she could have me taste it.

It was so moist and different and very easy to prepare.

Suzie's Tuna Stuffed Peppers

3 or 4 large red peppers

1 can tuna (she used white, but dark will do)

1 cup tomato sauce about 1/2 cup or so of seasoned bread crumbs

1 tablespoon fresh parsley (minced) smidgen olive oil garlic powder grated cheese

Mix tuna, bread crumbs, parsley, tomato sauce, garlic powder and a little olive oil. Mixture will be moist. If need be, add a few more bread crumbs until mixture is what you want. Cut tops off the peppers and stuff each one, drizzling the top with olive oil and grated cheese.

In a greased baking pan, add some water on the bottom. Bake covered in a 350 degree oven until peppers are tender. Then bake another 10 minutes with the cover off. (takes about 30-35 minutes). Cut in half for serving, or eat the whole thing...I did!

Quintessential Brass Sunday At Taber Concert Series

Quintessential Brass, a quintet of professional musicians, will perform the second concert of the Taber Concert Series Sunday at 3 p.m. at East Congregational Church, 610 Adams St., Milton.

The quintet, which plays in and around the Boston area, will perform works that span many centuries including Renaissance and Baroque music, operatic and symphonic traditions, as well as jazz, show tunes, and original compositions.

Trent Austin, trumpet, has toured with the Artie Shaw Orchestra and performed with such artists as Tony Bennett, Natalie Cole, Joe Williams, Wynton Marsalis, Clark Terry, Bob Brookmeyer, Maria Schneider, Peter Erskine, Arturo Sandoval, Hal Galper, Dick Oatts, Marvin Stamm, Kenny Werner, and Bob Wilber.

Karen Muenzinger, trumpet, has participated in the Empire Brass Quintet chamber music program at Tanglewood and performed with the Empire Brass. She is a member of Mariachi Mexamerica, the Nova Brass Quartet, the all-female rock band "The Sueines," the Harvard Summer Orchestra, and the Apple Hill Chamber Players.

Robin Cavalear, horn, has toured the United States and Japan with the New Sousa Band and performed under the direction of Zubin Mehta with The International Orchestra. She is also a member of the Christiane Trio (violin, horn, and piano), and freelances in the New England area with the Hartford Symphony, Connecticut Opera, and the Springfield Symphony.

David Lindsey, trombone, has toured as a trombonist with bands led by Buddy Rich and Louis Bellson and served as conductor/bandleader for many shows, including Ray Charles, Mel Torme, Eddie Fisher, the Temptations, Rita Moreno, Maureen McGovern, Johnny Mathis, and Marvin Hamlisch. He now leads the David Lindsey Quintet (party band), Basin Street Dixieland Band, and One O'Clock Jump (swing band) and is principal trombonist with the Newton Symphony Orchestra.

Leslie Havens, bass trombone, is a member of many groups including the Boston Brass Ensemble, "The Classiques," and the all-female band "DIVA: No Man's Band" with whom she just recorded the CD "I Believe In You." She recently performed in Carnegie Hall with Arturo Sandoval and with Aretha Franklin at the Newport Jazz Festival. She tours frequently with the Artie Shaw Orchestra and has performed with several Boston area symphony orchestras, theater orchestras, Barnum and Bailey's Circus, the Kenny Hadley Big Band, the John Almark Jazz Orchestra, and the Northeast Big Band. She has also recorded CDs with the Jeff Holmes Big Band and Artie Barsamian's Boston Big Band.

The Taber Concert Series was established in 1998 after a generous donation made possible the purchase of a new piano for the Sanctuary of East Congregational Church. The series features musicians of many styles including classical, jazz, swing, and popular.

Admission is $10, $8 for students and seniors, and $1 from each ticket benefits Father Bill's Place.

The concert will be followed with a coffee and dessert reception with the artists.

For more information, call East Church at (617) 698-0270.

BERNAZZANI FIFTH GRADERS performed several songs as part of the school's holiday concert, which featured songs from all grades K-5 as well as instrumentals by the Bernazzani Band. (Quincy Sun photo)

Star-Gazing At Pageant Field Tonight

The Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures of Quincy program will host its next tour tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex.

The topic will be "Star-Gazing at Pageant Field."

All are welcome and there is no charge.

Astronomer Rolf Egon will display his wide collection of meteorites and give a talk on what participants can expect to see that night. After a brief presentation, participants will head outside to Pageant Field to view the moon, stars, and night sky.

Egon has over 45 years of experience in astronomy and is a member of the South Shore Astronomical Society.

Tonight offers a first quarter moon, allowing for optimal viewing of the moon's craters and mountains. It is also a great time to view Saturn and Jupiter.

For more information, call the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1254.

BOSTON FINANCIAL Data Services recently hosted a holiday celebration for seniors as part of its 2000 Holiday Giving Program in which $10,000 was presented to various non-profit organizations in Quincy. BFDS employees served hot turkey meals to all the seniors, who each got to take home a box of chocolates and gift certificates. Seated from left are Linda Robinson, Mary Lucier, and Martha Robinson. Standing from left are: Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs; John Keenan, executive secretary for Mayor James Sheets; and Al O'Neal, senior vice-president, Boston Financial Data Services.

Boston Financial Promotes Good Neighbor Policy

When the remodeled Thomas Crane Public Library re-opens Feb. 5, its brand-new computer classroom will be named for Boston Financial Data Services (BFDS).

That's because BFDS, a shareholder record keeping and account processing services company which has been headquartered in North Quincy since 1973, donated $50,000 for the building of the classroom, which will boast 20 state-of-the-art computers, all with Internet access.

What's more, says BFDS Senior Vice President Al O'Neal, company employees have become so excited by the project that they are volunteering their own time to develop a curriculum and teach computer courses to the public, which Library Director Ann McLaughlin said are scheduled to begin in April.

Although the $50,000 donation -- the third largest single donation to the library project -- represents a generous one-time commitment to the library, it is also part of much larger BFDS plan to make itself more known as a good neighbor in the city.

"We have long been a member of the community," said O'Neal, who has spearheaded many of BFDS' giving efforts. "But over the last year and a half we have tried to become more visible."

Outreach efforts have included a beach restoration day -- where over 60 volunteers cleaned Nickerson Beach in Squantum -- and holiday luncheons for the various groups served by the Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP).

This past Christmas, BFDS participated in the Toys for Tots campaign, placing donation boxes in each of its five buildings and collecting hundreds of toys for Quincy children who require services from DSS, Saint Boniface, Atlantic House, and the Quincy Crisis Center.

In addition, Mayor James Sheets made a recent visit to BFDS' "2000 Quincy Community Giving Day" to accept a collective check for $10,000 which will benefit: Toys for Tots; QCAP; DOVE, Inc.; Father Bill's Homeless Shelter; Quincy Big Brother/Big Sister; and First Night Quincy.

"We are very pleased to be working with these non-profit organizations and the commitment and vision that each speak to," O'Neal said.

BFDS also sponsored two ice sculptures at last month's First Night Quincy celebration.

"We're really trying to concentrate as much as we can not only on the diverse needs but on the overall excitement of the city," O'Neal said. "We just want to reach out to the overall community."

Boston Financial Data Services has experienced tremendous growth since its inception in Quincy. In 1973, the company consisted of 82 associates servicing 32 mutual funds. Today, BFDS employs 3,800 people with over 2,000 located in the city.

Fallon Ambulance Donates $10,000 To USS Salem Fund

Fallon Ambulance Service, the region's largest independent provider of ambulance services, has donated $10,000 to the USS Salem Fund to help maintain the vessel that has become such a large part of the city of Quincy's culture.

The 718-foot long, 50-year old vessel was ordered built by the U.S. Navy in 1943 and was built in Quincy at the Fore River Shipyard. The vessel was launched in 1947, commissioned in 1949, and was in active service for 10 years. At one time, the vessel boasted an active crew of 1400 members. It served in a number of missions, including assisting with rescue and relief efforts during the Cephalonian earthquake in Greece in 1953. Historians note that the ship never "fired guns in anger."

The USS Salem came home to Quincy six years ago, through the efforts of Mayor James Sheets, who was instrumental in bringing it here from Philadelphia, where it had been "mothballed" next to its sister ship, the USS Des Moines. The vessel is owned by the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum, of which Sheets serves as chairman of the board. His efforts, and that of private donations, help keep the ship maintained and operational.

Currently, the city of Quincy uses the USS Salem as a museum. Crews of sailors have maintained nautical and naval displays for public viewing. Also, a number of functions take place aboard the ship, including a summer concert series and overnight scouting programs.

"The USS Salem is an integral part of Quincy's history and we are pleased that Fallon has stepped up to assist with this cause," Sheets said.

Peter Racicot, vice president of Business Development for Fallon Ambulance Service, said, "We are pleased to be able to assist the United States Shipbuilding Museum Corporation in maintaining the proud heritage that goes with having the USS Salem on display for residents and visitors."

"The preservation of history is something that each community should look to with pride, and we are delighted to play a role in that preservation."

Bank Of Canton Donates $5,000 To Teens Shelter

The Bank of Canton has donated $5,000 toward the rehabilitation of the Quincy Interfaith Shelter Coalition's Survival Emergency Shelter for homeless teenaged children, which has provided food, shelter and support for more than 4,000 youngsters since 1980.

The teens at the shelter were at risk of being evicted when the coalition, also known as Father Bill's Place, was able to raise the money to buy the building but $100,000 more is needed to make the building a fit and safe place for the teenagers to live.

With the $5,000 donated by the Bank of Canton, the total raised to date is $75,000 so $25,000 more is needed.

Anyone wishing to donate should contact John Yazwinski, executive director of the Quincy Interfaith Shelter Coalition at (617) 376-2255

SHINE Counselors Answer Senior Healthcare Questions

SHINE (Serving Health Insurance Needs of Elders) health insurance counselors are available for Quincy seniors with questions on the sometimes confusing and ever changing variety of health benefits for older persons.

SHINE counselors have answers to many health insurance questions dealing with such issues as Medicare, Medigap, S.S.I., and HMOs. Counselors will review present coverage, help process claims, and inform clients of their rights. They refer clients to other appropriate agencies when necessary.

SHINE is free, confidential, and unbiased.

SHINE is a counseling service for Medicare beneficiaries and others. It is a program developed, funded, and managed by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs (EOEA) in Boston and administered through local Councils on Aging (COAs).

There are 14 COAs on the South Shore which have a SHINE counselor available.

Those seeking assistance in understanding their health insurance needs should contact Jane Mudge, SHINE coordinator at the Regional, South Shore, Quincy Council on Aging, The Quincy COA SHINE telephone number is (617) 376-1247.

Quincy Access TV Open House Sunday At New Location

Quincy Access Television has scheduled an open house to introduce its new and expanded facility located in the new addition of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The event takes place Saturday, Feb. 4 from 1 to 4 p.m. at QATV's new office at 88 Washington St. The public will have the opportunity that day to tour the new 6,000-square foot facility, which will include two studios with state-of-the-art digital equipment, non-linear editing suite, two traditional editing studios, and computer classrooms. Light refreshments will be served.

Executive Director Elizabeth Campbell said "Everyone at QATV is very excited about the new facility. "We now have the opportunity to take our community-based programming to a higher level."

"The studios here are bigger, the equipment more sophisticated, and we are very excited about having the people of Quincy not only see what we have to offer, but also become involved with us."

For more information on Quincy Access Television, or how you can become involved in community television, call Campbell at 376-1440.

Quincy as Quin-zee because that is the way he pronounced his name.

"We invite Quincy residents to stop by Friday to see this handsome and historic link to Quincy's rich past."

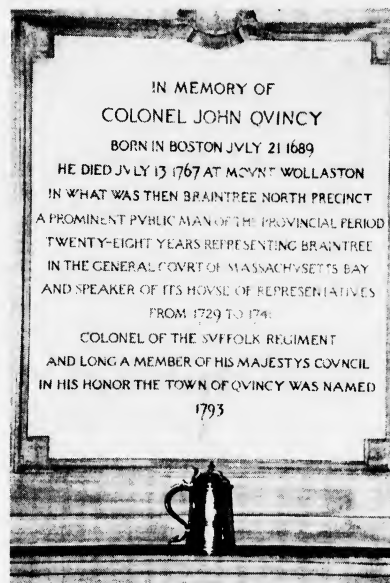

Bosworth added: "I want to thank Mayor Sheets for his wonderful cooperation in providing police security while the tankard is here. I would be pretty nervous without it."

Mayor Sheets hailed the display of the tankard at The Sun.

"It's important that it be displayed to the public early and often," he said. He said police protection will be available for the display. Further displays are planned for the Adams Academy building, he said.

Burke said he and his wife, Sandra, picked the front window of The Sun for the tankard's public debut because of The Sun's proximity to the church and the fact that it was a story in Quincy's hometown newspaper that inspired him to bid.

"I expect the tankard will be on display all day Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., with a police officer on duty," said Burke. "If there is a lot of interest, maybe we'll show it again the next Friday. But it's only on a short term basis."

"Meanwhile, we are searching for a permanent place to display the tankard."

"I met with Mayor Sheets last Friday. Peter Boylston Adams of the Adams family and Mary Ann Peaks of the Adams Historical Site were there, too. I brought the tankard to show him."

"The mayor said he would provide police protection wherever we wanted to show the tankard."

"Peter Boylston Adams suggested we place it with the Adams Family Society. Ms. Peaks suggested the Adams Mansion. Joyce

Baker asked that we place it at the Adams Academy. I asked all who were interested to send written proposals to me.

"It's never been on public display before and I want the city of Quincy to enjoy the majesty of the tankard." When it was in their possession, United First Parish Church officers kept the tankard and the other 10 silver items in a safe deposit box at the Citizens' Bank and brought some of them out for communion services once a year.

Burke said he is looking for a safe place to keep it when it is not on public display.

No Money Down Loans - Not Just For Veterans Anymore

By CAROL BULMAN
"No money down," "Zero down payment," "100-percent financing"—sound like an infomercial on late-night television?

Believe it or not, the 100-percent loan has become a reality to many qualified homeowners with little money to put down on a home. This opportunity was previously available only to veterans or for those currently in the service through the Veterans Administration.

The availability of mortgage money to lend, a strong economy and many people looking to buy houses has caused lenders to respond by offering unique opportunities in mortgage programs.

The 100-percent or "no money down" programs feature no cash down payment, a competitive—although not necessarily rock-bottom—interest rate, available for an owner-occupied (no investment property), single-family home or condominium.

There are both fixed-rate and fixed/adjustable hybrid options available.

Also, there's good news for teachers through a new 100-percent program called Zero Down Teacher Flex. The details are generally the same as discussed above, but teachers will receive a break in the interest rate they will pay. These programs are offered by several entities through local lenders or mortgage brokers.

What's the catch?

Well, it's not necessarily a catch, but these special programs are certainly targeted to well-qualified borrowers with very good credit history and stable employment.

When considering a loan application, a lender may look for a stronger factor that would "compensate" for a weaker one. In the case of the 100-percent loan, the weaker factor is the amount of cash invested in the transaction, making it a riskier loan for the lender. The compensating factor a lender would be looking for in this case would be excellent credit and strong ability to repay the loan. This information would be verified by the lender via a credit report and verification of the borrower's employment.

The 100-percent loan offered by most lenders and mortgage brokers generally requires some monetary involvement from the buyer, or a gift from a relative toward the closing costs and prepaid costs. Standard closing costs include attorney fees, recording fees, plot plan, title insurance and points. Prepaid items include real estate taxes and homeowners insurance, if applicable.

The Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) recently unveiled a 100-percent loan that targets buyers who earn less than the median income limits set by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in each city and town. These income guidelines vary from community to community, so call our office for the exact amount in your area.

To further encourage homeownership and opportunity, this program will allow less-than-perfect credit and some flexibility in qualifying. This program is available to salaried individuals only and is also allowable on owner-occupied, single-family homes and condominiums.

Another program available through some lenders and brokers is an expanded 100-percent loan that allows a buyer to borrow in excess of the value of the property, including the cost of closing. In this case, the credit and borrower profile would need to be exemplary and the interest rate may be adjusted slightly to allow for the additional risk. The loan for this buyer is mostly secured by the real estate with a small percentage unsecured.

Why would an individual wish to not money down on a house and borrow for their closing costs? It may sound old-fashioned, but the sooner a buyer "buys" into the opportunity for the American Dream, the quicker the positive results will begin—the building of equity, the accumulation of tax benefits and the improvement of credit.

Borrowers who use these niche programs may wonder, "Is this the program for me?" If you have access to funds for a downpayment in the form of savings, gift or otherwise, be sure that your loan officer provides a comparison of the costs and benefits of the program, as well as the costs and benefits for any other program you may be researching. Often, this is a personal choice based on your savings habits and your goals.

For information regarding these 100-percent loans and a comparison to other mortgage programs available, call Conway Financial Services at (781) 681-9400 or (888) 831-1181.

Carol Bulman is chairman of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association and is president of Norwell-based Conway Financial Services (CFS). CFS is a mortgage brokerage firm owned by Jack Conway & Co. that maintains correspondent lending relationships with some of the top lenders in the East and originates a full line of mortgage products.

Paint Is the Key To Home Restoration

The Color Key System divides colors into natural, harmonizing mood palettes of warm and cool colors. The entire warm or cool palette blends with other colors within that palette, making color selection easier. Whatever paint combination you pick, you can be sure it will match.

The experts at your local Fuller-O'Brien or Devco Paints store also can assist you with choosing the proper paint for the areas you will be painting and the climate you live in.

As soon as you being to paint, you can watch the transformation of your home's personality. What was once "the fourth white house on the right," now is the "yellow house with green shutters, you can't miss it!" Besides adding a new color, you also can add awnings or shutters that are reflective of that era.

Even if your house is not listed on the historic registry, you can "update" your 20th century or 21st century home with distinct colors reminiscent of its original charm and character. For more ideas on color selection and painting techniques, stop by your local Fuller-O'Brien or Devco Paints dealer or visit www.fullerpaint.com or www.devcopaint.com.

HOME SWEET HOME

At the heart of the American Dream, homeownership represents both the largest financial investment most of us will ever make and a significant lifestyle choice. Thus, whether you are selling or thinking of buying a house, you have a vested interest in being well informed about the wide range of issues surrounding the ownership of a home. These include market condition; lifestyle consideration; legal and tax issues; buying and selling strategies; financing; and the various structural, mechanical and cosmetic aspects of the home. Regardless of whether you are a buyer, seller, landlord or renter dealing in single-family homes, condominiums, co-operatives, commercial real estate or apartments this column will provide you with useful real estate information in the weeks that follow.

ERA CENTRAL REAL ESTATE is pleased to welcome you to this bi-weekly real estate column. In the weeks ahead, we'll provide you with practical tips on how to purchase or sell a home. Our goal is to bring buyers and sellers together to the mutual satisfaction of both. Buyers, we'll show you homes that suit your budget and match your wish list of features. Sellers, our aggressive marketing campaigns help expose your home to qualified buyers and ensure that you receive full market value. Carolyn Flaherty Earns Tech Proficiency Designation

CAROLYN FLAHERTY (center) of the Jack Conway Quincy office receives a Conway Computer Institute designation from Technology Director Toni Manning and Executive Vice President Tom Rudolph.

Carolyn Flaherty, a sales agent in Jack Conway & Co.'s Quincy office, recently received the Conway Computer Institute (CCI) designation, an honor she obtained after completing 36 hours of intensive coursework in using technology to better serve real estate customers.

Technology Director Toni Manning and Executive Vice President Thomas Rudolph awarded the CCI certificate and pin to Flaherty and four other Conway agents.

Classes on creating mailing lists, managing client databases and using desktop publishing were taught by instructors from Massasoit Community College at Conway's in-house computer-training laboratory. Manning taught courses on navigating the Internet, effectively communicating with customers by e-mail, and a special module on Conway's state-of-the-art information management system.

After completing the requirements, the CCI designees received a $500 gift certificate to CompUSA, the computer superstore.

"Technology is so important in today's market," said Manning, adding that the CCI designation is believed to be the first of its kind to be offered by a real estate firm. "Carolyn has shown her commitment to education by earning this designation."

Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co., the largest privately owned real estate firm in Massachusetts, has more than 600 associates in 37 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Galvin Alerts Homeowners On Key Money Saving Mortgage Information

Secretary of State William Galvin is alerting homeowners whose mortgages are due to start their annual mortgage information on how they may be able to discontinue private mortgage insurance (PMI).

Galvin, who has general competency over 14 of the Commonwealth's 17

Registers of Deeds, said, "Homeowners who have mortgages and carry private mortgage insurance will soon be getting either their escrow statement or a mortgage interest statement Form 1098, which will contain a disclosure on how they can discontinue PMI for a savings of anywhere from $40 to $100 a month in their mortgage payments."

Those annual mortgage statements are due to be sent by the end of January.

The federal Homeowner Protection Act of 1998 required each mortgage lender to include the information on their annual statements, including an address and telephone number of the lender and information on the mortgagee's rights to cancel PMI.

"Lenders require you to insure your mortgage if your down payment on your home is less than 20 percent," Galvin said. "But once your equity in the home reaches 20 percent, you are no longer required to carry that insurance. Many homeowners are unaware of this and they pay these premiums unnecessarily."

Galvin has published a brochure "Private Mortgage Insurance and the New Federal Homeowner Protection Act of 1998" which can be obtained by calling Citizen Information Service at the toll-free 1-800-392-6090.

Paint Is the Key To Home Restoration

(NU) - Whether you live in an historic 1800s Victorian, a 1920s bungalow or a 1980s Colonial, the personality of your home is projected to everyone who visits.

If this is the year your house needs to be painted, why not restore some of the house's original integrity? Instead of playing it safe by painting the house white with black shutters, why not do a little research into your home's history and add color that makes its character shine through?

First, you'll need to do a little research on your home, such as determining the year your home was built. Your local library can assist you, as can your city government offices.

Books on architecture and architectural home styles will help determine the "era" of your home. There also are magazines available on home restoration and architectural styles and many home shows on cable television that will aid you in your research efforts.

For example, you know your home was built in the early 1920s and is currently white with dark green shutters. By digging a little deeper, you find out the style of the house is Dutch Colonial and that yellow was a popular color during that era for that particular style of home.

Once you've made the decision to restore the house to its original color, it's time to choose the paint. The color experts at your local Fuller-O'Brien or Devco Paints store can assist you in choosing the perfect shade of yellow by using their Color Key System. This system was perfected for use by architects, builders and painters and now allows consumers to select colors with confidence.

Adams Inn Planning 4-Story, 60-Room Addition

By CRAIG SALTERS

The Best Western Adams Inn of North Quincy is planning a four-story, 11,000 square-foot addition which would create 60 new rooms as well as additional meeting space and upgraded restaurant facilities.

Actual construction of the addition would take approximately nine months, said Best Western Adams Inn owner Robert Galligan, but factors such as the permitting process make early 2002 a realistic date for completion.

Coler & Colantonio, Inc., of Norwell, engineers for the project, appeared at a public hearing before the city's Zoning Board of Appeals Jan. 23 and, by unanimous vote, were granted a special permit to build in what is a flood plain district.

Galligan said construction of the 60-room building, which will feature suites on the side overlooking the Neponset River, is being done for two reasons: an increasing demand for accommodations and the need to support tourism in a city which boasts 17 National Historic Sites.

"There's a definite need for more rooms," said Galligan, who noted similar expansion efforts in the city such as the nearly finished Marriott Hotel at Crown Colony. "It makes sense to do this now."

The proposed addition would give the Adams Inn more of an "L" shape as it extends southerly towards Densmore St. The hotel lobby would be moved to the center of the renovated facility and the current lobby would be reconfigured to provide upscale restaurant and meeting space.

The total number of rooms for the renovated hotel would be approximately 150, Galligan said, explaining that, although 60 new rooms would be added to the 99-room hotel, some of the rooms in the existing building would be lost to office space and support facilities.

Landscape improvements would include the preservation of the historic railways at the site -- which were used in the days of Quincy's granite industry -- as well as a new boardwalk and restoration of the existing pier.

"What we want to do is preserve and enhance the historic nature of this property so that citizens of Quincy can view some of the rich history which dates back to the granite industry, for which the city was known worldwide," said Galligan, who emphasized the hotel is open 24-hours a day and available to both hotel guests and Quincy residents.

Joseph Shea Re-Elected Chairman Of License Board

City Clerk Joseph Shea was unanimously re-elected chairman of the License Board at Tuesday's meeting, a position he has held since becoming city clerk in November, 1992. The former City Clerk was John Gillis.

Fare Chief Thomas Gorman was re-elected vice-chairman.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue made the motion to retain Shea as chairman, seconded by Director of Building Services, Walter White.

Prior to the election, Shea said he was "willing to remain as chairman" and added that he was "proud of the changes that were made."

He said there were four alcohol related issues that would be taken up in the next few weeks.

He mentioned the "strength of the board" and being "on course" with the addition of Det. Joseph Manning, who handles complaints and license issues daily, and praised his secretary Cindy Manning, Manning's cousin.

He called this year a "banner year" especially in the collecting of revenues.

Shea reminded that in looking over the records that the License Board was established in 1913. He noted that in 1952, when Gorman's father was chairman, the License Board issued 140 liquor licenses, "more than today."

Mariano Named Chairman Of Insurance Committee

State Representative Ronald Mariano was elected Monday to serve as chairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee on Insurance.

Nominated by Speaker Thomas Finneran, Mariano was ratified by the unanimous vote of his colleagues.

"Whether it's health, auto, or life, insurance continues to be one of the most important issues before us today," said Mariano. "I look forward to working to improve the accessibility and affordability of all insurance products in our Commonwealth."

RONALD MARIANO

Mariano has served as vice-chairman of the Joint Committee on Insurance since 1997. The committee is charged with considering all matters pertaining to insurance and insurance companies before the Legislature.

"From the reorganization of Liberty Mutual to both Trust Insurance Company and Harvard Pilgrim going into receivership, the Massachusetts insurance industry has undergone tremendous change over the past two years," added Mariano. "We must remain vigilant in our efforts to protect the interests of Massachusetts consumers."

Marion Fantucchio Guest Speaker At MWN Meeting Tonight

Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association announces Marion Fantucchio, chairman of the City of Quincy Board of Assessors, will be the guest speaker at its meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in the community room of Work Incorporated, 3 Arlington St.

Fantucchio was appointed to the Board of Assessors in 1991 and has served as the chairman over the past few years. She is a member and an officer of the Norfolk County Assessors Association.

The increase in property assessments have brought about questions from residents of the community. While the tax rate saw a modest increase of .65 percent, many residents saw a dramatic rise in their assessed property values that caused higher tax bills.

Fantucchio will explain the process that the assessors take in assessing property, as well as the available remedies for aggrieved parties and various programs available for property owners in need of assistance.

Residents of the community are welcome to attend this meeting.

Delahunt Introduces Legislation To Abolish Electoral College

Congressman Bill Delahunt has introduced legislation to abolish the Electoral College and provide for the direct election of the president and vice president of the United States.

Upon the bill's introduction Tuesday, Rep. Delahunt, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, offered the following remarks:

"Until our recent national crash course in the federal election process, most Americans saw the Electoral College as a harmless anachronism. But 10 days ago, for the first time in over a century, the nation watched as the oath of office was administered to an elected president who failed to secure a plurality of the votes cast.

"The Constitution is clear, and I do not question the lawfulness or legitimacy of electing a president under these circumstances. Indeed, I join all patriotic citizens in wishing our new president well. But we must also ask — as many of my constituents have — whether an electoral system that negates the votes of half a million citizens is compatible with democratic values.

"This is not a partisan question. Indeed, I first raised it on the eve of the election when it looked as though the shoe might be on the other foot — when many were predicting that the candidate of my own party might prevail with a minority of the popular vote. And the answer to that question is far more important than the political fortunes of any one candidate or party.

"The Electoral College presents a troubling contradiction for our democracy in at least two respects. First, and most obviously, it cannot be squared with the principle of majority rule. To award the presidency to the loser of the popular vote undermines respect for the system and compromises the new president's mandate to govern.

"Second, the Electoral College is inconsistent with the principle of 'one person, one vote.' This is because the system by which electors are assigned gives disproportionate weight to less populous states. Massachusetts has one electoral vote for every 500,000 people, while Wyoming has one for every 160,000. In other words, a vote cast in Wyoming counts three times as much as a vote cast in Massachusetts.

"Some defend the Electoral College because it carries the weight of constitutional authority. I agree that the Constitution should be amended only rarely and with great care. But the system designed by the framers for electing the president has already been amended, by the 12th and 22nd Amendments. And until ratification of the 17th Amendment in 1913, the U.S. Senate was elected not by the people, but by state legislatures.

"Few would argue that the original purpose of the Electoral College retains any relevance today. It reflected a mistrust of the electorate which we no longer endorse — the same mistrust that denied the people the right to elect senators, and withheld the vote altogether from women, African-Americans and persons who did not own property.

"Far from embodying some essential constitutional principle, the Electoral College was a political compromise, born of an era in which the states were 13 separate sovereignties determined to defend their interests. While regional differences have not disappeared, they have been greatly diluted by the growth of a common national identity. After 200 years of migration of people and ideas, the states themselves are far more heterogeneous, and far more similar, than when the compromise was struck.

"While admitting that the original justification for the Electoral College no longer exists, its defenders claim that it serves some other, modern purpose. They argue, for example, that without the Electoral College, candidates will campaign only in major population centers, ignoring more sparsely populated regions. Yet even the residents of rural states tend to live within close proximity to a major metropolitan area. And even if their fears were to materialize, it is hard to see how this would be worse than the targeted campaigning in which the candidates recently engaged, writing off whole sections of the country and concentrating only on the so-called "battleground states." With every vote in play, candidates would no longer have an incentive to take anyone for granted.

"Others contend that abolishing the Electoral College would further undermine the stability and finality of the electoral process. They point out that Florida's was not the only state race to be decided by a very small margin, and argue that if every vote were to count equally, recounts and court challenges would proliferate. Yet wouldn't this be likelier to happen if the Electoral College is retained? Without it, state wins and losses would no longer have electoral significance. All that would matter is the nationwide count.

"Let's not forget that what happened in Florida was only a glimpse of the problems the Electoral College can cause. Had neither candidate received the required 270 electoral votes, the election would have been thrown into the House of Representatives — where the controversy could have taken weeks or months longer to resolve.

"I am under no illusion about the difficulty of enacting a constitutional amendment. But now is the time to act — while the memory of our recent experience is fresh. Congress has considered Electoral College reforms before — but only when spurred on by electoral crises. The Senate held hearings in 1992 when it seemed that the Perot candidacy might deadlock the Electoral College. After George Wallace ran as a third-party candidate in 1968, the House actually approved a constitutional amendment, but it fell victim of a Senate filibuster.

"We shouldn't wait for the next crisis before confronting the problem. There have been several thoughtful proposals to reform the Electoral College without a constitutional amendment, and they deserve a hearing. My own view, however, is that halfway measures cannot address the fundamental contradiction which the Electoral College represents in a mature democracy. That's why the bill I am introducing today would abolish it outright.

"Public officials, from selectmen to senators, are chosen by majority vote. That's the way it's supposed to work in a democracy. And that's how we should elect the president of the greatest democracy on earth."

by Tony Centorino, Kevin McGroarty and Bill Starkie

A MATTER OF MAINTENANCE

By properly maintaining your vehicle, you have the opportunity to avoid trouble before it happens, however, by some estimates, four out of five cars need maintenance. Worn brake parts pose a safety risk. Postponing needed service can also increase the cost of an eventual braking system overhaul. A slipping belt can affect engine cooling, the alternator, power steering, and air conditioner. Brittle or rotten cooling system hoses can also lead to overheating and the potential for costly repairs. Damaged CV joint boots should be inspected and replaced as needed. These rubber boots protect the critical CV joints that deliver power to the wheels. These are just a few of the engine components that should be inspected on a regular basis.

Our ASE Certified service technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNCOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency, as well as safety. Here at 258 Quincy Ave. E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own.

Presidents Take Step Toward Tourney Berth

Defeat Plymouth South, 4-2

By CHRIS POISSON

Having already chewed out his team in the first intermission, coach Bob Sylvia didn't have much to say to them in the second break. In fact, the players left the locker room so early they had to wait for the zamboni to finish its last lap around Quincy Youth Arena before it could step onto the ice.

After playing 30 minutes of flat, uninspiring hockey against a winless Plymouth South squad, the Presidents were eager to get back out there and erase a 2-1 deficit. Quincy knew what was on the line. If it could somehow pull this game out, it would have a chance to clinch a postseason berth Wednesday night against another winless team, Taunton.

"We went in and blasted them after the first period," Sylvia said. "I don't think you can blast twice. So after the second I basically said, 'You know what we have to do, so you guys sit down and figure it out as a team.' That's why you saw them go out on the ice early."

Quincy finally figured it out when sophomore Liam Powers knocked home a rebound at 8:08 to tie the game. Junior Bill McKeon tallied the game-winner 1:31 later as Quincy came out on top, 4-2, for its fourth straight victory.

"We should have been a lot more prepared, emotionally," Sylvia said. "I thought the momentum from a good game on Saturday night (3-2 win against Bridgewater-Raynham) would carry over. I wasn't worried about putting the puck in the net as I was about the intensity level. It just seemed there wasn't much out there."

"We almost let one slip away that we really would have regretted. It would have come back to haunt us. But if you stay with it, good things happen. It showed some character coming back in the third period."

With the win, Quincy (8-3, 6-2) was able to travel to Taunton (0-10-1, 0-7-1) yesterday (Wednesday) with a chance to wrap up a spot in the tournament before a difficult three-game stretch, beginning Saturday at Barnstable followed by Silver Lake and Falmouth at home next week.

"I think we're going to win Wednesday," Sylvia said after Monday's game. "Barnstable is going to tell us if we're ready for the championship. If we are, we're going to beat Barnstable and have some momentum going into the big week. If we don't, we'll tell them that every win from this point on is an easier draw in the tournament. If you don't win any, you're going to meet an Archies like last year."

The White Line's (third line) game-tying score could prove to be the biggest goal of the season. Skating behind the net, freshman Josh Giordani fed a pass in front to senior Brian Neenan and he fired a quick shot on Panther goalie Greg Beson. Beson made the initial save but the puck ricocheted to Powers, who collected the rebound and flipped into the back of the net.

"These kids don't see a lot of ice time," Sylvia said. "They're out there for 30 seconds and bang. That's a good sign. That was a big goal. Powers didn't even get one shift in the B-R game. That tying goal could be the biggest goal of the season because once we tied the game, the kids started to believe a little bit."

About a minute and half later, Quincy received a scare when junior forward Brian

Red Raiders Regroup, Tattoo Taunton, 74-49

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy boys' basketball team found itself in a familiar and often precarious situation at halftime of last Friday night's game against Taunton.

For the third straight game, the Red Raiders controlled the first half of play and held the upper hand at the break. However, in the previous two games against Quincy and Silver Lake, first half leads turned into second half collapses.

With those losses still tattooed to their skulls, they must have been wondering which squad — the part-time platoon or the full time faction — was going to go to war for the final 16 minutes.

North Quincy had its answer early, blitzing Taunton for three quick layups in a two-minute raid that saw its 34-26 lead balloon, rather than evaporate, en route to a decisive 74-49 victory on home soil.

"We finally put two halves together," said head coach Ted Stevenson after the game. "That's really the first time since the second game of the year that we played two complete halves."

"We started off strong in the second half," he added. "We got a couple of quick transition baskets. Brandon Sleeth had a couple of layups. It gives you that good feeling. We haven't started quick in the second half. We've let teams come right back into the game. [Friday night] we didn't do that."

The win snaps a three-game skid and improves North Quincy's record to 5-7 overall and 2-6 in the Old Colony League, leaving it with a legitimate chance at making the postseason. It has beaten four of the eight teams left on the schedule. On Tuesday, it traveled to winless Falmouth and tomorrow (Friday) it heads to Bridgewater-Raynham.

"I think our chances are still real good," Stevenson said. "This one was a big one. If we lose this one, it gets a little tighter. Coming off this 25-point win, it has to give us confidence." In addition to overcoming their second-half flops, the Red Raiders also exorcised another demon — hideous foul shooting. They shot an remarkable 90 percent from the charity stripe, hitting 19 of 21 free throws.

"We shot very well from the foul line," Stevenson said. "That has hurt us in four ballgames this year. It has cost us two or three ballgames to be honest with you. We have been shooting an awful lot in practice lately."

Trailing 8-5 early in the game, North Quincy called a quick timeout to regroup and to change its offensive attack by giving the ball to Phil McGillicuddy, the league's fourth leading scorer with 14.2 points per game.

"We spotted something early that we didn't think they could stop Phil from penetrating and pulling up and taking his jumper," Stevenson said. "We just said we're going to get the ball in Phil's hands and make them stop him."

Well, it turns out Taunton couldn't stop him or rest of the team. Over the next eight minutes, North Quincy outscored the Tigers 24-7 to grab a 30-15 lead with less than five minutes left in the half. McGillicuddy scored 12 of his 17 first-half points in this stretch. He finished with a game-high 23 points, including a perfect 8 of 8 from the line.

North Quincy was running away with the game in the first half, before it broke down over the final minutes, allowing Taunton to close the half with a 7-0 run. But after that 6-0 burst after break, North Quincy turned up its defense a notch and stifled the Tigers for the rest of the game.

play to even the score at 1 at the end one.

In the middle frame, the Panthers came up with a break-breaker when Matt Pollara broke in alone and beat goalie Tom Shruhan glove side for a shorthanded strike at 9:30.

"You have to tip your hat to Plymouth South," Sylvia said. "They came down here and had nothing to lose and played a pretty good two-way hockey game. Nothing flashy, but enough so that they gave us fits."

For tickets, contact Ron Ivaldi at (781) 760-3687, or Vin Moscardelli at 328-1312.

Quincy Youth Lacrosse Season Starts April 1

North Quincy Bows To Barnstable, 4-0

By CHRIS POISSON

After snapping a three-game losing skid with a 3-1 win over winless Plymouth South Saturday night at home, the North Quincy hockey team had momentum when it traveled to the Cape Monday afternoon for an important game against Barnstable.

But somewhere on that long bus ride the Red Raiders lost it — as they have done often this season.

Trailing 1-0 in the second period, North Quincy played an embarrassing seven-minute stretch of hockey in which it yielded three goals en route to a 4-0 shutout.

"After the fourth goal I called a timeout to try and stop the bleeding," said head coach Bob Doyle.

North Quincy (5-8, 3-5) hosted undefeated Silver Lake yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday night it will face winless Taunton at home at 7:50 p.m. On Monday, it will battle New Bedford at home at 3 p.m. in a non-league tilt.

With eight games left in the season, including yesterday's game, the Red Raiders need 10 more points to qualify for the state tournament for the fourth year in a row. But Doyle doesn't think the team will pull it off until it starts to have better team chemistry.

"Realistically, it's going to take a miracle," Doyle said. "What I mean by that is I think the kids can play good hockey. We just need some chemistry in there. It's definitely an uphill climb. It doesn't leave much opportunity for mistakes. But we're certainly not throwing in the towel."

In the Barnstable game, defenseman Rob Rice, Stephen Kelley and captain Matt Holt played strong games. Senior forward Joe Cronin also played well. Senior goalie Matt Gregory picked up the loss in net. So far this year, Gregory has struggled to regain last season's form when he backboned the team in its incredible late-season run into the playoffs.

North Quincy was without the services of one of its top defenseman, freshman Tim Duggan, who suffered a mild concussion against Plymouth South Saturday night.

Also in that game, the Red Raiders lost junior center Charlie Sorrento with 11 seconds left in the first period when he was given a major misconduct for spearing. Sorrento, who has just returned after missing time with strep throat, received an automatic two-game suspension, missing Monday's and yesterday's matches. North Quincy felt the effects on the offensive end.

"It definitely hurts us," Doyle said of Sorrento's suspension. "He's a small kid, but he's relentless on the forecheck. He's a spark out there. But it goes back to making poor decisions."

And that is something that has plagued the Red Raiders all season. When the team gets frustrated it makes stupid penalties that change the complexion of the game. North Quincy is averaging 8 to 9 penalties per game.

"It's disrupting everything," Doyle said. "I've sat players, benched players. I've tried everything. It's just snowballing. The bottom line is we have been our own worst enemy. We can't continue to kill penalties left and right because we don't have enough gas on the other end."

Q-NQ Swim Team Sinks Taunton, 83-63

The Quincy-North Quincy swim team knocked off Taunton, 83-63, in a recent meet at Lincoln Hancock Community School.

The 200 medley relay team of Dave Birmingham, Kevin Yan, Mike Cook and Tom Yonin placed second.

Nick Rice and Mike Mangano placed first and second, respectively, in the 200 freestyle event. Pat McGovern took second place in diving.

Cook and Chris Burrows finished second and third in the 200 individual medley.

In the 100-yard butterfly, Cook took the top spot. Vinson came in second and Burrows finished third.

Steve Sousa also contributed to the win with strong performances in the freestyle events.

Quincy Squirt B Hockey Wins Millennium Tourney

The Quincy Squirt B hockey team recently headed north to Waterville Valley, N.H. and captured the 2001 Millennium Tournament.

Quincy opened with a 15-0 drubbing of the New York Cavaliers and never looked back, dominated the tourney from start to finish. Quincy defeated Edgewood, R.I., 13-0, and Warwick, R.I., 8-2, before taking the title game, 12-3, over Warwick.

Although the scores were lopsided, the team demonstrated class and restraint by going into a passing and puck control mode for most of each game.

The scoring was well-balanced with Matt Clifford, Matt Flaherty, Erik Johnson, Kyle Craig, Glen Misho, Tom Conley and Sean Dunn all scoring 5-8 goals each over the weekend event. Scott Richardson and Chris Devlin earned playmaker honors.

The defense of Michael LeBel, Pat Morrissey, Brian McLean, Michael Grant, Billy Kiley and Scott Vallatini was immense, allowing only one shot on net in the first two games. And when the situation called for it, they made strong end-to-end rushes with the puck.

As always the team was anchored by the strong goaltending of Ryan Murphy.

BikeQuincy Committee Meeting Feb. 7

The BikeQuincy Committee will meet Wednesday, Feb. 7 at 7 p.m. in the second-floor conference room at the Quincy YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy.

The purpose of the meeting is to promote a bicycle-friendly city and improve conditions for all cyclists in the Quincy area, including bike commuters, casual riders, ride club members and racers, and families.

The meeting is open to all interested parties, whether they currently bike or not. For more information, call Bruce Hiltunen at (617) 471-6411 or e-mail BHBikes@hotmail.com.

Presidents Take Step Toward Tourney Berth

Scott hit the ice hard. He was taken off the ice on a stretcher for precautionary reasons, but should be okay.

"He was complaining about a little numbness in his lower back," Sylvia said. "It looked worse than it really did. I guess he just fell down the wrong way. The trainer came over and said everything was precautionary."

Scott's injury sparked the Presidents' Jits 15 seconds later. McKeon pocketed the go-ahead goal when he finished off a nice pass from

"We played one period, the third period," Sylvia said. "It's too bad Brian had to go down in order wake everybody up. We finally got some fire on the bench."

The Presidents opened the scoring less than two minutes into the game when Scott took a pass from Andy Ross and beat Beson. At 11:35, Plymouth South's A.J. McCarthy scored on a power fund and mail to Eugene Cavanaugh, 181 Sea St., Weymouth 02189.

WINTER CAR CARE

AAA Recommends Emergency Equipment Kit

Because even the best maintained vehicles can fall victim to frigid winter weather, AAA recommends every vehicle carry the following items to ensure safe winter travel:

- Flashlight — A working flashlight should be stored where the driver can access it without leaving the vehicle. That will enable the motorist to see obstacles and be seen by other drivers when exiting the vehicle in an emergency. Also carry spare batteries.

- Jumper cables — Jumper cables can be an essential tool for starting vehicles with weak or dead batteries, but they should only be used by individuals familiar with the proper safety precautions. Vehicle owner's manuals should be consulted for instructions.

- Abrasive material — Sand or non-clumping cat litter can be spread under the wheels to improve traction when a vehicle becomes stuck in snow or ice. Special traction mats and even floor mats also can be used for this purpose.

- Shovel — A small shovel can be used to carefully dig snow away from wheels.

- Warning devices — Flares or reflective triangles alert other motorists that you are broken down or stuck and helps give them enough time to slow down in order to pass safely.

- Blankets — Cold weather can quickly turn an inconvenient breakdown into a life-threatening situation. Blankets can provide valuable protection against the cold and can help keep you comfortable until help arrives. Floor mats and news papers can also be used to provide insulation in emergencies.

- Snow brush/ice scrapper — It's important that windows and lights are clear of ice and snow in order to maintain adequate visibility. The entire vehicle should be brushed clear so blowing snow does not become a hazard for other motorists.

- Cellular phone — A cellular telephone comes in handy when a motorist needs assistance in the event of a vehicle breakdown.

What To Know Before Renting A Car

(NU) — People often opt to rent a car to ensure maximum freedom and flexibility during their travel. But according to the American Car Rental Association, the most frequently asked question among consumers is: "Should I take the coverage?"

The answer: Check with your insurance company.

"Your insurance agent or insurance company can tell you whether your policy covers a rental car," said Don Himelfarb, ACRA president. "We also suggest checking with your credit card companies to determine if they provide any level of coverage. That way, there is no question whether you should purchase coverage when you pick up your car."

Here are 10 car rental tips from the ACRA experts:

1. Understand optional waivers. These can relieve a renter of financial responsibility if the rental vehicle is damaged while rented.

2. Review optional insurance products. You may elect to get supplemental insurance coverage for liability protection for your personal effects and medical coverage in case of injuries from an accident in the rental car.

3. Check rental requirements in advance. Some rental companies have a minimum age requirements of 21 or 25. Other rental companies will rent to drivers under a certain age, but an underage driver surcharge will apply.

4. Check credit requirements. Most companies require a major credit card at the time of rental to qualify a customer. Generally, they will accept payments by credit, debit or cash at the end of a rental.

5. Shop for the best value. Companies often advertise special rates. Many companies, associations, clubs and organizations have discounts for their members so ask if you are eligible. If your car is being repaired due to an accident, your insurance company or repair shop may have prearranged rates with certain car rental companies.

6. Consider your seating and cargo space needs. Choose a vehicle that best suits the number of passengers, the amount of luggage and the distance you are driving.

7. Request special driving's assistance equipment in advance. You may need it.

8. Reserve early. You're most likely to get the best rate by reserving your car in advance.

9. List all potential drivers on the rental contract. Bring all of them -- with their valid driver's licenses -- when you pick up the car.

10. Review refueling options. Those may include you bringing the car back with the same fuel level as when it was rented; the company refueling the car for a per-gallon charge fee; or you pre-purchasing a tank of gas at the time of rental for a flat fee, thus not having to refuel the car before returning to it.

When traveling, ACRA also reminds you to buckle up yourself and your passengers -- and always strap children in the back seat with car seats as required by law.

Auto Tips

(NU) — Van conversions aren't only ideal for the annual family road trip, but for shuttling kids to school, taking the team to soccer games or riding to the mall.

"Today's van conversions are comfortable, roomy living rooms on wheels, with sophisticated audio/video entertainment, plush seating and much more," said David J. Humphreys, president of the Recreation Vehicle Industry Association.

(NU) — When race teams in the NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series go shopping for tires for their 700-horsepower race trucks, the selection is easy. NASCAR teams all race on the same Goodyear Racing Eagles.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

American Heart Association: Be Prepared For Cardiac Emergency

February is American Heart Month, and the American Heart Association is en-counting all Americans to help improve the national cardiac arrest survival rate by learning the warning signs of cardiac arrest and taking quick action when faced with an emergency.

Less than 5 percent of the people who experience cardiac arrest survive. An estimated 50,000 lives could be saved each year if the national sudden cardiac arrest survival rate is increased from the current 5 percent to 20 percent or higher.

"When a person goes into cardiac arrest, there's only a seven to 10 minute window of opportunity to save their life," says Dr. Larry Motley, Attending Physician at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and Co-Chair of the American Heart Association's "Operation Heart Beat" public education initiative.

This February the American Heart Association is asking the public to be prepared for cardiac emergencies by taking these three steps:

- Know the warning signs of cardiac arrest in order to recognize a medical emergency when it occurs. Cardiac arrest occurs suddenly and dramatically. When the heart goes into cardiac arrest, the heart's electrical impulses become chaotic. This irregular heart rhythm, called ventricular fibrillation, causes the heart to stop suddenly. During cardiac arrest, a victim loses consciousness, stops normal breathing and loses pulse and blood pressure.

Cardiac arrest can be caused by several factors, including heart attack, electrocution, drowning or trauma, or it can have no known cause.

Warning signs are: uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing or pain in the center of the chest lasting for more than a few minutes; pain spreading to the shoulders, neck or arms; and chest discomfort with lightheadedness, fainting, sweating, nausea or shortness of breath.

- Call 9-1-1 immediately to access the emergency medical system upon recognizing any cardiac arrest warning signs.

- Give cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). CPR can help keep the cardiac arrest victim alive until emergency help arrives. CPR also maintains the vital blood flow to the heart and brain and helps sustain the victim until defibrillation (electric shock to the heart) can be administered. If you do not know CPR, contact your local American Heart Association office or call toll-free 1-877-AHA-4CPR to sign up for a CPR course in your area.

"Approximately 600 cardiac arrest victims die every day in the United States," says Dr. Motley. "By taking these crucial steps, Americans can give cardiac arrest victims a second chance at life. Death from sudden cardiac arrest is not inevitable. If more people react quickly by calling 9-1-1 and performing CPR, more lives can be saved."

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Is there help for background noise?

The greatest hurdle for the hearing impaired, is understanding speech in the presence of noise. In a normal working ear, the brain can process complex sounds easier than in a hearing impaired ear. Traditional hearing aids (analog) amplify all sounds equally, even the ones that you don't want, making it difficult to carry on a conversation in the presence of noise.

Today's state-of-the-art in hearing aids is digital. A digital hearing aid can make 40 million calculations in one second! These are programmed for your hearing loss and designed to work more like normal hearing in the presence of noise. The volume adjusts automatically to adapt to noisy as well as quiet situations. Annoying feedback or "whistling" is also controlled by the digital circuitry. As impressive as these products have shown to be in the past 2-3 years, there is nothing better than normal natural hearing.

Take care of what you have and protect your hearing from loud noises. Call or write for brochures on digital products. Now you go and spread the news! -Steve Stephen Tobias Hearing Center 488 Quincy Ave, Quincy, MA 02169 (next to shipyard)

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center, will have morning worship with Holy Communion this Sunday beginning at 10 a.m.

The Rev. William Harding will conduct the service and preach a sermon on "Great Multitudes of Fishes." He will also have a few moments with the children of the Church School before they go to their classes.

The Chancel Choir will sing under the direction of Thomas Boyer, organist. Members of the laconate including Herman Mersereau, Peter Louzan, Mike and Jane Brundage will assist the pastor in serving Holy Communion.

Scripture reader will be Corinne Mikami. Betty Newton and Ann Krollman will serve as greeters.

Following the worship service, a Fellowship Hour will be held in Allen Parlor. Childcare is available for infants and toddlers.

It will also be Pantry Shelf Sunday with all foods contributed going to the Interfaith Social Services Pantry Shelf Program.

The Church Growth Committee sponsors a Parish Nursing program on the first and third Sunday of the month. It offers blood pressure screening, diabetes screening as well as monitoring advice and referrals. Several registered nurses in the congregation assist in this program aimed to help the congregation and the community.

All-Night Eucharistic Vigil At St. Boniface

An All-Night Eucharistic Vigil will be held Friday and Saturday at St. Boniface Church, corner of Shed and Palmer Streets, Germantown.

Mass will begin at 9 p.m., followed by Eucharistic Procession at 10:30 p.m. Stations of the Cross at 3 a.m. and Mass at 5 a.m.

Learning Volunteer Program At Union Congregational

Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, is hosting tutoring sessions for those interested in becoming a volunteer "learning partner" in a Christian outreach program. The sessions began Wednesday, Feb. 7 and meet once a week on Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 9 p.m. in the second floor Guild Room.

Volunteer "learning partners" work with students in a supervised, one-on-one setting to assist them in achieving their educational objectives -- preparing for SATs, the GED, MCAS tests or other educational pursuits.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Stubborn as a mule." No one seems to know how or when the saying started. The Bible says something about it. In Psalm 32 we read, "Be not as the horse or as the mule which have no understanding." Maybe the saying comes from there.

Some people are more stubborn than others. Stubbornness can be described as hard-headedness, hard to get along with, set in one's ways and so on. When one is in such a mood or has that attitude, it is often impossible to reason with that person. At such times "they have no understanding" has a special meaning. It takes patience to try to reach an understanding because neither one strives with understanding for an understanding. When understanding is reached, stubbornness vanishes like a smoke ring ... When two people stubbornly hold opposing views, it is impossible to reach an understanding. When an issue is big enough, it is important for at least one of the two "stubborns" to have an understanding of the other person's lack of understanding ...

Your Social Security

A Wrong Number Can Delay Your Tax Return

By LAURIE ZASTROW

As regular as clockwork, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) reminds us to pay our taxes by sending us a Form 1040 soon after the first of the year.

If you're due a refund, you also want to make sure you receive it promptly. You can avoid delays by verifying that all names and Social Security numbers are recorded correctly on your tax return.

When processing tax returns, IRS checks all names and Social Security numbers for accuracy. In the past, IRS matched the names and numbers of taxpayers and their spouses. Now, the names and numbers of all dependents, including newborns, listed on the tax return are checked.

When IRS discovers an incorrect Social Security number on your tax return, they will send you a letter explaining the discrepancy. You must fix the problem by giving IRS the correct Social Security number before you can get a tax refund. If you don't already have a number or if you need one for a dependent, call or visit a Social Security office.

In addition, check the Social Security number and name on your W-2 statement and pay stubs to make sure it matches the one on your Social Security card. If it doesn't, tell your employer immediately.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There's more amour on tap for the ever-amorous Aries. Partnered relationships grow stronger, while lone Lambs could find a Leo romantically receptive.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your workplace finally sends you the good news you've been hoping to hear. Congratulations! Your personal life also takes a decided turn for the better.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) New information might emerge that could cause you to rethink a decision you made a while ago. Dig deeper for more facts, and then act on what you've learned.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This might not be a good time to make major changes or commitments, unless you're absolutely sure you have all the information you need to act.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Love looms large in the Big Cat's aspect these days. Paired denmates grow closer, while single Lions could find a Libra just right for romancing.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This could be a good time to reconsider that major purchase you've put off. But check everything—including financing options—before you buy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your strength and love help a family member come through a crisis. Meanwhile, the adjustments you made in your business venture begin to pay off.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Patience is needed to help you cope with an apparently stalled relationship. Don't force it to move. Instead, give it time to grow into its own potential.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Romantic aspects are strong for the single Archer looking to turn a flirtatious situation (with a Pisces, perhaps) into something more permanent.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) An unexpected admission could help clear up a painful misunderstanding. Keep an open mind about what you hear, and avoid being judgmental.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This is a good time (for one of the zodiac's great romantics (namely, you!)) to consider making that love commitment you've been thinking about.

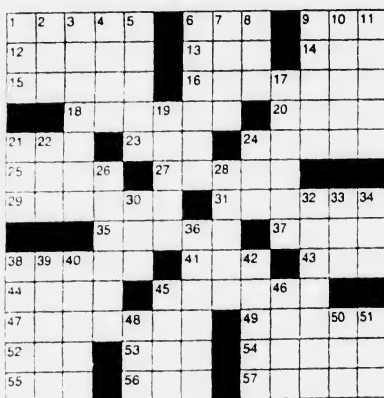

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although you enjoy fantasizing about romance, you enjoy the reality of it most of all. A Sagittarian would love to share that reality with you.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You are a generous person who likes to make people happy. You also make friends quickly and keep them forever.

in said County, respondents, and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Luigi Servizio of Beverly in the County of Essex representing in the hold interest in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County Norfolk and briefly described as follows: the land in that part of said Quincy called Atlantic, being lot numbered Four Hundred Thirty, on a plan of "Norfolk Downs," by Charles D. Elliot, dated April 1892, and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, Book of Plans 14, Plan 640, and bounded and described as follows.

NORTHERLY by Billings
Road, fifty-five (55) feet.

EASTERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Thirty-
One on said plan, one hundred twelve and 9/10 (112.9)
feet.

SOUTHERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Eleven,
on said plan, forty-five (45)
feet, and

WESTERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Ten, on said plan, one hundred nine
and 15/100 (109.15) feet.

Containing, according to said plan, 5,560 square feet of land.

Hereby conveying all of my right, title and interest in the same premises conveyed to me, and to Eustachio
Cusianna and Adele J.
Cusianna, husband and wife, by deed of Frank Wynne, of said Quincy (erroneously referred to in said
deed as being of Suffolk County, Massachusetts)
dated April 15, 1969 and recorded with said Registry in Book 4586, Page 1, setting forth that he desire that -- all
-- of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $300,000.00 dollars, and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid, according to law, and to that end that a commissioner
be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance
of all or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided,
either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk

Sewer System Upgrade Contracts Awarded

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's (MWRA) effort to improve sewer pumping facilities on the South Shore took a major step this fall as the board of directors signed off on the construction of two new wastewater pumping facilities in Quincy.

Both the Quincy Pumping Station, located in Merry Mount Park, and the Squantum Pump Station off of Huckins Ave. will be replaced with new facilities as part of the Quincy Pump Facilities Project. The intent of the five-part project is to improve the MWRA sewer facilities that serve over 60,500
Quincy residents and many commercial, industrial, and institutional establishments.
The two new facilities will replace antiquated systems with updated pumping stations that have the correct flow capacity as well as odor control technology.

"All of us who support a clean and healthy Wollaston

Beach and Quincy Bay, as well as anyone who has endured a sewage backup in their home or business, will welcome this announcement," said Doug Gutro, vice-chairman of Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and past president of the Ward 5 Civic Association. "Many of us who have been following the progress of this project hoped we would be further along at this point. However, regardless of the timing, there is no arguing the benefits of upgrading the century-old systems.
When completed, they will reduce sewage backups, improve flow, and ultimately decrease the amount that can seep into storm drains, many of which discharge along Wollaston Beach. It's good news for all Quincy residents."

The $6,538,642 contract for the Quincy Pumping Station was awarded to the lowest bidder, P. Gioroso & Sons, Inc., of Hyde Park, in October. The work should be completed in less than two years.

The work will include the construction of a new brick facility in Merry Mount Park, adjacent to the old building.

The existing Quincy
Pumping Station was constructed in the 1890's, has been operating ever since, and has become too antiquated to handle the sewer demands of the Quincy residents it is currently serving.
While it has the capacity to handle normal flows, wet weather has on occasion produced flows that exceed the station's limits. The new facility will better handle all flows.

According to MWRA
Executive Director Douglas
B. MacDonald, "The Quincy projects represent part of a series of improvements that we have undertaken to rebuild the South Sewer System. Although much remains to be done, the South System improvements including the new Brantree Weymouth sewer tunnel, will help to end some of the overflows which have plagued residents for many years. These projects will also help continue progress made to restore the health of Boston Harbor, its tributaries, and bays," said MacDonald.

When the new Quincy Pumping Station is finished, the old building will be re-landscaped to blend in with Merry Mount Park. The new station will pump wastewater through recently rehabi-tated sewer mains to MWRA's High Level Sewer that reaches to the Nut Island Headworks facility. After leaving Nut Island the sewage travels through the Inter-Island Tunnel on its way to the Deer Island Wastewater Treatment Plant.

The Squantum Pump Station, a 1930's facility that serves 5,600 Quincy residents and several large commercial users, is undergoing very similar modifications and should also be completed in two years.

Flood Relief Project Key To Hancock Lot Development

along with a three-story garage capable of handling over 1,000 vehicles, including more than 600 public parking spaces.

Other speakers included Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000; Planning Director Richard Meade; Anthony Lionetta, P.E., New England manager of Transportation Services for Earth Tech, the firm handling the Quincy Concourse Project; and Jack Kendrick of Kendrick Financial, consultants in public and corporate finance.

A similar presentation was held Jan. 24 at a community meeting called by Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin, at which the issues of flood relief and Phase II of the Quincy Concourse Project were again topics of discussion.

Mannarino, who emphasized the $50 million proposal was only at the "concept" stage with no developer on board, told QCBPA members that the development was in keeping with the city's master plan to develop Quincy Center and would bring much needed night time and weekend activity to the downtown.

Addressing zoning issues, Planning Director Meade said that the project would require zoning variances as well as approval by the City Council, but added that "any development of this parcel will necessitate Board of Appeals relief."

Earth Tech's Lionetta told the audience that residential units made sense given the Hancock Lot's "transitional" status between residential and commercial areas, adding that the proposed garage would offer 475 parking spaces for private use and 675 public parking spaces, an improvement over the current 520 public spaces.

The current plan calls for 244 two-bedroom units, 18 two to three-bedroom units, and 32 one-bedroom units.

Finally, feasibility issues were addressed by Kendrick, who said the proposal solves the problem of how to build a public parking garage with no public financing. "From a conceptual standpoint, the plan works," Kendrick said.

Mannarino and other speakers said that a roughly 300-unit, market rate complex was needed to provide enough economic incentive for a private developer to finance the estimated $7.5 million cost of public parking, which would remain in the control of the city.

The panel faced several questions concerning the details of the proposal but the mood of the meeting, which ended with a round of applause, was favorable.

"The plan received a very positive reception," said QCBPA Executive Director Maralin Manning. "This group understands the importance of bringing residents to the downtown."

"We have a win-win situation on both sides here," said QCBPA President Richard Gormley.

The Jan. 24 informational meeting held by Durkin was less uniform in its approval, with several business leaders praising the initiative of Quincy 2000 and some residents raising the flooding issue.

"This is what we've wanted for a dozen years now," said Robert Curry of Curry Ace Hardware. "We need more of this, not less. I think it's a wonderful proposal."

In disagreement was Revere Rd. resident Arline Goodman, who presented 21 questions to the panel addressing flooding, traffic, land ownership, and other issues.

Raymond, who was unable to attend the QCBPA meeting but was present at the Jan. 24 meeting, said the time for talk on the Town Brook Flood Control Project was over.

"We don't need any more attention to the problem; what we need is $5 million from the state," said Raymond, who has lived in the area for decades and has suffered numerous floods, as have, he said, his neighbors, downtown shops, and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce itself. "We have a state surplus, a federal surplus. It's time to act now."

Raymond said one of the more frustrating aspects of the project was that the majority of the multi-million dollar project is complete, but area residents still face floods because there is no relief conduit. "Because the state is dragging its feet on a $5 million dollar project, we're not getting the benefits of that huge investment," he said.

The City Council, Raymond pointed out, is already on record against financing of the $5 million dollar Phase II of the Quincy Concourse until the Town Brook flooding issues are resolved.

He called any talk of City Council approval of the new development "very premature."

"You're putting the cart before the horse," Raymond told those at the Jan. 24 meeting. "Town Brook funding is not even on the radar screen."

The DPW's Colton was in agreement. "It (Hancock Lot Development) can't go forward without both of those projects (Town Brook, Phase II of the concourse)," said Colton. "The three are linked."

Bellotti To Provide Domestic Violence Victims With Emergency Cell Phones

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti is initiating a "Cells For Safety" program, which will provide domestic violence victims free cell phones with automatic 9-1-1 service.

"I'm happy to offer assistance to local police departments in this crucial area of domestic violence prevention," Bellotti said.

Also joining the effort is Peace At Home, a Jamaica Plain non-profit human rights agency, which has agreed to donate 30 cell phones to the cause.

The sheriff's office will supply an additional 75 phones and will determine how many more phones need to be added once the program is underway. The sheriff expects to start delivering phones to local police departments within the next two weeks.

Letters have already been sent to Norfolk County chiefs of police informing them of the program and asking for their requests.

The sheriff's office recently became aware of the need for cell phones after finding informal phone calls to local police departments. This month at a Norfolk County Domestic Violence Roundtable meeting, police officers from various departments agreed the program would help.

The sheriff's office will provide the cell phones based on the specific needs of each police department.

Many police departments already operate emergency cell phone programs and can take advantage of "Cells For Safety" if they need more.

"This program will help alleviate the fear and helplessness that victims of domestic violence often feel," Bellotti said. "With a personal cell phone, they can call for emergency help anytime, anywhere."

"This will not only help victims out of dangerous situations, but help them avoid situations altogether."

Because cell phones don't need paid service to be programmed to dial 9-1-1, the "Cells For Safety" phones offer quick, easy help, he said. The phones will not receive incoming calls or generate telephone charges.

The sheriff's Victim Services Unit and Domestic Violence Unit will oversee the "Cells For Safety" program.

Each cell phone, battery and battery charger will have its own identification number and be the property of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office. The cell phones will be labeled and logged in a master list for inventory purposes.

The phones will then be delivered to local police departments where they will be made available to victims at no cost.

Domestic violence officers in each police department will determine who gets the phones. They will also assess the department's ongoing need for cell phones as well as an individual victim's continuing need for a phone.

Every victim who fills out an application for a cell phone at their local police station will receive an information sheet explaining how to use the 9-1-1 only phone and how to keep it charged.

'No Front Runners' For New QHS Site

The commission arrived at the list of 12 at its Jan. 23 meeting when, by unanimous vote, it removed the following sites from consideration: Pond St.; Sandy Beach Nevada Rd.; Bradlee's Plaza; Winfield House Property; Fore River Shipyard; Cleverly Ct.; South St.; Freedom Park; Veterans' Stadium; Raytheon site; Hancock Parking Lot; Crown Colony; and Highpoint.

With the list now at 12 sites, Cedrone said the next step was not to choose a site but to establish a process for making such a decision, an issue Cedrone said could hopefully be resolved at its next meeting, which was scheduled for Tuesday night in the Colonel Parker Suite in the School Administration Building.

"I believe that probably everyone has their own favorite site, and I don't think there's one perfect site that will make everyone happy,"

Cedrone said. "But we all have different opinions and it's important that every opinion be voiced."

With public input a priority, the commission meets every Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Colonel Parker Suite, with the exception of February Vacation, in which no meetings are scheduled to give commission members a much needed break, Cedrone said.

Upcoming commission meeting dates are Feb. 6, 13, and 27.

Each meeting, Cedrone added, begins with a 15-minute open forum, similar to School Committee meetings, in which all Quincy residents can express their opinions.

Cedrone said she has read and heard reports that commission members are already lobbying for their own favorite sites, but again emphasized no such discussions had taken place at the commission itself.

Cedrone also wanted to make clear that the charge of her commission was clear: to find a site for a new Quincy High School.

"We absolutely need a new Quincy High School," said Cedrone, noting the technology, space, and regulation issues at the current building. "Just to make the CTE (Center For Technical Education) ADA compliant would cost more than to build a new high school."

Residents seeking more information or wishing to provide input can contact Cedrone at (617) 479-2217.

The new Quincy High School, slated to open in September of 2004, is part of a $100 million school renovation plan undertaken by the city.

Plans for the new high school were stalled recently when Mayor James Sheets, citing lack of public confidence in the original site off Quincy Avenue, a former dumpsite for Bethlehem Steel, decided to remove the parcel from city consideration.

THE CITY COUNCIL voted Monday night to withhold approval of any part of the planned 300 apartment units in the Hancock Parking lot until the Town Brook flooding problem is resolved. This photo, one of several displayed by Councillor Dan Raymondi at the meeting, shows the Miller Stile Rd. and Bigelow St. area taking on the appearance of a river when Town Brook flooded in October, 1996. The brook runs under the Hancock Parking lot.

Until Town Brook Flooding Resolved

City Council Puts Brakes On 300 Hancock Lot Apartments

The City Council flashed a red light Monday night at the proposed Hancock Lot Development until the issue of the flooding of Town Brook is completely resolved.

The action was taken after Ward 1 Councillor Daniel Raymondi displayed photos of flooded homes and offices in the Bigelow St. and Miller Stile Rd. neighborhood following a storm in October of 1996.

"You would think that someone built a brick building in the middle of Wollaston Beach," Raymondi remarked of one particular photo, adding that flooding has been an unresolved problem in the area for decades.

The council voted seven to one in favor of a resolve authored by Raymondi and Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin that the council oppose any and all aspects of Quincy 2000's proposed development of the Hancock Parking Lot for residential units until the as yet unfunded and unconstructed Bigelow St. Relief Conduit is up and running.

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott was the lone vote against, stating that he supported the goal of the resolve but not the methods used.

"It seems like a very negative way to go about it," said McDermott, who pointed to the long history of success the city has enjoyed over the years by partnering with business. "There's no question in anyone's mind that this project (flood relief) has been delayed for too long, but my problem comes when a resolution says we're going to halt a project and not listen anymore."

The Quincy 2000 proposal calls for roughly 300 residential units to be privately financed and constructed on the current lot with a three-story parking garage designed to accommodate both apartment residents and public parking.

The $5 million dollar conduit, which would run under both the proposed development and Phase II of the Quincy Concourse Project, would be the final piece of the $55 million, 4,000 foot-long Town Brook Flood Control Project, the rest of which was completed in the late 1990's.

"This is a case where 10 percent of a $55 million tunnel project is left but it affects 100 percent of the viability of the project," Raymondi said.

In defending the strong language of the resolve — which calls for the council "to object, table, and vote against any and all aspects of the (Hancock Lot) Project" until the Bigelow St. conduit is in operation — Raymondi cited Joseph Bocchino of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers who said, "The tunnel will help alleviate flooding in the Bigelow St. area by reducing the overall amount of flood water. But the problem won't be entirely solved until the Metropolitan District Commission builds the Bigelow St. culvert, which is designed to channel storm water.

"The Bigelow St. culvert is critical to the overall effectiveness of the whole flood-control system. If any piece of the puzzle isn't working, the whole system is weakened."

Mayor James Sheets said that the council's resolve came as no surprise to him and, indeed, the importance of the Bigelow St. Relief Conduit was discussed at a Monday staff meeting.

"It (the resolve) really doesn't put anything on hold," said Sheets. "I had already indicated that the

Wards, Precincts To Be Re-districted Census May Put City At 90,000

By CRAIG SALTERS

With redistricting on the horizon but 2000 Federal Census figures not yet available, City Clerk Joseph Shea told city councillors Monday night he expects the city's official population count to rise, possibly reaching the 90,000 mark.

This would be an increase of about 5,000 from the last federal census of 1990 which counted 84,985 Quincy residents.

Once the official census figures are in, Shea said, his office will use those numbers for the redistricting of wards and precincts, as mandated by state and federal laws.

The entire process, which includes a public hearing by the board of registrars scheduled for April, must be completed and approved by the state on or before August 25.

Shea emphasized that the majority of Quincy residents will be unaffected by any redistricting but added the city was considering a state suggestion to reduce the amount of precincts in the city from 30 to 24.

If adopted, the city's six wards would have four precincts each instead of the traditional five.

The Col. John Quincy Tankard Makes Its Public Debut

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS delivers the Col. John Quincy Tankard to The Quincy Sun for its first public display in the Sun front window last Friday. He was escorted by former City Council President Kolson and Quincy Police Officer Matt Patten who guarded the tankard during its display.

THE QUINCY TANKARD on display in The Quincy Sun window last Friday. The first public display included a poster with facts about Colonel John Quincy for whom Quincy is named and who donated the tankard to the First Parish Church in 1767. The tankard was brought back to the city by George Burke who bid $160,000 for it at an auction at Sotheby in New York.

MANY STOPPED BY throughout the day Friday to view the Col. John Quincy Tankard in The Quincy Sun window during its first public viewing in 234 years. And many of them commended Atty. George Burke for saving the tankard for Quincy by bidding $160,000 for it at a New York auction. The Quincy Historical Society will display the tankard March 30 to April 1.

Ward 2 Democrats To Caucus March 10

Registered Democrats in Ward 2 will hold a caucus Saturday, March 10 at 10 a.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy, to elect 10 delegates and six alternates to the Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The convention will be held Saturday, June 2 at the Springfield Civic Center.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Ward 2. Candidates for delegate and alternate must consent to nomination in writing. All candidates may make a two-minute statement and may distribute materials on their behalf. All ballots will be written and secret.

Those registered Democrats unable to attend may be considered for delegate and alternate by two-thirds of those present and voting. Those not elected as delegate and alternate may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority and disabled.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic Party, 129 Portland St., Boston 02114 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

Cellucci Brings $650,000 For First Time Homebuyers

Quincy-based non-profit agencies Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services will each receive a $325,000 state grant to assist first-time homebuyers in a dozen communities across the South Shore with down payment and closing costs and lead paint removal.

The grants are part of more than $4 million awarded statewide by the Cellucci-Swift administration through programs administered by the state Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD).

"Through the hard work of agencies like Quincy Community Action Program and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, we are able to reach out and help make the American dream of homeownership a reality for everyone in the state," said Governor Paul Cellucci, who was scheduled to make a visit to the city

Wednesday and present the grants to Normand Grenier, executive director of Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, and Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of QCAP.

"The assistance the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is providing our agencies will enable South Shore residents to realize their dream of homeownership," said Grenier.

The grants, said Mayor James Sheets, reflected Governor Cellucci's commitment to dealing with the state's affordable housing crisis as well as his confidence in the city's ability to make good use of the funds.

"These grants speak to the Governor's confidence that the City of Quincy can take these funds and multiply them to their best advantage," said Sheets, who cited the award given the city's Planning Department last year by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

QCAP and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, who work with private lenders to obtain the best rates for first-time homebuyers, will receive purchasing assistance ranging from approximately $6,200 to $8,300 for income-eligible, first-time homebuyers who attend mandatory homebuying courses.

Earlier this week Governor Cellucci filed a legislative package addressing the state's housing crisis that included proposals to:

- Dedicate nearly 1,000 acres of underutilized state property for residential development.

- Offer tax relief to builders who construct houses for low, moderate, and middle-income families.

- Commit an additional $460 million over the next five years for housing and community development.

- Protect the rental housing supply by requiring tenants to place withheld rent in a court-controlled escrow account while tenant-landlord disputes are settled.

D'Amico Forms West Quincy Traffic Alliance

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico announces the formation of a West Quincy Traffic Alliance. A cross-section of local residents will work closely with D'Amico and Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon to study traffic patterns and make targeted recommendations. The group has already requested Mayor James Sheets to recruit a professional consultant to assist with this important task.

"This is just another major component of the Ward 4 Traffic Masterplan 1 started implementing soon after taking office in 1996," D'Amico said. "I believe more gets done in this part of the city because real people are empowered and involved in the issues affecting them."

Because of D'Amico's inclusive approach, much has already been done to Make Ward 4 streets safer for motorists and pedestrians alike, including:

- New synchronized signals have been installed along Willard St. and Westson Ave. and new signals are currently being put in place at Battery March Park.

- Signals have been placed at the intersection of Common, West, and Centre Sts.

- New signals at Albertina and Centre Sts.

- Trucks are forbidden on most South Quincy roadways which include Intervale, Liberty, Penn, Rodman, and Trafford Sts.

- Modified roads to end

Durkin Seeks Crossing Guard For Burgin Parkway

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin is advocating for a permanent School Crossing Guard on Burgin Parkway to protect Central Middle School students walking to and from school.

The request, Durkin said, follows a recent incident involving a Central Middle School student who was struck by a car.

Mayor James Sheets said the request has been forwarded to Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon who will study the situation and report back as to the best location for a crossing guard and the safest solution to the problem.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SERVICE WITH A SMILE

By adhering to a program of oral health maintenance at home and regular office visits, the public can generally expect to prevent common problems with its teeth. In fact, the majority of younger patients who brush and floss daily and receive dental sealants can expect to be cavity-free through their adolescence. Older patients can avert gum disease (their primary concern) by addressing plaque buildup with office cleanings. When tooth loss, breakage, or misalignment does occur, there are a variety of advanced restoration and replacement techniques available that render the synthetic versions virtually indistinguishable from natural teeth. We invite you to make use of our column in order the make better choices about your oral health.

I am Dr. Steven A. Brustin

I am pleased to welcome you to our column. We want you to receive the highest quality, complete, affordable dental care available. We keep abreast of all new procedures, and we would like to increase public awareness of the importance of preventive oral health care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our aim is to provide individual attention and care to every patient so that we can learn about his or her special needs. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Flossing is every bit as important as daily brushing in fighting plaque buildup and tooth decay.

Luxury Apartments And Affordable Housing

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It is truly amazing that while an affordable housing crisis seems to have taken hold in this city, we continue to waste time, energy and the idea of public monies on moving the USS Salem from the Quincy Shipyard to Marina Bay.

In comparison, it would surely be comical if the issue of increasing the affordability of the housing stock wasn't so serious an issue. Nearly a year ago Mayor James Sheets stated, "Affordable housing for working families is one of our city's greatest needs."

But last week's Quincy Sun headline on Page One speaks to the multi-million dollar project sought by Quincy 2000 to create 500 luxury residential units in Quincy Center on an existing parking lot. The drawing on the front page looks like an ad for Foxwoods.

Many folks, including this writer, think this project, as well as the planned luxury apartments to be built by the Grossman Company nearby on Hancock Street by the I station, can only have a negative effect on working families trying to stay here and survive the high costs of housing, whether as an owner or renter. I am sure we can build more luxury apartments or condos, and another is planned for the Quincy Hills golf course, you send monthly rents and house prices higher.

What will Quincy look like in the year 2025? Will we be a diverse community or will we be a city that only the wealthy can afford? Will it be luxury apartments or condos pined against shelter beds at Father Bill's?

The politicians in office today will set the course for the next two decades. If we continue to look for the urban gentry to move south from Boston, what is to be for middle-class homeowners and working-class families? We are fast becoming a city of extremes from Germantown to Marina Bay. People living side by side yet worlds apart. The tide is getting quite low when it comes to affordable housing. Many of our polls seem preoccupied with all sorts of distractions such as the USS Salem, which is the least of our worries.

It seems so easy to preoccupy one's self with side attractions when the main feature for the future is whether or not we continue to be a city that attracts people across the economic border.

Mayor Sheets talks about affordable housing for working families, but action speaks louder than words. If we chase working families out of Quincy, new foot traffic in downtown Quincy will be meaningless, won't it?

Shrinking Quincy's affordable housing base will hurt working families and force many to search elsewhere for needed housing. That cost seems too high to me. "Affordable Housing" should mean real housing for real people.

Action On The Council Front

Looks like a lot of action brewing on the city council front this election year.

Challenges for three of the six ward seats -- Wards 4, 5, and 6 -- already are shaping up.

And you might see such names as Christine Cedrone and John Keenan in the at-large field with an open seat there if Paul Harold decides not to seek re-election.

Keenan, Mayor James Sheets's executive secretary, plans to leave that post for a career change. He has applied for the position of Financial Coordinator to the Norfolk County Advisory Board and was interviewed last week by the County Commissioners. He expects to know by Feb. 21 if the job is his.

And, if it is, he acknowledges he is considering running for councillor at-large.

Keenan was involved in a close race for the Ward 5 seat in 1987 with Charles "Chuck" Phelan and Kevin Burke.

Phelan wrapped up one of the nominations in the preliminary election and it looked like Burke had the other by four votes. Keenan filed for a recount and took the second nomination by just one vote. Phelan won the seat in the final election by 250 votes. Incidentally, William Galvin, now Secretary of State, represented Keenan in the recount.

Meanwhile, Christine Cedrone is being urged to run and would make a formidable candidate.

She topped the school committee field in 1999 and was the third highest vote-getter on the ballot behind Sheets and Harold.

She acknowledges people have been asking her to run including those stressing "we need a woman there." The council has been all-male since the late Patricia Toland left in 1999 to become assistant city clerk.

Will Cedrone run? "I don't want to say yes or now at this time. I've been so busy. I haven't had time to sit down and even think about it."

Serving as chairwoman of the special commission exploring sites for the new Quincy High School is one thing keeping her busy. She is also vice-chairwoman of the Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners.

And, she is keeping busy planning her wedding. She and Vin Scarnici, who has been her campaign manager from the start, will be married Nov. 10 at St. John's Church with their good friend, Fr. William McCarthy doing the honors.

"That's right around election time," she says. "A political campaign might be a little difficult."

A recent graduate of New England Law School she is also staying busy in the law office of Atty. Tom Williams, a former city solicitor.

But she hasn't ruled out a council bid. "I'll really give it some thought," she says.

KEENAN

GUTRO

Wards 4 and 6 incumbents Mike D'Amico and Joseph Newton already have definite challengers in Bryan Connolly and Maryann Mahony.

And Ward 5's Steve Durkin appears to have one getting ready.

"I'm giving serious consideration to running," says Doug Gutro, a community activist. "I'm in the process of organizing a candidate's committee and will make a final decision in March."

Gutro, a program manager for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, is the past and first president of the Ward 5 Association. He is also a member of the Wollaston Beach Task Force and the Beach and Coastal Commission.

The main reason he is thinking of running, he says: "I have a passion for the issues in the ward. Among them: traffic, safety, siting for the new Quincy High School, Wollaston Beach and development."

Gutro informed Durkin that he is considering running.

Connolly, who is 26 and lives on Gridley St., says he is definitely running for the Ward 4 seat whether D'Amico runs for re-election or for an at-large seat.

"It doesn't matter," he says. "I'm running for Ward 4 and will make an official announcement in April."

A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, he is now in his first year at Boston College Law School. He interned with the late Clifford Marshall in the Norfolk County Sheriff's office.

Mahony, who lost a bid for the Ward 6 seat in 1999, says she is running again because she "owes it to all the people who supported me in 1999."

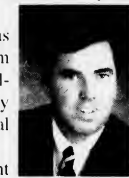

Could be one of the city's better election years.

YOU MIGHT NOT see them in helmets and running a hose line but state Senator Michael Morrissey and Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond are now honorary firefighters.

The honor was bestowed on them at the recent installation of Quincy Fire Fighters Local 792.

Local President William Arienti presented them with plaques inscribed: "For your fast and continued support and dedication to Quincy Fire Fighters..."

It doesn't mean, however, that they will stop their little fires on Beacon Hill and in the City Council chamber.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS WAS THE FIRST POSTCARD view that we printed in this Scenes From Yesterday series. We have just completed our seventh year of the series. This 1923 postcard is a view from the front of the newly opened Foy's Market at 1259 Hancock Street in Quincy Square looking down Washington Street. Today a newly opened branch of the South Coastal Bank is on the Foy's Market side. On the left the W.G. Shaw's Furniture store later became the Bargain Center and is now the site of the Presidents' Place office complex. As shown here all the streets around the church on the right were two-way traffic, today the church is the center of a counter clockwise rotary.

Concerned New QHS Will Be Overcrowded

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a taxpayer and parent of young children, I am concerned that the new Quincy High School may be overcrowded when my children are in high school. All over Quincy there are new condominiums, housing developments, and apartments being built. However, the school department plan is to dismantle our huge, centrally located, comprehensive high school that has a capacity for over 3,000 students to build a new high school for 1,400 students.

The 90 percent state reimbursement for a school with 1,000 high school and 400 vocational students is approximately $40 million. The new proposed high school will cost many millions over that amount. If the City of Quincy demolishes or sells a school, the Department of Education will not give a reimbursement for the next 10 years. What a burden on the taxpayers if the new small high school is not enough. The recent Accreditation Report gave wonderful reviews for our comprehensive high school being completely wired for Internet and cable, having a beautiful new auditorium and the tremendous academic advantage of the location of the high school being close to the college, library, YMCA, the MBTA, and downtown Quincy. The city is spending $24 million to renovate the high school for Central. Why can't it be renovated for the high school students?

The plan to replace Central Middle School was made without doing any of the proper studies. The state would most likely reimburse renovation to Central and encourages renovations over new building. It is time to do the studies on Central to see what needs to be renovated. The high school building with a capacity for 2,000 students is too large for a middle school even after the entire middle school Behavioral Program and English as a Second Language Program is put in with Central. The Quincy College Coddington School would be a much better school to house the Central students. We are fortunate that the city had the wisdom to keep that building for future use for our public school students and it is quite obvious that the College has outgrown that space.

The Center for Technical Education has capacity for 1100 students with over 800 students currently enrolled in vocational studies and waiting lists for many programs.

The school department plan is to waste taxpayer dollars to demolish this functional 33-year old building with state-of-the-art TV and computer facilities, a large gymnasium, and plenty of extra space to build a new high school with capacity for only 400 vocational students.

The City of Quincy taxpayers already have a large, structurally sound, beautiful, historic Quincy High School in a perfect location, surrounded by educational institutions. Why is the school committee encouraging the taxpayers to fund a huge debt to build a new high school with less than half the current capacity, in a location that will never be as advantageous to the students' education as the current location.

Thanks George Burke For The Quincy Tankard

(The following letter was submitted to The Sun by the writer for publication.)

Mr. George Burke
174 Warren Ave.
Wollaston, MA 02170

Dear Mr. Burke:

Thank you very much for bidding on and obtaining the Quincy Tankard. Due to your efforts and your love for Quincy, an almost lost piece of history will now remain in our City.

I am a teacher at Quincy High School. One of the classes I teach to every ninth-grader is a short introduction to business. In a whirlwind two and half weeks, students learn common and useful business vocabulary. When I introduce philanthropist, I never fail to mention your name as a very generous man, who gives scholarships to UMass, Quincy High School (my son received your scholarship in 1998), and North Quincy High School. When I mention your contribution of the weight room at Quincy High School in Clifford Marshall's name, the students are all very interested.

You are a piece of Quincy history! Thank you.

Sincerely,
Gina Scanlan

Creedon Calls For Increased Guidance Staff

By PAUL HAROLD

School Supt. Lawrence Creedon called for an increase in the number of guidance counselors at the elementary school level. He said that traditionally, the main thrust of guidance counselors was at the junior and senior high levels, but that recent drop-out rates and other measures called for counselors at the elementary level. His call for the hiring of 20 new counselors would add $1 to the tax rate.

Feb. 8-14
31 Years Ago

His remarks were made at a meeting of the Quincy Federal of Women's Clubs held at the YMCA. He also discussed new school construction. The Arthur D. Little report noted that the schools could house 14,000, but the current pupil census was 17,000.

POND ST. YOUTH CENTER PROPOSED

The Ward 2 Civic Association proposed a youth center on Pond St., adjacent to the Mumroe Play ground, at an estimated cost of $6,800. The association's plan called for the moving of the house at 12 Upland Rd. to Pond St. to house the center. It was one of the houses on Upland Rd. taken by eminent domain for road widening.

Proponents of the youth center included Owen Eaton, James Lyons, Keith McElwain and City Councillor and State Rep. Clifford Marshall.

Park Board Chairman James McCormick lent his support to the plan, but said that a recent grant of $32,000 from the state couldn't be used for this project.

MCINTYRE PUSHES TRANSFER OF DAM TO BRAINTREE

Mayor James McIntyre lent his support to a plan that would transfer the Quincy Dam in Braintree to the town of Braintree for recreation uses. The dam used to serve as a water supply source for the city, but was no longer needed for that purpose.

Braintree wanted control of the dam for better policing and supervision of the 64 acres adjacent to the South Shore Plaza. McIntyre said that Braintree's intention to dredge the dam and maintain water levels at eight feet would help reduce the flooding in South Quincy.

Councillor John Quinn was in support of the plan but wanted to have the land revert back to the city if Braintree used it for purposes other than recreation. The proposal was sent to the council's committee on land conveyancing. Added to the membership of the committee was Ward 3 Councillor John Keogler who represented the South Quincy neighborhood most impacted by the flooding from the dam.

QUINCY-ISMS

Mrs. Annie Forsyth of Monroe Rd. died at age 77. She taught in Quincy and the Philippines and was a member of the school committee. . . Quincy Tankard To Be Displayed At Historical Society

The historic 1767 Colonel John Quincy silver tankard will be publicly displayed at the Quincy Historical Society Museum at the Adams Academy during the weekend of March 30 to April 1, Society President Joyce I. Baker announces.

"We believe this will be the first museum display of the tankard in more than half a century," Mrs. Baker said.

The first public display of the tankard with historic facts pertaining to it was in the window of The Quincy Sun last Friday and attracted a large number of viewers throughout the day.

The tankard was a bequest to Quincy's First Parish Church by colonial leader John Quincy and was part of the church's colonial silver collection auctioned at Sotheby's in New York Jan. 19. George Burke of Quincy made the successful bid on the tankard.

"We are extremely grateful to George Burke for preserving this irreplaceable historic item for the city and for agreeing to have it displayed at the Historical Society," Mrs. Baker said. "We are also highly grateful to Mayor James Sheets for his commitment to provide security for public displays of the tankard."

Mrs. Baker indicated that the Society's exhibition will seek to display the tankard in a manner that will highlight its historical context.

"Colonel John Quincy is an important figure in our history for many reasons," she said, "not the least of which is being the person for whom the town of Quincy would be named. We want to give people a chance to appreciate the beauty of this object and to consider its significance."

Mrs. Baker said the Society plans to have an opening reception for the exhibition Friday evening, March 30 and then have the tankard on display to the general public throughout Saturday, March 31 and Sunday, April 1.

There will be no charge for admission to the museum during the weekend exhibit. Further details will be announced later.

Cancer Society Plans Daffodil Days

The American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days will be held during the week of March 25.

Volunteers will deliver thousands of daffodils to area residents.

The contributions of local residents during Daffodil Days help ensure that the American Cancer Society's many programs and services continue. Daffodil bouquets are $6 and vases are available for a $6 donation. For a $15 contribution, residents can send a Gift of Hope, an anonymous gift of a daffodil bouquet in a vase, to a cancer patient or person in need in a local hospital or nursing home.

To order daffodils, to volunteer or for more information, call your local American Cancer Society at (508) 584-9600. The deadline for advance orders is March 9.

"Daffodil Days not only bring beautiful, fresh flowers to brighten your home or workplace, but this annual campaign has a far-reaching impact in the lives of local cancer patients and their families," said Henry Bradley, Director of Quincy Veterans' Services and Daffodil Days Volunteer Chair for the South Shore.

"I hope all local residents will contribute in whatever way they can to help make Daffodil Days a success, by purchasing daffodils, and then volunteering to help deliver the flowers."

Some of the service programs supported through Daffodil Days include: Road to Recovery, providing transportation for cancer patients to treatment; Look Good...Feel Better, a program helping women maintain their appearance during cancer treatment; and Reach to Recovery, providing breast cancer patients with one-to-one support.

In the area of cancer research, the Society invests more than $10 million each year in New England-based cancer research. Cancer information is also available 24 hours a day through the Society's toll-free cancer information line, 1-800-ACS-2345, or by visiting its Web site at www.cancer.org.

'Dessert Decadence' At Marina Bay

A Dessert Decadence co-sponsored by Marina Place and Quincy Medical Center will be held tonight (Thursday) from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. at 4 Seaport Drive, Marina Bay.

Catholic Schools Week Observed At St. Ann's

Like many schools throughout the nation, St. Ann's School in Wollaston took time out from its busy academic schedule last week to observe Catholic Schools Week, a time for fun activities and service-oriented projects.

"St. Ann's School works hard during the school year to maintain our reputation for academic excellence while at the same time helping our students develop into good citizens who make a positive contribution in their communities," said Sister Catherine Lee, the principal.

The celebration of Catholic Schools Week began with a number of speakers from different fields such as medicine and public safety, who came to discuss with the students the work they do in the city of Quincy.

After a discussion with a representative from the Long Island Shelter, the students have begun an aggressive campaign to collect the items needed by the homeless men and women who rely on the services of the shelter each week.

Another day was set aside as Student Appreciation Day when students worked on special arts and crafts projects, including Valentines for Veterans, and were given an opportunity to show their school pride by wearing St. Ann's T-shirts they made themselves.

One of the highlights of the week was the popular Education Night, during which middle school students who have worked on projects ranging from Egyptian Gods to Fiber Optics filled the gym with their creativity and newly acquired knowledge.

At certain times during the school day, youngsters from kindergarten to grade 5 were invited to take a tour of the student displays, ask questions and learn new facts from the middle school students.

"I liked looking at all the projects and the cool drawings," said Kindergarten Eliza McDonald. "There was a lot of stuff that we could touch and ask the other kids questions about. It was fun."

The evening's activities brought the parents to the school to enjoy their children's work.

The week closed with Teacher Recognition Day and a church service at the school to thank and acknowledge the dedication and commitment of everyone on the staff at St. Ann's School.

"The celebration of Catholic Schools Week was a great success," said Sister Catherine Lee. "Not only did the children have a opportunity to focus their attention inward on their school spirit and pride, but they also turned their sights outward to those others in the community who are in need."

KINDERGARTEN students at St. Ann's School examine projects created by middle school students. Left to right, standing, Michael Cheung and Paul Mason (in gladiators costume), both from Grade 6; Jack McDonald, Stephen Roché, Meredith Flaherty and Meredith Durham, all kindergarteners.

MDC Lifeguard Recruitment Underway

The Metropolitan District Commission Commissioner David Balfour Jr. announces the annual recruitment drive for Lifeguards and Water Safety Instructions is underway.

The MDC's water safety needs between 300 and 400 well-trained lifeguards.

The MDC operates 19 swimming pools and 21 ocean and fresh water beaches in Metropolitan Boston and surrounding communities. All of them must be staffed with certified lifeguards from late June through Labor Day.

In order to be an MDC lifeguard, a person must have the proper qualifications and certifications.

Aspiring lifeguards need to possess certification in the following courses:

- Lifeguard training
- Standard First Aid (First Responder is accepted) or community First Aid and Safety.
- Basic Life Support CPR or CPR for the professional rescuer.

All certificates must be valid through September 2001. Candidates must be 16 years old or older by June 20, 2001. After acquiring all certification, guards must then pass MDC swim and written tests.

Those interested can obtain an application or more information by calling, writing or visiting the MDC Office of Human Resources, 20 Somerset St., Second Floor, Boston 02108. The phone number is (617) 727-9650, ext. 210, or contact John Ciccone at MDC Recruitment at (617) 727-8865.

Recruitment offices are open Monday through Friday from 8:45 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Major Library Donors Honored At Reception

(Quincy Sun photos)

ANN MCLAUGHLIN, library director for the Thomas Crane Public Library, shares a moment with Richard Ossen and Roslyn Laiter, the son and daughter of Dr. Paul and Bernice Ossen, for whom the Browsing and Fiction Rooms are named in recognition of their more than $100,000 donation to the library, the largest single donation.

THE STORY ROOM of the new Children's Library was made possible by a donation from developer Peter O'Connell in honor of his grandchildren. Grandchildren, from left are: Morgan, age six; Ally, age two and one-half; and MacKenzie, age seven. From back left are Peter O'Connell, wife Marcia O'Connell, and son Thomas O'Connell.

THE CHILDREN'S ROOM of the newly renovated Thomas Crane Library is named in honor of the late Patricia Toland, a former city councillor and assistant city clerk. Taking some time to enjoy the newly completed room at a recent Major Donor Celebration are, from left: son Brendan Toland behind his wife Danielle; son John Toland; and daughter Elizabeth Toland Bates sitting in front of her husband Richard Bates.

ATTORNEY MATTHEW McDONNELL and daughter Eileen McDonnell, an architect for library designer CBT Architects, enjoy the Major Donor Celebration for the newly renovated Thomas Crane Public Library. McDonnell herself designed all the custom furniture for the renovated library.

AHERN COMMUNICATIONS' Dana Ahern and wife Mary Smith, the landscape architect for the Crane Library renovation project, spend some time in the Taylor Ahern Business Collection which honors Ahern's father Taylor Ahern, a former library trustee and onetime assistant building inspector for the city.

DAVID COLETTI, son of Paul Coletti, the architect who designed the library's 1938 Coletti Building addition, admires the director's desk his father designed for former Library Director Galen Hill. The desk now graces the office of current Library Director Ann McLaughlin.

1,500 Attend Open House Renovated Crane Library Opens To Rave Reviews

The Thomas Crane Public Library is back and better than ever.

"We're absolutely thrilled," said Library Director Ann McLaughlin of Monday's re-opening of the main library, which resulted in a long line of people waiting outside at 9 a.m. to admire the newly renovated and expanded building, which had been closed several weeks while workers brought books and other materials back from the branches.

Roughly 1500 people, McLaughlin said, attended the library's Open House Sunday. "There were people everywhere," she said, adding that the very first guest was Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor, McLaughlin said, had the quite enviable task of talking to residents who praised the beauty of the new library and the wise use of taxpayer money.

Sheets, who attended both Sunday's Open House and earlier receptions honoring major donors to the library project, could not hide his enthusiasm for the new library or his pride in the city's latest accomplishment.

"I'm very proud of the work that was done," Sheets said. "You build a hospital for doctors and patients, and a new school for the children, but a library is built for everyone."

In addition to the enthusiasm surrounding the city's state-of-the-art library, McLaughlin said librarians are also happy that library branches and library schedules are back to normal after a long period of necessary inconveniences.

Main library hours are Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

It will also be open Sundays from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., which is something new for the library.

PRIME TRAVELER by George P. Murphy

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!

MAGICAL MICRONESIA

An exotic vacation filled with beaches, scuba diving, friendly people and unique traditions is awaiting those who venture to Micronesia. Located 3,000 miles west of Hawaii, Micronesia, meaning "little islands," consists of 607 islands in four groupings - Yap, Kosrae, Chuuk and Pohnpei. Yap is the most traditional, with men sporting loincloths, a stone coin currency, and clan dancing. On Kosrae's island of Tork, hiking Mount Finkol involves tramping through rivers and mud to see rewarding views of Kosrae's islands. The islands of Pohnpei also offer good treks, excellent beaches and an occasional dance performance. Chuuk is famous for its underwater museum of sunken shipwrecks, including a Japanese fleet that was defeated by the United States in World War II.

Do you have a vague notion of your dream vacations, but need some help putting it all together? Whether to help a Micronesia adventure or another destination, how to get there and what to do when you get there are all questions the professional travel agents at PRIME TRAVEL are well-suited to answer. Our years of experience, special training and genuine pleasure in meeting the challenge of each traveler's dreams are what you'll need the next time you're bitten by the travel bug. Stop by 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay or call 617-472-2697.

P.S. Traveling to Micronesia is enjoyable any time of year, but December through March offers direct, cooler air.

Rev. Esther Bowen Named To Human Rights Commission

Rev. Esther R. Bowen, Director of Pastoral Care at Quincy Medical Center, has been appointed to the Quincy Human Rights Commission by Mayor James Sheets.

The Human Rights

Commission promotes and assists the facilitation of an environment of fairness and respect through the provision of educating programs which encourage the acceptance of all people.

Commission members are appointed by the mayor. Commissioners are expected to work together to actively promote greater understanding and tolerance in the community, and to ensure that reports of acts of exclusion, prejudice, and discrimination are taken seriously and acted upon. A current project the commission is working on is entitled, "No Place for Hate."

"I'm very excited about working with this group," Rev. Bowen said, "and I'm really looking forward to helping solve problems in this important area in the Quincy community."

Rep. Delahunt Launches High School Art Contest

Congressman Bill Delahunt has launched a regional competition to showcase the artistic talent and potential of high school students in southeastern Massachusetts.

Delahunt invited all interested high school students throughout the 10th Congressional District to take part.

The winning entry will be announced at a spring reception and will be displayed in the U. S. Capitol for a year as part of a national exhibition representing each participating congressional district.

As in previous years, the Savannah College of Art and Design will offer a $10,000 scholarship to the student whose artwork represents the 10th Congressional District in Washington.

While prizes are awarded, Delahunt said "the overall objective is to recognize and encourage the artistic potential of all our kids."

Last year's "Best in Show" in the 10th District competition was a life-like, black and white drawing of an African-American teenager by Bee Xiong from Brockton High School.

Detailed packages about the competition, including contest guidelines and application forms, were mailed Feb. 2 to high school art directors across the South Shore and the Cape & Islands.

The final deadline for submitting art work is April 11. Each school may submit up to 15 entries. Art work must be two-dimensional, unframed, and no larger than 30 by 30 inches. The contest is open, free of charge to all high school students who reside in the district.

Further information about the contest timetable and guidelines are available by calling Delahunt's office, toll free, at 800-794-9911.

Citizens Bank Honored For Aid To Women-Owned Businesses

Elaine F. Guiney, Massachusetts Director of the U.S. Small Business Administration, recently presented an award to Citizens Bank in recognition of its commitment to making SBA-backed loans to women entrepreneurs in Massachusetts.

A tabulation of results for SBA's recent fiscal year end of Sept. 30, showed that Citizens achieved the highest percentage of SBA loans to women in Massachusetts.

Marybeth Feeney On Dean's List

Marybeth Feeney of Quincy is on the Dean's List for the fall semester at Manhattanville College in Purchase, N.Y.

Students must obtain a grade point average of 3.6 or better to make the list.

among high-volume regional leaders.

"Access to capital remains a serious problem for women looking to start or expand a business," said Guiney. "Based on its record, Citizens has proven its determination to make more loans available to women, and they are to be congratulated."

"Citizens is proud to partner with women entrepreneurs and help them meet the challenges that come with successful business ventures," said Thomas J. Hollister, President and CEO of Citizens Bank of Massachusetts.

At the end of SBA's fiscal year end, 1,261 Massachusetts small businesses received $227 million in SBA-backed loan guarantees, the highest total in its history. Another record was set with 369 debt and equity investments for $324 million going to Massachusetts firms.

Accused Murderer Cleared After 30 Years In Prison Quincy Detective Major Help In Innocent Convict's Exoneration

By TOM HENSHAW

A man falsely convicted of murder was finally exonerated the other day after more than 30 years in prison — and it did an old cop's heart good to see it.

Leo Papile of Quincy, a retired MDC police detective, never thought that Joe Salvati had anything to do with Teddy Deegan's murder in the first place.

Dan Rea, the Channel 4 reporter who was instrumental in securing Salvati's release, acknowledged Papile's role in the case in a letter to The Quincy Sun.

"Yesterday," wrote Rea, "the names of two men (Joseph Salvati and Peter Limone) were cleared of involvement in a 1965 gangland-style murder. Each man served upwards of 30 years in prison for a crime that they did not commit."

"I first began working on this story in March of 1993. I want your readers to know of the assistance rendered to me by longtime Quincy resident and former MDC detective, Leo Papile and his former partner Joe McCain."

"When I broadcast my first report about the Joe Salvati story, Leo Papile called me on behalf of himself and his former partner, Joe McCain. Both men, at great risk to personal and professional relationships that they had within the law enforcement community, provided me with exculpatory information to help substantiate Mr. Salvati's innocence."

"During the eight years that followed, both Leo and Joe have become great friends and supporters as we worked to find justice for Joe Salvati and his family. In recent days, the ethics of former FBI agents and others in law enforcement have been questioned. Men like Leo Papile and Joe McCain represent their former profession and their communities well and I hope your readers value their continuing contribution to the real pursuit of justice."

Papile said he and McCain were at the Ebb Tide, a night club and gangland hangout in Revere, the night Teddy Deegan, a small time mobster, was killed in Chelsea.

"We observed different characters leave the Ebb Tide and return later on," he said. "We took note of them. At no time did we see Joe Salvati. We brought that to the attention of the proper people but they just left it there."

Then in March, 1993, some 28 years later, Papile was watching the 11 o'clock news on Channel 4 when Rea began his series of reports questioning Salvati's guilt in the Deegan slaying. He called the station and left a message. Rea called back in the morning and Papile gave him his information.

Salvati was released on parole three years ago, but was not cleared of the murder until last month when he was exonerated.

"I've worked on many homicide cases," said Papile, who was an MDC cop for 37 years, six months, 16 days, serving as a detective for 25 years.

"But this is the most satisfying case I worked on with Joe McCain because of the outcome. We believed in Joe Salvati right from the beginning."

EXONERATED OF MURDER charge, Joe Salvati entertains lawmen who helped free him after 30 years in prison with a dinner at his North End home. Left to right, Mrs. Salvati, Joe Salvati, former MDC detectives Joe McCain and Leo Papile, and Victor Garro, Salvati's attorney, standing at rear. Asked where he learned to cook, Salvati told the detectives, "You learn a lot of things during 30 years in prison."

Rev. Alvaro De Silva Book Signing Feb. 12 At Creed's Crossing

The Rev. Alvaro De Silva of St. Ann's Parish will sign copies of his book The Last Letters of Thomas More Monday, Feb. 12 from 1 to 3 p.m. at Creeds Crossing, 25 Beale St., Wollaston.

The book contains the last correspondence of More during his imprisonment in the Tower of London by Henry VIII as well as an introduction and commentary by Rev. De Silva, who has been at St. Ann's in Wollaston for more than a year and has been involved in the scholarly study of Thomas More for more than two decades.

More's final correspondence includes letters to Cromwell and Henry VIII in the spring of 1534 and his last words to daughter Margaret Roper on the eve of his execution, July 6, 1535.

Rev. De Silva called More's inner struggle "a terrific case of one's own conscience versus the dictates of authority," adding that More's sixteenth-century definition of "conscience" was a less individualistic one than that of modern times.

This is the first work on More in English for Rev. De Silva, who has edited several works on More in Spanish, including De Trinitate Christi in 1979 and A Dialogue of Comfort Against Tribulation in 1988.

A native of Spain, Rev. De Silva has spent roughly the last 30 years in the United States and, in addition to St. Ann's, has served as a Catholic priest in Cambridge, Brighton, and Newton.

Rev. De Silva, who used the works of Thomas More, G.K. Chesterton and William Shakespeare to become fluent in the English language, said he was "deeply moved" by a recent visit to the Tower of London, reflecting that More -- a former Lord Chancellor of wealth, status, and power -- had spent about as much time awaiting execution in his cell as Rev. De Silva had spent in Quincy.

"For him to leave all that is really remarkable," Rev. De Silva said.

Melissa Creed, owner of Creeds Crossing, said requests for the book, which is published by William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company, have been coming into her store since Christmas.

"He (Rev. De Silva) is very humble but this is just an incredible book," said Creed.

Thomas More was beheaded in 1535 for remaining a Catholic in defiance of King Henry VIII, who created and made himself the supreme head of the Anglican Church in response to Rome's refusal to grant a divorce from Catherine of Aragon.

More was canonized in 1935.

For each book sold, a $5 donation will be made to the St. John's Seminary Scholarship Fund.

For more information on the reception and book signing, call Creeds Crossing at (617) 471-0990.

Eastern Bank Employees Give $3,000 To Salvation Army

Eastern Bank employees raised $3,000 to benefit the Salvation Army in Quincy, helping needy families in the area during the holiday season.

Eastern's Salvation Army Santa Committee sponsored several fundraisers, including a drawing with a grand prize of one extra week of vacation. Employees also participated in "Jean Day," with approximately 250 employees donating at least $5 each to wear jeans to work one Friday.

The $3,000 donation was presented to Major Ed Forster, commander of the Salvation Army in Quincy.

Eastern employees began raising money to benefit the Salvation Army several years ago, starting with the Salvation Army unit in Lynn.

Each year, the employees have experimented with

AN ADDED BOOST

It is a good idea to carry high-quality booster cables in your vehicle in the event of a dead battery. Not only do inferior-quality cables pose the risk of melted insulation and fire, but their high resistance can damage the starter motor when subjected to long periods of cranking. Look for booster cables with features such as: built in warning lights that signal incorrect connection, flexible cable guards at the clamp handle to prevent wear at stress points, pure copper wire in the cables, adequate length and gauge of cable (12 to 16 feet, 4 gauge), clamps covered with bonded vinyl insulation, and insulated clamp jaw with no exposed metal parts which could arc when contacting vehicle frame or other parts.

Census May Put City At 90,000

"Our precincts are smaller than the state average," Shea told members of the council's Finance Committee, explaining that the state norm is roughly 3,500 people per precinct whereas Quincy's average is fewer than 3,000 people per precinct.

Although smaller precincts are not necessarily a disadvantage, Shea said two possible advantages to fewer precincts would be an easier time complying with regulations requiring that each precinct's voting area be handicapped accessible as well as removing some of the older, less desirable voting areas in the city.

Shea said the city's above-average response to the census, with a seven percent improvement over the 1990 mailback rate, made him confident the population would increase from 1990's figure of 84,985.

Explaining that redistricting was mandated by "One man, one vote" Constitutional requirements, Shea said the goal of redistricting was "that, within five percent, every ward councillor represents the same number of people."

According to the city clerk, 90 percent of Quincy residents would remain in their same precinct and more than 90 percent would remain in their same ward.

Showing the council sample maps with approximate figures, Shea told councillors that likely precinct changes would occur in Wards 4 and 6 due to a decade's development at Crown Colony and Marina Bay, respectively.

For several reasons, Shea said, ward re-districting always started from the outside of the city and worked towards the center, meaning that outlying areas would not change but that ward changes might occur near the city's center.

Redistricting becomes effective in 2002 for state and federal offices and in 2003 for city elections.

FATHER BILL'S PLACE has a new van to transport guests from the main shelter to the overflow shelter at St. John's Church thanks to the generosity of Daniel Quirk (far left), president of Quirk Motors, standing next to The Rev. William McCarthy, founder and namesake of the homeless shelter, and Congressman William Delahunt (far right), standing next to John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place. After the shelter's older vehicle broke down unexpectedly, leaving the shelter without a van and without time to raise funds, Quirk stepped in by providing a new van at a generous discount while a sizable donation by Delahunt made the purchase possible. Contributions to pay for the full amount of the van are still being accepted. For more information, call John Yazwinski at (617) 770-3314. (Quincy Sun photo)

Flowers Are At The Heart Of Every Valentine's Wish List

(NAPS) A recent consumer survey commissioned by FTD Inc., has discovered that women prefer to receive flowers (54 percent) over perfume (23 percent) and candy (12 percent) for Valentine's Day.

The FTD survey also revealed that although nearly three-fourths (73 percent) of women say that they would like to receive flowers this Valentine's Day, only a third (33 percent) actually expect to receive them.

"Our survey reveals a huge opportunity for men to be heroes this Valentine's Day! This is a wake-up call for all boyfriends and husbands: women want flowers for Valentine's Day," said Bob Norton, President and CEO of FTD.

Women Prefer To Have Flowers Delivered At Home

For those who wonder where to send their Valentine's Day flowers, the survey revealed that 65 percent of women prefer to receive flowers at home, and just one third (30 percent) opt for Valentine's Day flowers at the office.

Men at the top shoppers when it comes to Valentine's Day Flowers although women are slowly but surely following in their footsteps. Survey results show that three-quarters (76 percent) of men have ordered flowers for loved ones on Valentine's Day while nearly a third (30 percent) of women admitted giving flowers to the men in their lives.

10 Ways To Get Closer To Your Valentine

(NAPS) Finding a unique Valentine's Day gift for the man in your life can become more and more difficult each year. This year, why not consider a non-traditional gift, one that's not only personal and creative, but will make your special someone want to cuddle up with you cheek-to-cheek. Get closer with one of these 10 romantic ideas and watch those sparks fly.

1. Caribbean Nights. Dim the lights, turn off the phone and rent a palm tree. Break out a beach blanket and create your own cozy cabana without leaving the house.

2. Get Steamy. Book a spa day and treat yourselves to side-by-side massages, facials and a hot tub for two.

3. Cheek-To-Cheek. Start off your romantic evening by treating him to a steamed towel and a pampering shave that will make him even more kissable.

4. Tickets To His Heart. Make a booklet of coupons that your loved one can turn in for favors, such as a foot massage while watching the game on Sunday or a quiet evening home alone with you, with the kids at the baby sitter's house.

5. Treasurer Hunt. Drop fun clues printed on scented stationery that will lead your love to a luxurious bubble bath.

6. Dinner for Two. Gather your favorite ingredients and drum up a delightful dish for two. Hire a wait staff to serve your meal so that you will have more time for romance. Don't forget the fresh fruit and fondue for dessert.

7. No Peeking! Blindfold your love and guide him to the site of your first date or profession of "I love you's."

8. "Memories." Showcase the time you have spent together by creating a scrapbook. Include photos, ticket stubs and other mementos that you have shared along the way.

9. A Surprise A Day. Leave one special item, such as candy or a poem, each day until Feb. 14; save the best gift of all for last!

10. Dedicated To The One I Love. Surprise him with a tape of love songs in the car stereo -- be sure to record a personal dedication at the end.

Whether you choose to make one, two or all 10 of these smooth moves, you are sure to get closer this Valentine's Day.

Something Special For Your Valentine!

South Shore Men Of Harmony To Deliver Singing Valentines

The South Shore Men of Harmony Barbershop Chorus will again deliver "Singing Valentines For That Someone Special" throughout the area Valentine's Day from Sunday, Feb. 11 to Wed., Feb. 14.

Each Valentine will be presented by a chapter quartet in appropriate costume, who will arrive unannounced and search out the recipients (either male or female) in their office, home, school, restaurant, or wherever the purchaser designates. They will be given a long-stemmed red rose and Men of Harmony Valentine designed especially for the day naming the sender. The quartet will then sing "Heart of My Heart" and "I Love You Truly" in the acappella Barbershop Harmony style, and pose with the recipients for a Polaroid picture as a souvenir.

The "Singing Valentines" are being presented for the sixth year as part of a nationwide program offered by "SPEBSQSA," the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, the parent organization of the Men of Harmony. Hundreds of quartets will be singing throughout the U.S.A. Many deliveries are to nursing home patients and to shut-ins. Often they will sing along with the quartets as they sing the songs from days gone by.

The Men of Harmony "Singing Valentines" will be available on Sunday, Feb. 11 from 12 to 9 p.m.; Tuesday, Feb. 13, from 6 to 9 p.m.; and Wednesday, Feb. 14, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The cost for each Valentine is $40, $10 extra for each additional recipient or precise time appointment. Proceeds are used for the service projects and charities that the Men of Harmony support. For further information and to place orders, call Bill Fitzgerald at (781) 337-0227 or Rich Barry at (781) 659-7463.

Answers For Commonly Asked Questions About Buying A Home

Debbie Kidd, currently employed by Neighborhood Housing Services as housing coordinator, has had more than 16 years' experience working within the mortgage industry. Over the past seven years she has worked in the non-profit arena creating and administering affordable housing programs.

Neighborhood Housing Services is one of the leading first time homebuyer counseling agencies on the South Shore. Besides being approved by the local, state, and government agencies as a certified homebuyer counseling agency, Neighborhood Housing Services recently received the prestigious CHAPA Seal of Approval. Through their monthly first time homebuyer workshops, participants are able to learn about the many different aspects of purchasing a home.

The following Q&A answers some of the most commonly asked questions about buying a first home.

Q: I am currently a Quincy resident and am trying to purchase my first home. I would like to stay in Quincy but, with the rising home prices, I am not sure I can afford to. Are there any financial assistance programs available to help someone in my position?

A: The City of Quincy has one of the most progressive first time homebuyer assistance programs on the South Shore. There are a few guidelines that you must adhere to in order to qualify. First, you must be a first time buyer, graduate from an approved homebuyer educational workshop, and meet certain income, credit, and purchase price guidelines. In short, this program can assist you with up to nine percent of the purchase price towards your down payment and one percent toward your closing costs. The maximum amount of assistance cannot exceed $20,000. For more information on this program, you may contact Christopher Gentile, City Planner, at (617) 376-1411.

Q: I am interested in purchasing a home within the next few months. A co-worker of mine suggested I look into participating in a homebuyer workshop. Can you tell me more about these workshops?

A: There are many first time homebuyer workshops offered throughout the state. When choosing a workshop to attend, check the credentials of the non-profit. Are they Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) and HUD approved? Do they have a CHAPA Seal of Approval, and does a qualified homebuyer counselor teach the workshops?

Neighborhood Housing Services does offer at least one certified first time homebuyer workshop each month in various locations and all workshops are free to the public. For a schedule of workshops sponsored by Neighborhood Housing Services, contact Janice Tucker at (617) 770-2227, Ext. 22.

Q: I have been looking in the paper and doing some research on my own regarding mortgage products, but I am realizing that there are so many different mortgages available. Can you tell me which mortgage programs are best?

A: Choosing a mortgage program can be as difficult as selecting the right home. No longer is there just a 30-year conventional mortgage available, as there was in your parents' day, but a wide array of options for you to choose from.

The best advice for you is to attend a first time homebuyer workshop, one that will address the various mortgage products available to you as a first time buyer. Also working with a lender who offers a variety of products such as the ones I have listed will be helpful to you.

Neighborhood Housing Services' first time homebuyer workshops are free and are open to the public. For more information or to obtain a registration form, call Neighborhood Housing Services at (617) 770-2227, Ext. 22.

Winter Storm Safety Tips For Commuters, Pedestrians

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay recommends the following safety tips for commuters and pedestrians as the area braces for a winter storm. The leading cause of death during winter storms is from automobile or other transportation accident.

When outside, stay warm

• Wear layered clothing: mittens or gloves and a hat. Layering clothing will keep you warmer than a single heavy coat. Outer garments should be tightly woven and water repellent. Mittens or gloves and a hat will prevent loss of body heat.

• Cover your mouth to protect your lungs from extremely cold air. Avoid taking deep breaths, minimize talking.

• Watch for signs of hypothermia and frostbite. Frostbite is a severe reaction to cold exposure that can cause permanent harm to people. A loss of feeling and a white or pale appearance in fingers, toes, nose or earlobes are symptoms of frostbite. Hypothermia is a condition brought on when the body temperature drops to less than 95 degrees Fahrenheit. Symptoms of hypothermia include uncontrollable shivering, slow speech, memory lapses, frequent stumbling, drowsiness and exhaustion. Hypothermia is not always fatal, but for those who survive there are likely to be lasting kidney, liver and pancreas problems.

If frostbite or hypothermia is suspected, begin warming the person slowly and seek immediate medical assistance. Warm the person's trunk first. Using your own body heat will help. Arms and legs should be warmed last because stimulation of the limbs can drive cold blood toward the heart and lead to heart failure. Put the person in dry clothing and wrap their entire body in a blanket. Never give a frostbite or hypothermia victim alcohol or something with caffeine in it, like coffee or tea. Caffeine, a stimulant, can cause the heart to beat faster and hasten the effect the cold has on the body. Alcohol, a depressant, can slow the heart and also hasten the ill effects of the cold.

• Keep dry. Change wet clothing frequently to prevent a loss of body heat. Wet clothing loses much of its insulating value and transmits heat rapidly away from the body.

• Stretch before you go out. If you go out to shovel snow, do a few stretching exercises to warm up your body. This will reduce your chances of muscle injury.

• Avoid overexertion, such as shoveling heavy snow, pushing a car, or walking in deep snow. The strain from the cold and the hard labor may cause a heart attack. Sweating could lead to a chill and hypothermia.

• Walk carefully on snowy, icy sidewalks. Slips and falls occur frequently in winter weather, resulting in painful and sometimes disabling injury.

• If you must go out during a winter storm, use public transportation if possible. About 70 percent of winter deaths related to ice and snow occur in automobiles.

When driving, stay safe

• Have your car(s) winterized before the winter storm season.

• If you have a cell phone or two-way radio available for your use, keep the battery charged and keep it with you whenever traveling in winter weather.

• Keep a windshield scraper and small broom in your car for ice and snow removal.

• Keep your car's gas tank full for emergency use and to keep the fuel line from freezing.

• Let someone know your destination, your route and when you expect to arrive.

If you do get stuck:

• Stay with your vehicle.

• Display a trouble sign to indicate you need help.

• Occasionally run engine to keep warm. Experience has shown that running the heater for 10 minutes every hour is enough to keep occupants warm and will reduce the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning and conserve fuel.

• Leave the overhead light on when the engine is running so that you can be seen.

• Keep a window that is away from the blowing wind slightly open to let in air.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

Will a hearing aid correct my loss right away?

No! You will notice an immediate difference in volume and some sounds will be clearer but it takes time to re-learn how to hear with a hearing aid. Your maximum potential may not be reached for a full year. Hearing is a learned process, the brain needs to store information received from the ear. When you first get a hearing aid, it is foreign to the brain. The brain wants to hear and will learn to the best of its ability, if you give it enough practice. Try to be patient, practice, and keep in touch with your Hearing Instrument Specialist for adjustments and fine tuning. Don't wait too long to get help. The longer you wait, the more difficult it is for the brain to re-learn how to hear again. This is a major reason why a hearing aid can end up in a desk drawer instead of an ear. There are other reasons, most of which can be overcome if your Specialist is dedicated to your success! If you carefully select your Specialist, he or she will carefully select your hearing instrument.

Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

Quincy Still In Hunt For League Crown

By CHRIS POISSON

With a state tournament spot already locked up, last Saturday night's show down at Barnstable was supposed to reveal if the Quincy hockey team was ready to challenge for the Old Colony League championship.

A win would put them in prime position heading into this week's games against Silver Lake and Falmouth, the two teams it is chasing, and a loss would put them out of the hunt.

What about a tie?

Quincy held a 2-1 lead in the third period, but surrendered a goal with about five minutes left in the game and had to settle for the stalemate. Now, the Presidents (9-3-1 overall, 7-2-1 OCL) need some help. Not only do they have to beat both teams this week, but they need some other OCL team to somehow knock off the perennial powers or at least play even with them.

Hockey

"Unfortunately, this kind of hurts us in trying to win the league title," said head coach Bob Sylvia. "But we're still technically alive."

Quincy hosted Silver Lake (10-4-1, 9-1) yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday night it faces off with Falmouth (13-1, 9-1) at 7:50 at Quincy Youth Arena. Earlier in the season, Quincy dropped a 5-2 decision at Silver Lake, but earned an impressive 5-4 win at Falmouth, the Clippers' only loss this season.

After this tough week, the final four games of the regular season should be a smoother ride, as it has beaten Rockland, Plymouth South, North Quincy and Blue Hills by a combined score of 20-7.

Although all four of those games are on the road, Quincy needs to win them all if it wants a high seed in the tourney so it can avoid the last year's situation when it drew a strong Archbishop Williams squad in the first round.

"Each point that we get from here on gives us a chance for a better draw in the first round," Sylvia said. "The name of the game now is to try to get as many wins, points as we can."

Against Barnstable, the Presidents scored both of their goals in the middle frame. Junior forward Brian Scott scored at 5:57 with an assist from sophomore forward Matt LaCorte. At 8:58, freshman forward Matt Germain netted a goal with an assist from his brother, Dave. Junior goalie Tom Shruhan made 25 saves.

"We played a very good game," Sylvia said. "The kids were aggressive. They hung tough. Our goaltender, Tom Shruhan, played very well. He made some big saves for us."

Joe Hern, Rory Lydon Wrap Up Perfect Season

The Quincy High School wrestling team fell to Haverhill, St. John's (Shrewsbury) and Dufferin, all tough opponents, in a quad-meet it hosted over the weekend.

Despite the losses, it was a special weekend for two Quincy grapplers. Junior Joe Hern and senior Rory Lydon won all three of their matches to finish with a perfect 31-0 record in dual-meet action, completing the best seasons in school history.

Hern set a new takedown record, while Lydon set the record for team points. The 31 dual-meet wins also set a new mark.

Junior Mike Murphy also had a stellar day, pinning all three of his opponents, including the highly-ranked and previously unbeaten Mike Lawlor of Haverhill.

Despite winning the majority of the matches against St. John's and Dufferin, Quincy lost due to four forfeits. The Haverhill match was tight throughout with Quincy dropping the match, 27-25.

In previous action, Quincy wrapped up Old Colony League play with a 2-3 record by beating rival North Quincy for the ninth straight time, 50-15, at the Center for Technical Education gym.

Yen Truong opened the scoring for Quincy with a win by forfeit at 103 pounds, while his brother, Bao, followed with a major decision over North Quincy's Dan Ngutter at 112 pounds.

Following a series of forfeits, North Quincy's Charlie Acton recorded an exciting decision over Quincy senior Bill Murphy at 135. John Norton of North Quincy picked up a win by forfeit at 140. But then it was all Quincy matmen.

Shannon MacIsaac won a major decision at 145, while Hern (152), Scott Kelley (160), John Alves (189), Lydon (215) and Dan Coleman (heavyweight) all recorded pins to account for the final score.

Quincy heads to Braintree (tomorrow) Friday afternoon and the Sectional Tournament on Saturday. North Quincy wrestles at Marshfield.

North Quincy Has (Long) Shot At Tourney

As wacky as it sounds, the North Quincy hockey team still has a shot at making the state tournament — a very long shot.

Coming off a 10-1 thrashing of league laughingstock Taunton last Saturday night, North Quincy held on for a 3-2 non-league victory over New Bedford Monday afternoon at Quincy Youth Arena.

The ninth two-game win streak gives the Red Raiders (7-9 overall, 4-6 OCL) an outside chance at earning a berth in the state tournament for the fourth straight season. They need to win three of their final four games to accomplish the task, and it won't be easy as they have lost to all four teams by a combined score of 16-2.

"We're on a little bit of a roll, but we find ourselves in a precarious situation," said head coach Bob Doyle. "We need to win three out of our final four games to qualify for the tournament. All four teams have beat us earlier in the year, so we have a lot of work to do."

North Quincy traveled to powerhouse Falmouth (13-1, 9-1) yesterday (Wednesday) and Saturday night it heads to Bridgewater-Raynham. It closes out the season with home games against Barnstable (Feb. 14) and Quincy (Feb. 17).

In the New Bedford (8-5-1) game, the Red Raiders came out energized and set the tone real early when junior center Charlie Sorrento up-ended a Whaler with a crushing hip check deep in North Quincy's zone.

At 1:06 of the first, junior center Chris Matuscas blew past a New Bedford defender from the right circle and skated to slot where he fired a shot that beat the goalie for a 1-0 lead.

"That was a beautiful individual effort by Chris Matuscas," Doyle said. "That goal got us going. [Senior forward] Joe Cronin and Matuscas were our two best players out there. They provided a spark. They skated with a lot of purpose out there."

North Quincy was outplayed the rest of the period and New Bedford capitalized with the equalizer at 10:01. In the second, the Red Raiders rebounded from their lethargic play with a pair of goals in a span of 3:23.

At 1:04, North Quincy won a faceoff in the New Bedford zone and Sorrento passed the puck back to senior defenseman Rob Rice at the right point and he uncorked a blistering slap shot past the goalie to regain the lead.

At 4:27, senior center Jon Paquette found himself alone in front to knock home the puck for a 3-1 advantage. "That line played well," Doyle said. "Cronin and [junior forward] Frank Guest worked hard cycling in the corner to set up Paquette, who was in the right place at the right time."

Again, North Quincy became a little flat for the rest of the frame, but senior goalie Matt Gregory preserved the lead with several huge saves.

With 10 minutes left and North Quincy on the power play, a Whaler broke in alone for a short-handed attempt and Gregory went down and made a spectacular left pad save. With 7:50 left Gregory stoned a one-timer and nearly three minutes later he made a sprawling save to stuff a New Bedford two-on-one break.

"I was very pleased with his performance," Doyle said. "He's a little depressed this year in that things haven't gone his way. In the games against the top echelon teams of the league I thought he has played well, but unfortunately we've come out on the losing end."

In the third, New Bedford made the game interesting when it scored a breakaway goal on a four-on-four situation with 3:11 left, but the Red Raiders turned up their defensive effort and held on for the victory.

North Quincy Girls Hoping For Banner Year

By CHRIS POISSON

Huddled together before stepping into its home court last Friday night, the North Quincy girls' basketball team chanted its next goal for the season, and you didn't need the NFL's roving sideline reporter or on-field cameramen to make out the words.

"What, love, want, ABM?"

Time to shut the good in you out, the bad coaches out. Doug MacFarlane, who's coached already locked up a spot in the state tournament last '96. They want a banner. The kids, mercifully into the game, they want a banner up there that says O.C.T. champions. They're working really hard for it."

Indeed they are. After last Tuesday's win over Falmouth and last Friday's 53-47 triumph over Bridgewater-Raynham, North Quincy (12-2 overall, 9-1 O.C.T.) now has a two-game lead over both schools with five games left in the regular season. A league championship is on the horizon.

Beating Falmouth and Bridgewater-Raynham, back to back, is huge," MacFarlane said. "The kids really stepped it up. They knew they needed to and they stepped it up. The excitement on the team right now is unbelievable."

"The goal now is the O.C.T. championship," he added. "We're now two ahead in the loss column over B.R. and Falmouth, which is a help because we have a tough loss column."

On Tuesday, North Quincy traveled to Barnstable (0-6-57) which has Amy Lyon, the league's leading scorer with 70.8 points per game. Barnstable was coming off a huge win last week against Bridgewater-Raynham. North Quincy hosts Taunton (6-7-53) tonight (Thursday) at 7 and tomorrow night it hosts Plymouth South (4-11, 3-8) at 7.

APRIL SUPREY (32) gets the inside position as she battles a taller Bridgewater-Raynham player for a rebound. The sophomore forward scored 9 points in the game.

"We go back-to-back with Taunton and Plymouth South," MacFarlane said. "Plymouth South is a dangerous team. They scare me. Taunton is a good team, too. It's not over."

The victory over Bridgewater-Raynham extended the Red Raiders' winning streak to eight games and also avenged a 51-42 loss to the Trojans in early January. In that game, however, they did not have senior Jen Conley.

"We didn't have Jen Conley the first game because she was sick," MacFarlane said. "Jen makes a big difference."

She certainly does. Conley scored a team-high 13 points and pulled down 8 rebounds. Nine of her 13 points came in the second half, including her 4-of-6 free-throw shooting at the end of the game that sealed the win.

"Jen Conley stepped up big with 13, and those foul shots down the end were big," MacFarlane said. "She also anchors our defense. She's not tall, but she really works hard under the boards. Even if she doesn't rebound, she's always boxing somebody out and that helps."

As usual, North Quincy received solid, workmanlike performances from junior forward Lauren Sleeth (11 points, 11 rebounds, 4 steals) and senior point guard Casey Ridge (10 points, 8 assists, 7 rebounds).

JUNIOR LAUREN SLEETH (24) pulls up for a jumper in the paint during last Friday night's 52-42 win over Bridgewater-Raynham at home. Sleeth finished with 11 points, 11 rebounds and 4 steals.

And what seems like every game, someone came off the bench and contributed. In this game, Kristen DiMatio did the honor. The sophomore center scored all 6 of her points in the second half when the Red Raiders broke a 32-32 tie with an 11-2 run that put them ahead for good 4:27 remaining.

"Every kid that came off the bench contributed in way or another," MacFarlane said. "That's what we've been doing all year. I think that is the key to the success we're having. It's just not the same kid. Kristen DiMatio comes in and scores 6 points in the second half."

North Quincy staggered early on, falling behind 9-4 after nearly six minutes of play. Behind Ridge's surprising sharp-shooting (8 first-half points), it rallied to even the score at 18 with three minutes left and held a 23-20 lead at the break.

"To be honest with you, I don't know what to expect from these guys," MacFarlane said about the team's slow start. "Some nights we come out and score a lot of points early, and other nights it takes us a little while to get into it. But they don't give up. They don't quit. They just keep plugging.

"This is unbelievable. I never thought we'd be this good, really. I keep saying that and people say, 'What are you nuts.' I knew we were going to be competitive, but I never thought that we were going to keep winning like this. I hope it doesn't stop."

Basketball Games Dedicated To Coaches Vs. Cancer

The North Quincy North Quincy girls' and boys' basketball games on Friday, Feb. 10 will be dedicated to Coaches vs. Cancer.

Quincy boys' basketball coach John Franceschini and North Quincy athletic director Brian Buckley initiated the Coaches vs. Cancer game as a part of the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association campaign.

Franceschini and Buckley are co-chairmen of the State Coaches vs. Cancer committee as well as members of the South Shore Chapter of the American Cancer Society Executive Board.

After the death of N.C. State coach Joe Valvano to cancer, Coaches vs. Cancer was jointly established in 1993 by the American Cancer Society and the National Association of Basketball Coaches. More than 500 coaches have helped to raise more than $12 million nationwide to benefit the American Cancer Society.

Coaches vs. Cancer emphasizes the three pillars of cancer research: prevention, early detection, and patient services. Through seminars and clinics, coaches deliver America's latest cancer prevention, early detection, and patient services to their students. Coaches vs. Cancer is a national campaign to raise awareness of cancer among students and athletes.

During the Quincy North

Quincy games, students and fans will have the opportunity to donate to Coaches vs. Cancer. Members of both teams have pledged a 3-pointer (a $3 donation) to this worthwhile cause and hope that more money is raised than last year.

"Everyone has been affected by cancer in one way or another, and through Coaches vs. Cancer we can make a difference," Buckley said.

Through the M.B.C.A., Massachusetts was the second high school coaches association to join the Coaches vs. Cancer campaign. Kentucky was the first.

Plans Underway For North Quincy Women's Hall Of Fame

The North Quincy High School athletic department is currently making plans for the first North Quincy Women's Hall of Fame, announces athletic director Brian Buckley.

Anyone interested in nominating a North Quincy student-athlete for the Hall of Fame should contact the athletic department, include history, awards, athletic performance statistics, newspaper clippings and any other pertinent information. Mail to: N.Q.H.S. Women's Hall of Fame, North Quincy High School Athletic Department, 316 Hancock St., North Quincy 02171.

Members of the Hall of Fame Committee include: Carolyn Parsley, Caryn Smith, Simone Leary, Lou Tozzi, Jim Rendle, Paul Bregoli, Barbara Webster, Mary Ellen Timmins, Sandra Rougvie, Barry Welch, Geoffrey Hennessy, Doug MacFarlane and Buckley.

Anyone interested in serving on the committee should contact the athletic department at (617) 984-8912. The next meeting will be Tuesday, Feb. 27 at 6 p.m. at the athletic office.

WINTER CAR CARE

Top Repair Facilities Needed For Tough Winter Auto Repair Jobs

Winter weather can cause difficult to diagnose automotive problems that require the services of top auto repair facilities, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Cold weather can be tough on a vehicle's electrical system," said John Paul, AAA's car doctor. "It's important to find a repair facility with the capability to properly service the wide range of advanced technologies on today's high-tech vehicles."

AAA offers this advice for choosing the best auto repair shop:

- Look for AAA approved repair shops. These shops display a sign that says "AAA Approved Auto Repair."

pair." To be AAA approved, repair shops must meet tough standards for personnel, customer service, equipment and scope of service. Mechanics must be certified by the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE).

• Decide what kind of shop can best handle the work. You may not necessarily go to the same place for all repairs. For example, one shop may specialize in exhaust systems, while another may be excellent at finding an obscure electrical problem. If your car is under warranty, you will probably need to get it fixed at the dealer.

• Ask friends, family members and others for recommendations of technicians they trust.

Proper Inflation Saves Fuel And Tire Wear

AUTO TIPS

(NU) - According to tire industry experts, millions of Americans are driving around on improperly inflated tires. These motorists may not be aware that their safety is at risk, or how air pressure in a tire affects fuel economy, vehicle handling and the life span of tires.

Many drivers never or rarely check the air pressure in their tires even though it's a simple, two-to-three minute chore.

Test your knowledge in this short quiz:

Q: How can an underinflated tire affect my car's fuel economy and how much does that cost?

A: An underinflated tire increases rolling resistance, requiring your engine to work harder. The U.S. Department of Energy says one tire underinflated by just two pounds causes your fuel consumption to increase one percent. When you multiply four tires by several pounds, you could easily increase your fuel consumption by 10 percent or more. For many motorists, this could cost several hundred dollars a year more at the gas pumps.

Q: Should I inflate my tires to the maximum pressure rating found on the sidewall of the tire?

A: No. You should inflate your tires to the vehicle manufacturer's recommended inflation level, found on the door jamb or in the owner's manual. If there is a range, always use the higher psi level (psi is an abbreviation for pounds per square inch.)

Q: How much air pressure will a typical tire lose in a year?

A: According to Bridgestone/Firestone, tires may lose one to two psi per month, more as outdoor temperatures change.

temperatures change.

Q: How can underinflation damage a tire and cause it to become unsafe?

A: The sidewalls of an underinflated tire will flex more when the vehicle is in motion, generating heat. This heat builds up and can destroy the components of a tire from the inside-out.

Q: When is the best time to check my tire pressure?

A: It's best to check the tires cold (usually in the morning, when the car hasn't been driven for several hours).

As a general rule, tires designed and built today last longer and provide superior performance than tires of just a decade ago, says Bridgestone/Firestone Marketing Director Phil Paesi. But without proper maintenance, including regular pressure checks, rotation and alignment, they lose their effectiveness.

More importantly, this maintenance helps ensure the tires will perform reliably, giving drivers and passengers a safer ride.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Abraham Lincoln was noted for his common sense and his advice. Some of Mr. Lincoln's axioms bear repeating because they were basic then and are basic still. Here are some of them.

1. You cannot bring about prosperity by discouraging thrift.

2. You cannot strengthen the weak by weakening the strong.

3. You cannot help the small men by tearing down the big men.

4. You cannot help the poor by destroying the rich.

5. You cannot lift the wage earner by pulling down the wage payer.

6. You cannot further the brotherhood of men by inciting class hatred.

7. You cannot build character and courage by taking away a man's initiative and independence.

8. You cannot help men permanently by doing for them what they could and should do for themselves.

On Lincoln's birthday, let us all, leaders and citizens alike, think upon these thoughts...

Your Social SecurityNew Partnership With American Savings Education Council*By LAURIE ZASTROW

Social Security and the American Savings Education Council (ASEC) announce an expansion of their partnership to educate Americans about the importance of planning for their financial future.

The partnering of Social Security and ASEC blends the key elements of a comfortable retirement-pensions and savings built on a foundation of Social Security.

Social Security unveiled a number of initiatives in year 2000 aimed at educating workers about the importance of retirement planning. ASEC is committed to raising public awareness about what is needed to successfully ensure long-term personal financial independence.

Americans need to make savings a personal budget priority. Your dreams for the future begin now. Social Security will be there for you tomorrow, but the rest is up to you. Retirement security depends on personal savings.

Social Security and ASEC also announce the creation of the "National Save for Your Future" campaign. Beginning October 2001, they will join forces to annually remind Americans about the importance of saving.

Social Security unveiled a new public service announcement (PSA), "The Quiz Show." ASEC is joining with Social Security to help place the PSA where it will receive the largest, most age-varied and diverse audiences possible -- in movie theaters across the country. In 1999, more than one billion people attended movies. Almost 85 percent of moviegoers are over 18, half of them between 18 to 50, at least a decade or more away from retirement but at a prime age for retirement planning.

We think all audiences of all ages will welcome information about one of the major concerns facing them -- planning for their financial future.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Temper that Aries impatience. Demanding answers or results before they're ready to be revealed could create more delays. Take time out for fun with family or friends.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Someone involved in your latest venture makes new demands that you find disturbing. While you dislike being a quitter, it might be best to drop this project and move on.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A decision could involve more serious implications than you first thought. Get more information and seek the counsel of trusted friends before you sign or say anything.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's a good time to reconsider some of your plans, especially those involving major investments of money and/or time. Expect to hear from someone in your past.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Love continues to dominate for both single and paired Lions. In the workplace, deal with a co-worker's thoughtless comments before they cause problems later on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might be angry enough to end a friendship because of something you were told. But consider the source of the gossip before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your career move seems to be stalled. Request a meeting to discuss the situation. It will be a learning experience for everyone involved.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That important relationship is about to move to a new level. Continue to be patient, and resist pushing it even further. It still needs time to blossom.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Paired Sagittarians do very well at this time. However, some challenges loom for single Archers who are considering stronger romantic commitments.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be patient. A misunderstanding is close to being completely resolved, as new facts emerge that will help change those stubborn minds.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A change in a personal relationship reveals some long-hidden truths. Your challenge now is to use this new information wisely for all concerned.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Draw on your deep reserves of good Piscean common sense to avoid taking the lure from someone who thinks he or she can get the best of you.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have a remarkable ability to make friends with strangers. This allows you to command an army of devoted admirers.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4; if the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check each of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Norfolk Division

Docket No. 00F 0104PP1
To: Eustachio Cusianna of Quincy in said County and Adele J. Cusianna of Quincy in said County, respondents; and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Lurgio Cusianna of Beverly in said County, Essex, representing that the bulk of said land lying in said County in said County Norfolk, and briefly described as follows, the land in that part of said Quincy called Atlantic, being lot numbered Four Hundred Thirty, on a plan of "Norfolk Downs," by Charles D. Elliot, dated April 1892, and recorded with Norfolk Registry of Deeds, Book of Plans 14, Plan 640, and bounded and described as follows:

NORTHERLY by Billings Road, fifty-five (55) feet;
EASTERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Thirty-One, on said plan, one hundred twelve and 9/10 (112.9) feet;

SOUTHERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Eleven, on said plan, forty-five (45) feet, and WESTERLY by Lot numbered Four Hundred Ten, on said plan, one hundred nine and 15/100 (109.15) feet.

Containing, according to said plan, 5,560 square feet of land.

Hereby conveying all of my right, title and interest in the same premises conveyed to me and to Eustachio Cusianna, husband and wife, by deed of Frank Wynne, of said Quincy (erroneously referred to in said deed as being of Suffolk County, Massachusetts) dated April 15, 1969 and recorded with said Registry in Book 4586, Page 1, setting forth that he desire that -- all -- of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $300,000.00 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate and Family Court before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the 28th day of February 2001, the return day of this citation.

Witness, David H. Kopelman, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this 10th day of January of 2001.

Kathy Kowalski Passes Hand Therapy Certification Examination

Kathy Kowalski, OTR/L, CHT, an occupational therapist with the Quincy Medical Center Rehabilitation Department has passed the Hand Therapy Certification Examination.

By passing this examination, she has met the standard of competence established by the Hand Therapy Certification Commission and is entitled to use the designation Certified Hand Therapist (CHT) after her professional title. She is currently the co-chairwoman of the Bay State Hand Group of Massachusetts, which holds monthly meetings with other hand therapists to share information of new procedures in the field.

Kowalski has been an occupational therapist at Quincy Medical Center since 1995 following the completion of her studies at Worcester State College where she earned her B.S. degree in science in a four-year program of Occupational Therapy. Following this, she completed five years of experience in the field of Occupational Therapy, including hand therapy, to qualify for the extensive written examination needed to become certified.

A hand therapist is an occupational or physical therapist who, through advanced study, specializes in rehabilitating patients with conditions affecting the hands and upper extremities, enabling the therapist to work with patients and hasten their return to a productive lifestyle.

"We congratulate Kathy on this significant professional milestone," said Sandra Buono, director of Rehabilitation Services at Quincy Medical Center.

Council Puts Brakes On Hancock Project

Bigelow St. culvert had to be linked to both the second phase of the Quincy Concourse and the Hancock Lot Development and that we would clearly have to seek funding for the culvert at the same time we sought funding for the concourse.

"In my opinion, neither the concourse nor the Hancock Lot Development can work without the culvert."

Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino emphasized that the Hancock Lot Proposal was only a proposal to begin dialogue and that keeping that dialogue was still a priority.

"We have always said that this project was a concept," said Mannarino, who emphasized that Quincy 2000 was not a private developer. "We understand that there's an issue with the Town Brook that must be resolved, but not to have a dialogue would be a mistake."

TOWN BROOK FLOODING waters half-submerged this car in a yard in the Bigelow St. area in October, 1996.

Marine Cpl. William Knox Returns From Deployment

Marine Cpl. William C. Knox, son of Barbara H. Knox of 19 Vassal St., Wollaston, and William J. Knox of Washington, D. C., recently returned from a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean Sea and Arabian Gulf.

He is assigned to the 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit (MEU), home based at Camp Lejeune, N. C.

Knox's unit visited cities in Croatia, Italy and Spain, where Marines had the opportunity to shop, sightsee and enjoy the local culture and cuisine. Marines also participated in community relations projects.

Knox is a 1993 graduate of North Quincy High School. He joined the Marine Corps in May, 1997.

speeding on Penn and Columbia Sts.

"My plan has been universal, but I understand that each neighborhood is unique and has distinctive needs," D'Amico said. "To just look at the entire ward without any particular focus would be devastating. I think people should decide what happens on their own streets, not the politicians."

Added Gillon, the city's traffic engineer, "Councillor D'Amico continues to find innovative ways to make our streets the safest they can be. He should be commended for his outreach."

As for the West Quincy Traffic Alliance, the group's goals include studying the feasibility of:

- A connecting ramp extending directly from Crown Colony to the Southeast Expressway.

- New signals at Quarry Hills in anticipation of the new Golf Course off of Ricciuti Drive.

- Updated signals at Brewer's Corner at Granite and Copeland Sts.

- Excluding trucks from Common St.

"I am proud of the 16 committed residents who have volunteered to serve on the alliance," continued D'Amico. "I look forward to fostering their thoughtful insights and working toward long-term solutions to meet the needs of a constantly changing community. It's people like these who are responsible for today's stronger and better Ward 4."

The West Quincy Traffic Alliance includes: William

Gabriele Inbar Director Of Perioperative Services At Quincy Medical Center

Gabriele Inbar has been appointed Director of Perioperative Services at Quincy Medical Center.

In her new role, Inbar will be responsible for overseeing the daily functioning of the operating room, recovery, day surgery, cardiac catheterization laboratory, and central supply services.

With many years of management experience in the healthcare setting, Inbar has proven strengths in clinical operations, budgetary analysis, and personnel management. She joins Quincy Medical Center after several years with Sturdy Memorial Hospital in Attleboro, MA, where she was the nurse manager of the OR. There she was responsible for a 10-room operating suite, managing a staff of 40 people including RN's, Surgical, Anesthesia, and Instrument Techs as well as OR Assistants.

Inbar received her nursing education at E. Yellin School of Nursing, Haifa, Israel, her B.S. in psychology from Bridgewater State College, and her M. Ed. in counseling from Bridgewater State College. She has had many honors and awards and is involved in a variety of professional and community activities. She is currently the president of the Massachusetts Chapter of the Association of Operating Room Nurses (AORN).

"Quincy Medical Center is pleased that Gabriele has joined the hospital," said Dr. Timothy Babiniau, Chief of Surgery. "Her experience in healthcare will certainly be an asset."

Inbar lives in Sharon.

A proposed ordinance which would require developers in Quincy to set aside at least 10 percent of residential units for affordable housing, or a cash or land equivalent, gained momentum Monday night when more than a dozen of the city's residents, clergy, and community leaders spoke in favor of some form of inclusionary zoning at the first ever meeting of the Housing Committee of the City Council.

"This is an effective step forward," said the Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister of First Parish Church and a leader of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO), who said the housing crisis in the city had become so severe that teachers, nurses, and public employees "can no longer afford to live in the community in which they serve."

"It's a shame we haven't been able to get something like this earlier," added the Rev. William Mullin of St. John's Church, noting that almost 1,300 residential units had been developed in Quincy in the last decade with no affordable housing component.

Rev. Mullin, also a leader of the GBIO, spoke in support of a GBIO version of the ordinance which, he said, would provide "some tightening" of the language so that developers "can't wiggle out."

Beth Ann Strollo, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs, told councillors that "it is becoming increasingly difficult for low and moderate income families to buy homes in Quincy anymore."

To support her position, Strollo cited a study published in January 2000 by the Women's Educational Industrial Union of Boston which said a single parent in Norfolk County with one preschool and one school-age child needs to earn $17.93 an hour to cover basic living expenses.

And that study, Strollo said, used 1997 figures which estimated monthly rents at $839 a month. "The majority of QCAP families are working and making $10 an hour when they have to make at least $18 an hour," Strollo said.

John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, concurred with Strollo that the housing crisis was becoming more and more a problem of the working poor who can no longer afford Quincy's rents of $1,000 or more.

Expansion Halted To Protect Rattlesnakes;
City Hopes To Get New Land

Pine Hill Cemetery Fast Running Out Of Space

By TOM HENSHAW

Badly needed expansion of the Pine Hill Cemetery in West Quincy has been halted to protect the habitat of an endangered species of rattlesnake and the remaining 250 grave sites will be sold to families only on an "immediate need" basis.

Thomas P. Koch, executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, said the city is in the process of negotiating a land swap with the state for a new cemetery off Ricciuti Drive.

"This was an issue that we knew we would face once the state limited the further expansion of Pine Hill Cemetery," said Koch. "Quincy residents are in the unfortunate position of no longer being able to plan to be buried in their native city."

Sen. Michael Morrissey has filed a bill in the State Senate proposing that the MDC swap land off nearby Ricciuti Drive for the 35 acres of undeveloped but protected land in the cemetery, which would then be

District Attorney Says: Test Results Show Sylva Died Of Cocaine Overdose

The autopsy report from the Office of the State Medical Examiner establishes that the death of Charles Sylva, who died Dec. 17 while in the custody of the Quincy Police Department, was caused by "acute cocaine intoxication."

The announcement was made Feb. 8 by the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, who received the final report on the death the previous afternoon.

The Sylva family met with the District Attorney and State Police investigators on the day of the announcement and was informed in detail of the results of the investigative efforts by both the District Attorney's office and the State Medical Examiner's office, said David Traub, spokesman for District Attorney William Keating.

Sylva was pronounced dead at Quincy Medical Center at 5:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 2000. Quincy police immediately notified State Police investigators assigned to the District Attorney's Office who arrived at the Quincy Police station and began investigating at 6 a.m. Sylva's family was notified at approximately 8 a.m.

The investigation included interviews with all of the prisoners held in the cell block at the time of Sylva's death and Quincy Police officers, firefighters, and all civilians who encountered Mr. Sylva, as well as forensic testing and the medical tests whose results were received by the District Attorney's office last week.

The results of the investigation, said the DA's Office, "contradict all allegations of criminal misconduct by Quincy Police."

To Place Special Markers On Graves Two Quincy Men In Belgium To Honor 13 WWII Soldiers

By CRAIG SALTERS

In the morning hours of January 3, 1945, 13 parachute soldiers of the United States Army's famed 82nd Airborne Division were killed almost immediately when their company, part of the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, became pinned down by German soldiers in the village of Fosse, Belgium.

The attack on Fosse was part of the much larger "Battle of The Bulge," the bloody, last-ditch offensive by German armed forces trying to break through Allied front lines some six months after D-Day.

Fifty-six years later, in the morning hours Sunday, fellow soldiers, family members, and grateful villagers will gather at a small monument in Fosse to remember these 13 members of the "greatest generation."

The fallen soldiers are: Capt. Archibald A. McPheeters; 2nd Lt. Richard H. DeGenhardt; Sgt. William F. Reynolds; Cpl. William A. Halloran, Jr.; Pfc. James W. Brown; Pfc. Nick A. Cavallaro; Pfc. Richard W. Cutler; Pfc. Oscar C. Harris; Pfc. Emilio Interieri; Pfc. Arthur Kosow; Pvt. Louis DiGirmalo; Pvt. Anthony Kropis; and Pvt. Ralph D. Stark.

One Quincy resident making the trip will be William Tucker, a platoon sergeant at Fosse who has authored two books on his experiences as a WWII paratrooper and, as president of the 82nd Airborne Division's C-47 Club, was instrumental in the dedication of a monument to the 13 fallen soldiers in 1992.

Another Quincy resident in attendance will be John "Butch" Mahoney, a former Marine who served as a non-combatant during the Korean War and became close friends with Tucker while serving as chairman of the committee to build Quincy's Korean War Memorial.

Mahoney, who was asked by Tucker to attend the ceremonies, will pay his respects by decorating each of the 13 graves with an American flag and a personalized grave marker adorned with an eagle, the city of Quincy's name, the individual soldier's name, and the "Semper Parati" motto of the United States Marine Corps. "Eaten bread is soon forgotten," said Mahoney, echoing the oft-told advice of his father. "But these soldiers made the supreme sacrifice and this country would not be what it is today without them."

"This (the placing of the flags and markers) is something that the families of these young men would appreciate, something to say that these men are not forgotten."

The men who fought in the Battle of the Bulge are not forgotten by Tucker, who will bring 20 copies each of his books Parachute Soldier and Rendezvous at Rochelval with him to the week-long trip which will include roughly 20 members of the C-47 Club.

And they are not forgot-

WWII SOLDIERS REMEMBERED: John "Butch" Mahoney is in Europe this week to decorate the graves of 13 parachute soldiers of the 82nd Airborne who were killed in the town of Fosse, Belgium during the "Battle of the Bulge" of World War II. Mahoney, traveling along with Quincy's William Tucker and the 82nd Airborne Division's C-47 Club, will place American flags on all 13 graves. Mahoney, a former Marine, will also place 13 grave markers adorned with an eagle, the city of Quincy's name, the "Semper Parati" motto, and each individual soldier's name on the graves.

ten by Mahoney, a former history teacher who said it was almost impossible not to respect the soldiers of World War II as a boy growing up in Quincy in the 1940's.

"The Battle of The Bulge was one of the worst battles of World War II," said Mahoney, a member of North Quincy High School's Class of 1954. "They were undermanned, undersupplied, and fighting top SS Divisions."

"This was six months after D-Day, when people in England and France were celebrating. Everyone thought the war was over, but it wasn't."

Mahoney said his friendship with Tucker has increased his already great respect for the 82nd Airborne, who have made more combat jumps than any group in history and jumped behind the lines of Utah and Omaha Beaches during the famous D-Day invasion in June of 1944.

Author Tucker, who was raised in Boston and currently lives in Quincy, is a lawyer and former chairman of the United States Interstate Commerce Commission. He was vice-president of the Penn Central Railroad and special consultant to the Board of Directors of Eastern Airlines.

His additional government service includes an appointment as commissioner of the National Transportation Policy Commission and as U.S. Trustee for the Department of Justice.

With the 82nd Airborne Division during World War II, Tucker served in Africa, Italy, Normandy, Holland, Belgium, and Central Europe and attained the rank of lieutenant colonel in the United States Army Reserve as of retirement in 1966.

Mahoney, an athletic standout who played for the Boston Patriots in the early 1960's, retired after 29 years as the social health coordinator in charge of safety and security issues for the Quincy School Department. He also taught history for 10 years at Scituate High School while coaching football, wrestling, and track.

A former Marine, Mahoney served as chairman of Quincy's Korean War Memorial project and is a member of the city's World War II Memorial Committee.

Largest Grant Ever To Expand Radiology Capabilities

Fireman Donates $1 Million To Medical Center

Quincy resident and businessman Simon C. Fireman is donating $1 million to Quincy Medical Center to improve and expand the facility's radiology capabilities.

The grant, from Simon C. Fireman Charitable Foundation, is the largest ever made to Quincy Medical Center.

And is exactly twice the size of a grant Fireman made six years ago to fund what is now the Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women, a sophisticated and patient-friendly environment for women undergoing mammograms and related health services.

The new $1 million grant will fund the Simon C. Fireman Radiology Center, building on what Fireman started and creating a state-of-the-art radiology center for Quincy and surrounding communities.

"Quincy Medical Center has taken good care of my family and friends for as long as I can remember," said Fireman, "so it's only natural that I would want to give back in this way. My connections to this institution run deep through the care I've received right here in these halls for decades. I will always be grateful for the attention I have received here, and to the extent that I can, will always want to give back to the Quincy community through this vital channel."

Fireman's $1 million grant is structured as a challenge grant, designed to leverage and inspire others to follow his lead. Proceeds of the grant will be used to fund capital improvements to QMC's radiology department and to help fund a new back entrance for the hospital itself, adjacent to the parking area.

At a reception at the hospital to celebrate Fireman's commitment and philanthropy, he indicated his continuing commitment in large part has been inspired by his relationship with QMC Dr. William Frates, a QMC Foundation Board member and a radiologist, who Fireman came to know over two decades ago when he served as a member of Quincy Hospital's Board of Managers. He also made particular mention of his current primary care physician, Dr. Dennis Goldin.

Fireman has served in an advisory capacity to three United States presidents: George Bush, Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter. In 1986, he was appointed by President Reagan as Director of the Export-Import Bank of the United States and to chair an interagency task force on trade, consisting of 18 government agencies, including the White House, and headed by the State Department.

Fireman served as a member of the Quincy Hospital Board of Managers from 1977 to 1982.

Concerned Park Could Be Site For New QHS

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a long-time resident of Quincy, I am concerned about the possibility of the loss of Faxon Park of Merrymount Park to a new school building. When the School Siting Committee issued the original list of sites, I figured they were just covering all the bases. As the list was whittled down and these sites remained, I wondered what the reasoning would be to consider these beautiful natural spots for development.

Economics? If this is merely an economic decision to those misguided folks who think that this would be sound economic policy, let me suggest the following: Let's sell all of our parks, playgrounds, beaches and open spaces to private developers. All of them. I am sure we could get good money for all our parks and Wollaston Beach would fetch a good price in this market.

If this concept seems foolish to you, it's because it is. Viewing the school siting decision solely as an economic decision is short-sighted and unsatisfactory. There needs to be a viable, affordable resolution to this issue that provides for our school children without taking away from our natural resources. I hope that the siting committee will reach a similar conclusion in the end.

Doesn't Make Much Sense

You might not realize it, but you could be breaking the law with your trusty snowblower next time it storms.

And it could cost you $50.

An old city ordinance prohibits the use of noisy machinery in a neighborhood before 7 a.m. or after 6 p.m.

It would seem the ordinance needs a little revising, or, during snowstorms at least, a little bending.

Several Moreland Rd., Merrymount residents who were clearing their driveway and walkways with snowblowers after last week's storm no doubt would agree to that.

About 7:10 a.m., a police cruiser came down the street and an officer told them someone had complained about the noise and they would have to shut down their snowblowers.

The officer was polite and even apologetic. But, apparently a little misinformed.

According to one of the residents he said the complainant claimed he knew there was a city ordinance forbidding the use of snowblowers before 8 a.m.

Apparently, not so.

City Solicitor Steve McGrath says there is no ordinance specifically pertaining to snowblowers or prohibiting starting them up before 8 a.m.

But snowblowers, he says, would come under the so-called Noisy Machinery ordinance which reads:

"No person operating a plant or machinery, the operation of which is excessively noisy and disturbing to the reasonable peace and quiet of the proximate neighborhood, shall operate the same or cause the same to be operated before the hour of seven a.m. or after the hour of six p.m. of any day without a permit therefor first having been obtained from the chief of police."

City Clerk Joseph Shea says the ordinance was enacted back in 1946 just after World War II when Charles Ross was mayor.

Had snowblowers even been invented back then?

Anyway, Shea says the ordinance which he agrees is "pretty loose," calls for a $50 fine.

The ordinance apparently would also restrict the use of power mowers and power saws.

Now, you could understand someone beefing about a neighbor mowing his lawn with a power mower or taking down a tree with a power saw before 7 a.m.

But a snowblower!

Couldn't using one a few minutes before 7 a.m. be overlooked and legally allowed after 6 p.m.?

People have to get out of their driveways to go to work. Many have children to drive to school if classes aren't cancelled. There are doctor's appointments to keep. Or needed prescriptions to be picked up. Etc., etc.

Not everyone can or should shovel.

And if they have to get a permit from the police chief for an exemption to the ordinance, how do they get to the police station if they can't get out of their driveways?

The ordinance sounds like it needs some overhauling and fine tuning.

It doesn't make much sense to silence snowblowers when snow is piling up.

Maybe the enforcement could be put in limbo during or right after a heavy snowstorm.

And the next time someone complains, may be he (or she) could be told: "Have a little heart."

Like Carol Herbai, The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year for 2000.

She was selected for the honor for more than a half century of dedication to others as a volunteer at Quincy Medical Center, the American Red Cross and even at a leper colony.

She underwent major surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital Jan. 17, and was then transferred at her request to Quincy Medical for her transitional care where she still is.

But nothing stops her when it comes to helping out. Last Friday, the QMC Auxiliary of which she is president, held its annual Heart Tag Day at the hospital with proceeds going to the purchase of a nuclear medicine camera for the cardiology department.

And Carol wheeled herself out of her room down to where the action was to help out at the fundraiser.

She will be honored by The Sun at a reception Sunday, March 18 at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

She doesn't know how long she will be at the hospital but vows: "I'll be there for the reception."

THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of the Fore River Shipyard looking south from South Street. Bent's Creek is the water in the center of the view leading out to the Fore River on the left. In the center the small building is the powerhouse, steam is coming out vents on the side. To its left the large building was the machine shop and beyond that was the 75-ton crane on the gantry dock. The long building on the right was the blacksmith shop or forge. In its day this was the largest forge in the world. In addition to large warships the yard produced many smaller vessels like the white excursion or ferryboat in the water on the left. In fact in its early years the company produced a wide array of steel products ranging from boilers and railroad cars to submarines.

Hancock Bust Presented To City

By PAUL HAROLD

The John Hancock Insurance Company presented a five foot, 800-pound bronze bust of John Hancock to the city, following negotiations between Mayor Thomas Burgin and company vice president Robert Kelsey.

The bust was originally placed in the Federal St., Boston headquarters of the company, but was replaced with a full size statue in the lobby of the company's new skyscraper headquarters. It had been in storage since 1922.

Feb. 15 - 21
1951
50 Years Ago

Mayor Burgin did not designate a site for display of the bust, but it was installed on a granite base on the lawn of the Adams Academy, which was the site of Hancock's birthplace.

BREAK-IN AT ADAMS BIRTHPLACE

Members of the Quincy Historical Society were at the John Adams' birthplace to inventory items damaged during a break-in at the cottage over the weekend. An initial survey showed no historical materials stolen, but there was considerable damage to a portrait of the president with paint smeared over walls.

Police were investigating the break-in. They had interviewed two 10-year-old students from the Adams School who said they walked in after finding the door open, but they didn't take anything.

O'CONNELL TO HEAD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Young bank executive, William O'Connell, assistant treasurer of the Granite Trust Company, was elected secretary of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. O'Connell replaced Alexander Purdon who left for a post at the National Federation of American Shipping.

"I have been greatly honored by being elected to the position of secretary of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce," O'Connell said. "The position carries tremendous responsibilities to the people of Quincy and the South Shore as well as to the businesses and membership."

Originally from Houghs Neck, O'Connell lived on Putnam St. with his wife, Margaret. He was active in a number of organizations, including the 1000 Hour Club at the YMCA.

On Jan. 30, the names of two men (Joseph Salvati and Peter Limone) were cleared of involvement in a 1965 gangland-style murder. Each man served upwards of 30 years in prison for a crime that they did not commit. I first began working on this story in March of 1993. I want your readers to know of

When I broadcast my first report about the Joe Salvati story, Leo Papile called me on behalf of himself and Joe McCain. Both men, at great risk to personal and professional relationships that they had within the law enforcement community, provided me with exculpatory information to help substantiate Mr. Salvati's innocence. During the eight years that followed, both Leo and Joe have become great friends and supporters as we worked to find justice for Joe Salvati and his family. In recent days, the ethics of former FBI agents and others in law enforcement have been questioned. Men like Leo Papile and Joe McCain represent their former profession and their communities well and I hope your readers value their continuing contribution to the real pursuit of justice.

Please Clear Sidewalks After Ice/Snow Storms

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Though it has been several days since the latest storm, some of us are still having a slow commute in the morning — those of us walking that is. As I slipped and slid my way to the Wollaston "T" station one morning, I noted an interesting pattern to the worst of the icy spots: They were all in front of the apartment buildings I passed. The single-family homes had done a great job taking care of their walks. In front of rental property, however, I was sometimes walking on ice that had formed on top of the ice from two storms ago. Being slightly before my middle age, I have managed to cope with this adversity by either barreling through the mess or jumping out into the road for a time and walking around the worse of it. But I was inspired to write to the Sun because I realized that in the last three weeks I had seen very little of my morning pal, and I am concerned for him. We don't know each other's name, but we both have the same habit of looking people in the eye that we pass on the sidewalk and saying, "Hello." Almost every morning I see this grizzled octogenarian in his blue wind-breaker and cap walking with his cane to or from Dot's on Beale Street for his morning paper. We share our neighborly greeting and go our way. I haven't seen him in quite some time. My guess is that it has to do with the fact that one of the worse sidewalks on Beach Street is right outside his apartment building. It has never been shoveled this winter. Never. I'm certain that based on how often I run into my friend heading for Dot's that, but for the treacherous ice, he would still really enjoy getting that morning paper. For my neighbor's sake, and the sake of all those that regularly use the city's sidewalks, would the owners of rental property in Wollaston please ensure that their sidewalks are cleared after a storm. Thanks. Jason Ryan Quincy

QHS Morning Announcements

Quincy High School's morning announcements can be seen live each morning on Channel 22 from 7:45 a.m. to 7:53 a.m. Parents and students can find out what is happening at Quincy High School by watching a replay of the morning announcements at 5 p.m. The service is run by QHS students in the communications classes of teacher John Green.

'Whose Wife Is It Anyway' At Quincy Dinner Theater In March

The Olivier Award-winning British comedy Whose Wife Is It Anyway will make its New England premiere at the Quincy Dinner Theater, 1170 Hancock St., in March.

Show dates are March 3, 4, 9, 10, 11, 17, 23, 24, and 25.

Fridays and Saturdays, dinner is at 7 p.m. with an 8:30 p.m. showtime; Sundays, dinner is at 2 p.m. with matinee performances at 3:30 p.m.

Ticket price is $35 per person.

The theater is located across from the Quincy Center MBTA Station and is wheelchair accessible.

For reservations, call (781)843-5862.

THE AWARD-WINNING British comedy Whose Wife Is It Anyway will be at the Quincy Dinner Theater beginning Saturday, March 3 and continuing on various dates throughout March. From left are Quincy residents Ben Bacon, Brian Delaney, and Charles Hughes who will each perform in the play.

Benefit Concert To Honor Frank Aylward Sunday

Five Boston-area bands - Mark Morris and the Cautones, Two-Ton Shoe, WonderKat, Scarecrow, and Motherfunk -- will perform Sunday at 7 p.m. at Florian Hall, 55 Hallett St., Dorchester in a benefit honoring local guitarist Frank Aylward, who died in August of melanoma cancer at the age of 32.

One hundred percent of proceeds will be donated to the Beth Israel Hospital Melanoma Clinic in Boston.

"Frank was connected in some way to each of the bands that are playing," said P.D. Rogers, lead singer of WonderKat and co-organizer of the event. "We all had the honor of knowing him and most of us had the privilege of playing with him."

Aylward, a Quincy resident, played lead guitar in Scarecrow, a John Cougar Mellencamp Tribute Band; Motherfunk, a funk-rock band; and WonderKat, a rock band that Aylward established along with Rogers.

"Music was Frank's passion, so this concert is really a tribute to his life," said Robert Aylward, brother and co-organizer of the event. "We couldn't think of a better way to honor his memory and raise money for the clinic than to host a concert with five bands he respected and loved -- as a fan and as a fellow musician."

Tickets for the show are $20 and are on sale at the Beachcomber and the Coffee Break Cafe, both located in Quincy, or by calling (781) 294-7883.

Do not miss the New England Premier of pyramiding lunacy and non-stop laughs as we bring the "Olivier Award Winning" adult comedy to our stage. Watch the madness unfold as the Governments Junior Minister spends the evening with the Opposition's sultry typtist...a gleefully funny war!

SAFE TRAVEL

While traveling is supposed to be fun and relaxing, it will not be enjoyable if you get sick. Exercising caution and making informed decisions can help you have your dream vacation. The most common illness suffered by travelers is travelers' diarrhea, which is caused by a viral, bacterial or parasitic infection. Eating and drinking safely will ward off this potentially serious condition. We Make sure all dairy products have been pasteurized and avoid undercooked beef and poultry, raw eggs and shellfish. Peel and thoroughly cook all fruits and vegetables. Do not buy food from a street vendor. Stay away from tap water, ice cubes and water fountains, opting instead for bottled or boiled water. Wear insect repellent when outdoors.

You'll have the benefit of our entire staff's experiences here at PRIME TRAVEL, 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay, whether you need safe travel tips or information about cruise specials that are currently being offered. Our services are complete and based on the knowledge and experiences of our well-traveled, skilled team of travel agents. We are fully computerized and can help with leisure, domestic and international travel. For creative, personalized travel, call 617-472-3697.

Soprano Recital At Sacred Heart

Local soprano Julie Anne Fay will present "A Breath of Spring," a voice recital of springtime music, Saturday, Feb. 24 at 7:30 p.m. at Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The program will include music by Mozart, Schubert, Strauss, Cooke, Argento and Copland. Fay will be joined by Steven Jackson, clarinet, a regular performer with Boston's Emmanuel Music. Coach/accompanist Timothy Steele will accompany at the piano.

"In planning this, my second recital at Sacred Heart Church, I wanted to focus on a theme to draw people into the music," Fay said. "With the timing of the concert at the end of February, it seemed like a natural fit to focus on the coming of spring. I know I'm ready for winter to be over, and I suspect most New Englanders are at this time of year, too. I hope this recital will bring freshness and life to our hope that spring isn't too far away."

Fay, a graduate of New England Conservatory, is a cantor at Sacred Heart Church. A Milton resident, she has appeared with numerous local and regional

Squantum Gardeners Offer $500 Scholarship

Seaside Gardeners of Squantum is offering a $500 scholarship to a high school senior.

To be eligible, the student must currently live in Squantum and plan to attend a two or four-year college.

Applications must be postmarked no later than March 15. The recipient will be named on April 11.

To obtain an application, or further information about the scholarship, call Laurie Kelliher, Seaside Gardeners of Squantum Scholarship Committeewoman, at 773-2434.

QHS, NQHS Science Depts. Receive $8,210 Toshiba Grant

Toshiba America recently visited the Quincy Public Schools and presented the science departments at both high schools with a check for $8,210.

Representing Toshiba were John Baia and Masamichi Okada, both corporate managers working in the Procurement and Export Division at Toshiba's Massachusetts Office.

The purpose of the grant is to give teachers the technological tools to enhance learning in and beyond the classroom.

Biology teachers Matthew Croft from North Quincy High School and Peter Swanson from Quincy High School wrote the grant application last summer while they were instructing a technology workshop stemming from one of the several grants that the science departments have been awarded called the A.D.A.M.

It was decided that having both schools work together would be a productive way of using technology between the two schools.

The grant will provide both classrooms with technology to help students discover biological knowledge through environmental issues.

Students will study Quincy's coastal community and Black's Creek in particular. The study will interface with an MIT project called Sea Grant as well as be involved in a state Envirothon competition. Both schools are participating in these activities and Advanced Placement Environmental Science students will be readying themselves to compete against the state's brightest young scientists at the Envirothon competition.

Catherine Smith, department head at Quincy High School, opened the grant award ceremony by defining the award as "an exciting adventure for students at both schools into science and technology."

The grant was written so that the end result would give students a chance to improve potential MCAS scores.

"The Toshiba grant was written to reflect learning as stated through the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks," Smith said.

Field studies will provide students with experiences in making observations, developing research techniques, writing journals, manipulating data, showing relationships in nature and problem solving.

NQHS' Croft detailed how the grant would be used and how he believed students would benefit from the grant resources. Both Croft and Swanson are involved in providing computer technology within their classroom so that students are able to learn practical use of computers through a curricular design for learning.

Baia spoke to teachers, students, and administrators of Toshiba's commitment to assisting school communities in preparing students for a rapidly changing technological society. He reflected on the personal pride that he felt as a Toshiba employee in presenting the grant to the Quincy Public Schools. He referred to his own personal observations and experiences as to how technology is currently affecting children in the schools.

Mary Young, department head at North Quincy High School, addressed the group with a message of appreciation. She assured Baia and Okada that the grant would be put to good use.

She also praised Croft and Swanson for their efforts writing the grant as well as for the contribution that they make daily at their respective schools and to the students they teach.

Young made a reference to the healthy rivalry that exists between the two schools but also pointed out the strong working relationship that the two schools have, especially in the sciences.

Currently the two schools are working together on an MIT Sea Grant, The A.D.A.M. Grant through Tufts University, the U.S. Robotics Competition with Gillette Corporation, and now with Toshiba America.

Robert Keuther, principal of Quincy High School, and Frank Moffett, assistant principal at North Quincy High School, accepted the check for $8,210.

Students Crystal Melanson (QHS) and Nicole Glasheen (NQHS) presented Baia and Okada gifts from the schools as a remembrance of the grant ceremony.

Refreshments were served following the presentation in the Quincy High School Pride Room which was provided by the culinary arts department at the Center for Technical Education.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

(NON) CONVENTIONAL WISDOM

The third molars, commonly referred to as "wisdom teeth," are the last to erupt in the mouth; often, there is little room left for them in the dental ridge. Due to impaction, they may erupt partially or not at all. Because impacted wisdom teeth can pose problems for the teeth above them, extraction may be indicated. This procedure may require surgical incision and/or sectioning of the tooth before removal can be accomplished. If surgical extraction is indicated, it is usually better to have them removed as soon as possible because healing can be compromised in adults in later years. The ideal time for extraction of wisdom teeth in young adults is between the ages of 16 and 22 years.

Wisdom teeth can be hard to clean and are more prone to decay. Bacteria can infect the tissue surrounding partially erupted molars and cause gum disease. Crowding can cause damage to adjacent teeth and jawbone and if teeth are impacted, cysts can form and destroy surrounding bone. Everyone wants a beautiful smile - and everyone should have a healthy one. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we feel a deep responsibility and commitment to provide the very best care with state-of-the-art equipment. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for professional, gentle dental care. Our office is handicap accessible with plenty of parking. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Impacted wisdom teeth can cause misalignment of existing teeth.

Lions Club, Habitat For Humanity Consider Possible Joint Effort

A monthly luncheon of the Quincy Lions Club has generated the possibility of a unique partnership between South Shore Habitat for Humanity and local Lions Club affiliates.

The potential partnership stems from Lions Club International's ongoing relationship with Habitat for Humanity International and their pledge to underwrite 75 percent of the cost of a home sponsored by a local Lions Club.

The recent meeting of the Quincy Lions Club featured Cynthia Hargrove, South Shore Habitat's Executive Director, as the keynote speaker. Hargrove spoke of Habitat's recent satisfaction in completing Quincy Granite Village, a nine-home neighborhood on Bower Rd.

One of the largest Habitat for Humanity developments in the Northeast, Quincy Granite Village received initial support from the Mayor's Office and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services to get the project off the ground in 1995. A unified outpouring of support from local businesses, churches, community organizations, and individuals carried the project through to completion this past October.

Lions Clubs worldwide work with social service organizations to empower individuals with physical and mental disabilities. Recently the International Association of Lions Clubs and Habitat for Humanity entered into a three-year partnership that will expand self-help home ownership opportunities for families with members who have disabilities.

Individual grants could cover up to 75 percent of eligible homes built by Habitat with volunteers from participating Lions Clubs and Districts and partner families. Hargrove said she hopes to generate support for such a partnership with Lions Clubs throughout the South Shore.

However, Hargrove added, "Our biggest challenge right now is to find donated land appropriate for building affordable homes."

Habitat for Humanity seeks to eliminate substandard and inadequate housing around the world. Lions Clubs have long been supporters of Habitat for Humanity's special projects for people with disabilities and a house building partnership between the two organizations on the South Shore, Hargrove said, could help a family with special challenges realize the dream of owning their own home.

QPS Kindergarten Registration March 6 At Elementary Schools

Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, assistant superintendent of the Quincy Public Schools, announces the following information for the 2001-2002 kindergarten registration:

Registration for Kindergarten for the school year 2001-2002 will be held on Tuesday, March 6 from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at every public elementary school in Quincy for all children who will be five years of age in calendar year 2001.

Parents must present a birth certificate, passport/visa at the time of registration and evidence of immunizations. Department of Public Health kindergarten entrance immunization requirements are effective September, 2000:

•Five doses of DPT, unless fourth dose given after fourth birthday.

•Four doses of Polio, unless third dose given after fourth birthday.

•Three doses of Hep B, if born after Jan. 1, 1992.

•Two doses of MMR, with first given after first birthday.

•One dose of Varicella (chickenpox) or doctor documented case of chickenpox.

A recent entrance physical examination is mandated by the state for all students entering school and preferably should be presented at registration or at least before the start of school in September.

In addition, evidence of previous screening for lead poisoning is required for all kindergarten entrants.

Children who will be six years of age on or before Dec. 31, 2001 and who have not attended public kindergarten may be registered for grade one on the same day.

Parents of children living in the Lincoln-Hancock, Clifford H. Marshall, Francis W. Parker, Wollaston, and Snug Harbor School districts may receive information at kindergarten registration concerning opportunities for preschool/early childhood education.

BUILT TO ORDER

Car manufacturers are increasingly appealing to consumers' interest in purchasing vehicles that are built to order. Soon, the days of making simple choices between automatic and standard transmissions and car color will give way to a future of customizing vehicles with Internet services, telephone and entertainment features. According to the most recent report by J.D. Power and Associates, 70 percent of consumers have at least considered purchasing a built-to-order vehicle. While only seven percent had actually done so, the numbers reflect the desire of consumers to purchase customized vehicles. As car manufacturers respond to this desire with attractive pricing and delivery times, experts look for the percentage of consumers who custom-order their cars to triple over the next year.

Whether your car is custom made or off-the-floor, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781) 843-1550 is your local auto center that can handle all your automotive needs, a shop that wants to earn your return business, a shop that treats you like a person and not a number. We never compromise the wonderful reputation we have earned from our many satisfied customers, your friends and relatives. Open Mon-Fri 8am-9pm, Sat 7am-9pm, Sun 8am-5pm. We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Count on us for propane for grills, motor homes and converted vehicles.

HINT: Currently, 73% of consumers who purchase built-to-order vehicles are male. By 2004, researchers expect that 54% of custom-built car buyers will be women.

Citizens Energy Heating Oil Available To Quincy Residents

With six weeks of winter still to go, Citizens Energy is urging Quincy residents to call for low-cost heating oil if they are having trouble paying for heat.

The company, run by Joseph P. Kennedy II, provides half price fuel for elderly and low-income families across the state.

"Too many of our friends and neighbors are struggling to make ends meet during this tough heating season," said Kennedy. "With oil prices rising and temperatures plummeting, working families and elderly households are facing a double whammy this winter. But working with our partners in Quincy, we want to make sure no one is left out in the cold."

Citizens Energy receives no federal funds and has no threshold income requirements for those who receive its aid. The program's goal, Kennedy said, is to help those in need, with the hopes of providing fuel assistance to "tens of thousands of families this year."

Soaring energy prices mean that people are forced to choose among life's basic necessities.

"Vulnerable Americans have to make some very hard decisions. They have to choose between putting food on the table and staying warm at night," Kennedy said. "Too many families take to dangerous practices like leaving ovens on at night or using space heaters improperly. People are having a tough time this winter, but we want them to know that they do have alternatives to being cold."

Citizens Energy is expected to pump at least two million gallons of heating oil for more than 12,000 homes this winter. In Quincy, Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., administers the Citizens Energy Oil Heat Program. The agency is one of 22 fuel assistance groups assisting with the program this year.

Over 300 local heating oil dealers deliver Citizens fuel to needy families throughout the state. Anyone interested in applying for help from the Citizens Energy Oil Heat Program should call 1-877-563-4645 to be referred to their local fuel assistance agency for a brief phone application.

Hat Rack Could Close As Soon As March

The Hat Rack Bar in Brewer's Corner may shut down as early as mid-March if the transfer of its liquor license to The Eight Ball in Quincy Square proceeds smoothly.

That transfer application is now scheduled for a hearing before the Quincy License Board on March 6 and Joseph Shea, chairman of the License Board, has indicated to Assistant City Solicitor James Timmins that, given a preliminary review of the Eight Ball application, everything appears to be in order.

The license board revoked the all-alcohol, common victualer's license of The Hat Rack Sept. 28 of last year after a raid by Quincy police netted several arrests on drug and gambling charges.

The bar, however, has remained open pending an appeal to the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, which held a status conference on the matter Tuesday.

At the conference, Hat Rack attorney Louis Cassis informed commissioners that a transfer application had been filed with the city to allow the transfer of their license to The Eight Ball, an existing business in Quincy Square.

Timmins indicated to ABCC Chairman Frederick Riley that the city would allow the transfer application to proceed "only because it will insure that The Hat Rack is closed sooner than it might otherwise close under the appeal process, thereby removing the establishment from the Brewer's Corner neighborhood."

"While I am confident we will prevail before the ABCC, the fact of the matter is it takes time," said Timmins.

The hearing, Timmins explained, would not be completed until March and the ABCC then takes time -- anywhere from one to two months -- to issue a decision.

"The same officers -- Detective Foley, Sergeant Glynn, and others in the drug unit -- have worked with me before when we shut down the Sagamore Inn and The Point Pub, both of which were remarkably similar to this case," Timmins said. "Here, however, we have the opportunity to fast-track the process and avoid protracted appeals."

The ABCC's Riley also agreed to a city request that the matter remain on the hearing docket pending the outcome of the transfer application.

"In the event that the transfer does not go through for some reason, we will be right back before the commission for the hearing," Timmins said.

The Eight Ball was before the License Board in February of 2000 when it first received a beer and wine license. That application was without incident, which makes the likelihood of an approval of the transfer all the more likely.

"Given the confluence of favorable circumstances," Timmins said, "it appears we will have The Hat Rack out of business in short order."

Volunteers Needed For American Cancer Society's 'Daffodil Days'

The American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days will soon be here, and volunteers are needed to make this year's event a success.

Volunteers will work with Society staff and will be responsible for managing the daffodil ordering process, as well as coordination of daffodil distribution in their communities.

"Daffodil Days is recognized as a symbol of hope by so many in our community -- this annual event is an opportunity for volunteers to help raise vital funds for the American Cancer Society programs of research, education, and patient services," said Henry Bradley, Volunteer Daffodil

Chairman for the South Shore area. "The event also allows local residents to work together in a common goal: helping those touched by cancer."

This March, 7.5 million daffodils will arrive for distribution throughout New England.

To help the American Cancer Society celebrate Daffodil Days, March 26 through March 29, volunteer to bring this symbol of hope to businesses, homes, and schools in your community. To volunteer, call your local American Cancer Society at (508) 584-9600.

Nancy Moynihan Director Radiology Services At QMC

Nancy Moynihan has been appointed Director of Radiology Services at Quincy Medical Center.

Moynihan has been at the hospital for 15 years beginning as a radiology technician on a part time basis.

She later became a supervisor of diagnostic services and will now be responsible for all the services that fall under the radiology umbrella such as CT Scan, Nuclear Medicine, Ultrasound, and Women's Imaging and mammography services.

Moynihan is a graduate of St. Joseph's College in Standish, Maine, where she held a double major in radiologic science and health-care administration. She is also a member of the American Registry of Radiological Technologists.

"I'm really looking forward to the challenges of my new position," Moynihan said. "Radiology Services plays a key role in the field of healthcare today and I am pleased to be part of it."

We need you.

Dog Training Courses At Armory Begin March 7

Dog training courses sponsored by the New England Humane Association begin Wednesday, March 7 at the Quincy Armory, 1000 Hancock St.

"Good Manners for Beginners" is a five-week course which begins March 7 at 6 p.m. The course teaches beginner level commands such as "sit," "stay," "come," "heel," "drop it," and "don't touch" and also offers help with problems such as jumping, mouthing, and chewing.

"Obedience with Distractions" is a five-week course which begins March 7 at 8 p.m. The course teaches dogs to perform the basic commands in spite of sound, motion, and object distractions. It also teaches the dog to perform such commands from greater distances, for longer periods of time, and with less and less leash control.

The Quincy Armory will also be offering the five-week "Agility Combo" course beginning March 7 at 7 p.m.

The cost for each five-week course is $90.

For more information or to register, call (617) 789-3647.

Boating Course At Town River Yacht Club Begins Feb. 28

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary will sponsor a Basic Boating and Seamanship Course beginning Wednesday, Feb. 28 at 7 p.m. at Town River Yacht Club, Quincy.

Registration is at 6:30 p.m.

The 12-week course is for the power boater and includes lessons in language, trailering, federal and state requirements, courtesy motorboat examinations, rules of the roads, aids to navigation, piloting, weather, radio telephone, sailing, marlinesep seamanship and more.

The course also meets the requirements for chiladded to the adjacent Blue Hills Reservation.

"We've had informal meetings with them," said Koch. "We're awaiting a hearing date on the bill. We're not even sure which Senate committee will get to handle it."

The original 43 acres that became Pine Hill Cemetery was sold to the city by the state in 1962 for $22,000. Ground was finally broken for development in 1965. The cemetery gradually expanded over the next 30 years as finances permitted.

But expansion was stymied in 1997 when the State Office of Environmental Affairs declared that a portion of the land to be developed for grave sites was within the migratory habitat of the endangered timber rattlesnake and the copperhead.

"We thought we had enough grave sites in Pine Hill in the 1960s," said Koch. "But the environmental laws are different now."

Right now, said Koch, there are some 5,000 grave sites with about 10,000 occupants. There is room for about 250 more. The Board of Cemetery Managers has voted to halt the practice of selling lots on a "pre-need" basis and move them only on an "immediate need" basis.

"Our inability to expand into the remaining acreage at Pine Hill Cemetery has left this city in a quandary," said Richard Sweeney, chairman of the Cemetery Board of Managers. "It means a great deal to some people to know that they will be forever interred in their home city.

"It is easier on loved ones, especially elder citizens, when the burial sites of their spouses, families or friends are a short drive away. Some members of our elder population do not have the range of travel that most enjoy. This is an important service to the people of this city that has been lost."

The city has six municipal cemeteries, including the three "historic" cemeteries, Hancock, Snug Harbor and Sailor's Home, which have not had a burial in almost a century.

Burials will continue at previously purchased lots at Mt. Wollaston, Pine Hill and Hall Cemeteries.

Customers Say Quality Service Is Most Valuable In Buying Process

By CAROL BULMAN,
President
Conway Financial Services

I just finished reading a group of questionnaires that were completed by our recent customers following the purchasing of their homes, and I began to see a trend in what customers are really seeking.

In those surveys, which are sent to each customer and personally reviewed by Conway executives and managers, there were very few comments that referred to the interest rate, the mortgage product, the number of mortgage types that we offered or how great our computers were.

Instead, the majority of the comments focused on the quality of service. Comments included:

- "He answered all of my questions."
- "My mortgage loan was a complicated one and she was very patient throughout the process."
- "I was treated well and my questions were answered honestly."

• "The person who took care of me was professional and caring."

• "The process went very smoothly and this meant a lot to us during a very stressful time in our lives."

• "If not for the people who worked on my loan, we wouldn't be living in the house of our dreams today."

As a mortgage broker, we are in the service industry. We are only as good as the last word we say to a customer, the last first-time buyer we helped into a home, the last frustrated homebuyer whose fears we helped alleviate.

To be good in this business, you have to believe each day that you are instrumental in helping a person achieve the American Dream of homeownership.

It sounds corny, but it is true that our customers expect the old-fashioned rules of good service. When it comes down to it, as much as we have all become reliant upon the Internet and computers, it's the personal touch and emphasis on superior customer service that makes the difference each day and sets some companies above others.

So, as we look to the New Year with renewed enthusiasm, we at Conway Financial Services are looking to the ideals that have built our success and that our customers have come to depend on: honest and respectful treatment, fairness in our business practices, admitting our mistakes when we make them and good, old-fashioned kindness.

It sounds a little like the book "Everything Important that I Learned I Learned in Kindergarten." Doesn't it? But it is basically the truth that we want to be treated as we have taught our children to treat others.

Leave you with a wish for a happy and healthy New Year, and a promise of another year of quality treatment by the staff of Jack Conway & Co. and Conway Financial Services.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME

If homeownership is a substantial part of the American dream, more Americans are realizing this dream than ever before. Homeownership among American households is at an all-time high. A record 67.2% of all families owned a home in the second quarter of 2000 (the most recent period for which statistics are available). According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, that is the highest percentage in history. In fact, the nation's homeownership rate has been climbing steadily over the past few years. In 1999, it climbed to 66.8%, compared with 64% in 1993 and 45% in the 1940's. If you are owning a home, ask a real estate agent to help you crunch the numbers.

As noted in this week's column, more and more Americans are enjoying the dream of home ownership. The recent decrease in interest rates makes this a great time to purchase a home. If you're renting, your mortgage could be the same or even lower than your rent. ERA CENTRAL REAL ESTATE is progressive, energetic and forward-looking. We can review your wish list of features and income and arrange for a financial consultation. The Multiple Listing Service allows us to show you virtually any property. Call us at 328-1312 to arrange a convenient consultation, or visit us at 128 McGrath Highway.

HINT: If the down payment poses a problem, ask the real estate agent to suggest workable solutions.

WINTER CAR CARE

AAA Says Don't Skip A Step In Child Passenger Safety

Diligent parents that properly restrain infants and toddlers in child safety seats too often skip a step when it comes to properly protecting older children riding in vehicles, according to AAA Southern New England.

"The forgotten step is to buckle children weighing between 40 and 80 pounds into booster seats designed to position adult seat belts correctly and safely around them," said John Paul, Manager of Traffic Safety for AAA. "Until children are large enough to correctly fit an adult-sized seat belt, they are at risk of fatal injury because the shoulder strap cuts across their necks and the lap belts ride up onto their soft bellies."

AAA is joining with other safety-minded organizations during National Child Passenger Safety Week, Feb. 11-18, to call attention to the need for increased use of child booster seats.

According to AAA, the easiest way to know when children are large enough for an adult seat belt is to evaluate whether they can sit with their back straight up against the seat cushion while their knees bend over the seat edge without slouching.

Restraint use for children from age 1 to 4 is 91 percent, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. However, restraint use plummets over 20 points to 69 percent for children age 5 to 15—and most children aged 5 to 8 are improperly protected with an adult-sized seat belt, instead of a booster.

Booster seats can be obtained at major retailers usually for less than $60. All booster seats are required to meet federal safety standards, regardless of price. They make great gifts from grandparents or family friends.

AAA offers several key tips for choosing and using the right booster seat:

- From an early age, explain to young children that they will use a booster seat when they are older.
- When it is time to switch to a booster seat, show children how the booster offers them better protection than an adult seat belt.
- Let children help in selecting the seat.
- Make sure the seat fits your child's weight and height.

• Try installing a seat in your vehicle before purchasing it. Make sure it fits the vehicle seat and restraint system.

• Always consult your vehicle owner's manual before purchasing and installing a child safety seat. Most will offer specific instructions and list special equipment needed for proper installation of a child safety seat.

AAA also recommends that all children under age 13 ride in the back seat.

"The safest place for a younger passenger is in the back seat, properly restrained," said Paul. "Unless there is no alternative, the back is where it's at."

When there is no other alternative but to place a child over the age of 1 in the front seat, push the vehicle seat all the way back and make sure the child is safely fastened in the appropriate child safety restraint.

HEY, IT'S FRANKLIN: Paulette Bourgeois (second from right), author of more than 25 books on the character Franklin the Turtle, recently read from her book Franklin In The Dark at the Snug Harbor Elementary School to celebrate the school's three-year old partnership with Sears, Roebuck and Co. of Braintree, which made a $2,500 donation to the school to celebrate the occasion. Joining Bourgeois at the reading were, from left: Snug Harbor Principal Dr. Allan Osborne; Charles Ferreira, general manager of Sears, Braintree; Franklin (AKA Brad Hilston, manager, Human Resources, Sears, Braintree); and Brenda Clark, the book's illustrator. Franklin is also the star of a widely popular cartoon series on the Nickelodeon Channel.

Dr. ALLAN OSBORNE (left), principal of the Snug Harbor Community School, accepts a $2,500 check from Charles Ferreira, general manager of Sears, Braintree, to celebrate the three-year partnership between the school and the business, and to contribute to the school's literacy efforts. Paulette Bourgeois and Brenda Clark, author and illustrator, respectively, of the Franklin the Turtle books were also on hand to mark the occasion. (Quincy Sun photos)

Sears Celebrates School Partnership Franklin The Turtle Entertains At Snug Harbor

To help celebrate its ongoing partnership with the Snug Harbor School, the Sears store at the South Shore Plaza in Braintree recently brought a children's storybook character to the school.

Franklin the Turtle, a renowned children's celebrity who is featured in more than 25 books with worldwide sales exceeding 32 million, spent the day entertaining the children. Franklin is also watched by more than 11 million children in an animated show each week.

Franklin was accompanied by the books' author Paulette Bourgeois and illustrator Brenda Clark. Bourgeois read the first book in the series, Franklin in the Dark, to the children while Clark drew pictures of the character.

Bourgeois also told the children how she came up with the idea for her first book and how she developed the character and the stories. Clark talked to the children about her experiences as an illustrator and showed them some of her artwork from when she was a child herself.

At the end of the session Bourgeois and Clark presented the school with an autographed copy of a collection of their stories. Clark also presented the school with several signed illustrations.

Sears provided each student with an autographed copy of Franklin in the Dark.

As an added treat, the animator from the television series, Tony Tarantini, presented a workshop showing the students how animated films are produced. Tarantini also taught the children how to draw cartoon characters.

In addition to bringing the celebrities to the school, Sears General Manager Charles Ferreira presented the school with a check for $2,500 to help with their literacy efforts. Sears has been Snug Harbor's business partner for several years and has supported the school over the years by sponsoring the Junior Achievement program and donating much needed equipment.

This past September, to help the school kick off a new literacy initiative, over 20 Sears employees came to the school every day for a week to read to the children.

Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon had high praise for Sears, calling the partnership one of the best in the city. Principal Dr. Allan Osborne also had high praise for Sears and especially for Ferreira.

"He's an extraordinary person who truly cares about people," said Dr. Osborne, adding that Ferreira and his team from Sears were "very much a part of this school."

Anxiety: The Treatable Disorder

By PHIL QUINN, Sc.D.
We have all experienced anxiety in our lives. We're familiar with the sudden rush of adrenaline and resulting increase in our heart rate, increased respiration, difficulty breathing and the fear that accompanies anxiety. Fortunately, for most of us, these anxious moments pass and we go back to our lives no worse for the experience.

For almost 20 million people in the United States, however, anxiety is an almost daily part of life. In fact, anxiety is probably the most common mental health problem, but is also very treatable.

Symptoms

While there are many forms of anxiety, including panic disorder, phobias and obsessive compulsive disorder, they all have a common feature of extreme fear often accompanied by changes in mood, behavior and physical symptoms.

In generalized anxiety disorder, people experience excessive worry and are unable to control this worry for many months at a time. This is often accompanied by feelings of depression and many people use alcohol and drugs to help relieve their anxiety. In addition, people with this disorder may also experience:

- Nervousness
- Tenseness
- Restlessness
- Irritability
- Difficulty sleeping
- Difficulty concentrating

Causes

There are many probable causes for generalized anxiety disorder, but it is usually associated with stress and chemical activity in the brain. People with generalized anxiety also report that family members have experienced anxiety.

Treatment

Fortunately, there are a number of treatments that can be very effective in treating generalized anxiety disorder. Most often it is treated with a combination of cognitive behavioral psychotherapy, behavioral psychotherapy and medication.

If you have been experiencing anxiety that does not seem to go away, or if you are constantly worrying about aspects of your life, you may be suffering from an anxiety disorder. Help is available, so please consult your primary care physician or Bayview Associates, a program of South Shore Mental Health, which as licensed psychologist, social workers and psychiatrists that can help. Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

"I hear what I want to hear". How would you know? This statement is commonly used by people who have not yet come to terms with their hearing loss. It is painful to hear it, because I know that they are years away from trying to correct their loss. Most people are unaware how an uncorrected hearing loss can affect their lives. The results of a recent survey of over 4000 hearing impaired people and their significant others have been published. Some of the highlights are as follows:

- People with untreated hearing loss register significantly higher levels of depression, anger and frustration, anxiety, and other negative emotions than do people with comparable hearing loss who use hearing aids.
- Nearly half of the hearing aid wearers surveyed reported improvement in their overall quality of life attributable to their use of hearing aids. More than 60% of the family members or close friends reported that hearing aids had improved the lives of users.

You cannot afford to ignore a hearing loss. Live your life to its fullest and be healthy! Now you go and spread the news! Steve

SUBUNGUAL HEMATOMA

Have you ever dropped anything heavy on your foot or had someone step on it, and noticed a purple to black color under the nail?

Trauma to the toe can cause a subungual hematoma. "Subungual" means under the nail and "hematoma" means bruise.

Trauma causes bleeding under the nail, which presents as a dark purple to black color under the nail. If the hematoma is small enough the body can absorb it, or you may see the dark spot grow out with the nail. Sometimes the hematoma is large enough that it may cause the nail to become loose. Often it is necessary to puncture the nail plate or to remove the entire nail.

If you have pain from trauma to the toe or notice a loose nail, see a qualified Podiatrist for treatment.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

North Quincy Girls Win First League Title

By CHRIS POISSON

After a weekend of celebration, the North Quincy girls' basketball team's festive feeling turned dismal Monday night.

Seven minutes into the first half against Abington, sophomore forward April Suprey injured her knee and did not return to the game, and it is uncertain when she'll be able to return to the hardwood. She was on her way for another big game with 4 points, 3 rebounds and a steal.

"I'm not sure about April," said head coach Doug MacFarlane on her condition. "If she's out, it will be tough to replace her."

It certainly will.

When Suprey went down, the Red Raiders (14-4) immediately felt the effects of the loss of their most dominant player in the paint, especially when they were already without sophomore center Kristen DiMattio, and with junior center Kahli Dearani still feeling the effects of the flu.

To make matters worse, senior Casey Ridge sustained a Charlie Horse above her knee in the first minute of the game. Although she later returned, the electrifying point guard was unable to penetrate and create any offense. She finished with a team-high 11 points, but had no assists.

Basketball

Without their clever playmaker and inside game, the Red Raiders had only one option left — the jump shot — and when the jumpers became jaded, they wound up scoring a season low in points in a 39-26 home loss to the Green Wave.

"Our inside game was nil and we had to depend on our outside game," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "It was one of those games where you live or die by the jump shot. We died by it."

Although Monday was a forgettable game, North Quincy's play last week will be remembered forever on Hancock Street as the team locked up its first Old Colony League championship in school history. And Suprey had a huge hand in that accomplishment.

complement.

In last Thursday's emotional 60-40 win over Taunton that clinched at least a share of the title, Suprey poured a game-high 16 points and pulled down 10 boards. The following night she tallied a team-high 17 points as North Quincy officially claimed the league crown with a 59-51 win over Plymouth South.

"That was very big," MacFarlane said. "The kids were really excited. Our goal in the preseason was to go for title and we got it. Now, we've changed our goals and we want to do some damage in the tournament."

First, North Quincy has to finish the regular season. Yesterday (Wednesday) it took on Randolph and tomorrow (Friday) night at 6 p.m. it hosts city rival Quincy. The Red Raiders would like nothing more than to rebound with a pair of wins to improve its position in the state tourney.

"I don't want to lose anymore," MacFarlane said. "If we can win these last two we'll have a higher seed."

LAKERS' POINT GUARD Aaron Gordon (left) and center Jason Hatch recently led their team to a 66-57 win over the Celtics to capture the gold medal in the Quincy Bullets' Intrasquad League Championship at Lincoln-Hancock School. Gordon poured in 24 points and Hatch added 10.

Lakers Win Gold Medal In Intrasquad League

Behind 24 points apiece from point guard Aaron Gordon and Stephen Kearns and 10 points from center Jason Hatch, the Lakers recently topped the Celtics, 66-57, to capture the gold medal in the Quincy Bullets' inaugural Intrasquad League Championship.

Composed of four teams — Lakers, Celtics, Timberwolves, Trailblazers — the Intrasquad League included all 38 players from the Quincy Bullets basketball program, which is a part of TILL (Toward Independent Living and Learning), a Dedham-based nonprofit group that helps developmentally disabled young adults.

The Bullets program has three teams: Quincy Bullets One, Quincy Lady Bullets and Quincy Bullets Two. The players, who range in ages from early 20s to late 30s, come from 13 different communities, with 17 residing in Quincy.

The Quincy Bullets compete independently with special education programs such as St. Collette's, Cardinal Cushing and South Shore ARC, as well as four tournaments a year, including the Massachusetts Special Olympics tournament in Worcester.

Occasionally, though, some less serious teams would cancel and that disappointed program director and coach William Ketchen, who is in his 16th year with the Bullets. "Years ago, we would have a game and no one else would show up," he said.

Tired of the inconsistency, Ketchen took matters in to his own hands and formed the Intrasquad League to feed the players' competitive juices. Held for nine weeks, the league met Friday nights at 6:30 at the Lincoln-Hancock School gym.

"This is it for them," Ketchen said. "These guys didn't have the opportunity to play organized sports. This isn't recreation time."

The coaches — Tom Mannix, Wayne Kennedy, Katie Owens — rotated from team to team throughout the season to reduce the chance for rivalries, and to "help everyone feel included so that we're pulling in one direction," Ketchen said.

The Quincy Bullets have won five Special Olympic state championships over the past seven years, each at the highest level of competition. Last year, they won three of four games to capture the silver medal in the Division 1 state tournament.

In their rookie season last year, the Lady Bullets won the Women's Division state championship. And the Bullets second team won consecutive Division 3 state championships in 1998 and 1999.

Quincy Boys Still Alive In State Tourney Bid

As bad as it shot — and we're talking low 30s here — the Quincy boys' basketball team somehow found itself in position to possibly steal a win from Bridgewater-Raynham last Friday night at home.

Down 41-25 with 8:28 left, Quincy had a chance for at least a six-point trip down the court when Bridgewater-Raynham committed a foul and then was tagged with a technical foul away from the ball, giving Quincy possession after the four free throws.

Amazingly, though, the cold front that had been hovering over the Presidents followed them to the charity stripe, where they clanked six straight freebies. Quincy never recovered from that golden opportunity and eventually fell, 66-49.

"That was the turning point," said head coach John Franceschini. "When that happens, you can't expect to beat a good team. Mentally, that catches up to you. And we really didn't have a good shooting night. That was the difference."

With three games left on the schedule, Quincy (7-10 overall, 4-9 OCL) will have to run the table to qualify for the state tournament. First up: A short bus ride to Hancock Street tomorrow (Friday) night at 7:30 to battle North Quincy in Round 2 of the city rivalry.

On Monday, the annual Quincy Invitational gets underway and Quincy will take on Revere in the second game. If it knocks off North Quincy and manages to beat Revere, Quincy will play either Milton or Stoughton the following day with the championship and, more importantly, a tourney bid on the line.

"We're alive going into the last weekend," Franceschini said. "We have to have a good shooting weekend. We'll see what happens. Bottom line is we have to win them all."

Quincy held an 11-10 lead over Bridgewater-Raynham with 9:20 left in the first half, but then it hit a drought that lasted longer than an NFL game. The Presidents hit just one field goal and one free throw for the rest of the half, as the Trojans outscored them, 29-3, for a 39-14 advantage at the break.

In the second half, Quincy didn't hit its first field goal until Centrella put one through the hoop with 11:46 left. In fact, it seemed like Centrella was the only one who could score, tallying 16 of the team's 25 second-half points.

Former Bruin Terry O'Reilly Lecture At Curry College March 6

Former Boston Bruins all-star and head coach Terry O'Reilly will give a lecture at Curry College's Alumni Recreation Center Tuesday, March 6 at 8 p.m.

The lecture is free and open to the public. O'Reilly will speak about numerous topics including his life experiences, leadership and his time in the National Hockey League.

O'Reilly enjoyed a 14-year career as a player with the Bruins. His hard work and leadership earned him two trips to the NHL All-Star game and honor of being named team captain. As a coach, he compiled a 115-86-26 record, never finishing lower than third place in the division.

Austrian Team Among Quincy Kiwanis Hockey Tournament Participants

All members are invited to attend. Financial reports, discussion and nominations for Board of Directors are among the topics for the meeting.

Quincy's Hern, Kelley Win Wrestling Crowns

Quincy High School junior wrestlers Joe Hern (152 pounds) and Scott Kelley (160) took home sectional championships over the weekend at Braintree High School. Ever more impressively, Quincy finished seventh out of 19 teams in Division 1 South.

Also placing in the top six of their weight class were senior Rory Lydon (215), who lost a tough match to Weymouth's state champ Bob Powell, to finish second, and junior Mike Murphy (119), who took home a third-place medal.

All four will wrestle at the Division 1 States Friday and Saturday at Weymouth South Intermediate School.

Hern, the No. 1 seed, displayed his sound mat skills in the championship. A first period "spladle" (splitcradle) off the takedown provided him with an early 5-0 lead, as he dominated throughout en route to an 8-0 triumph.

In the states, however, Hern (42-2) will face a more difficult task. Head coach Lou Venturelli anticipates Hern reaching the semifinals, but he will have a tough challenge against the Chelmsford wrestler, who won the Lowell Holiday Tournament. If he should prevail, he might possibly face the Lowell Sectional champ, who handed Hern one of his two losses this season.

"But he appears to be on top of his game right now as evidenced by the sectional final," Venturelli added.

For Kelley, who entered the sectionals as the No. 5 seed, the title is as good as it gets. After an opening win, Kelley squeaked out a one-point win over the No. 4 seed and then toppled the No. 1 seed due to his opponents "stalling" and defeated the No. 3 seed in the final, 11-3. "Scott saved the best for last and his aggressiveness paid off as the tournament progressed," Venturelli said. "He was awesome in the finals."

Other wrestlers scoring points for Quincy were Dan Dorsey, Bill Murphy, Ben Dutton, Greg Johnson and John Alves.

James Finn's 5 Goals Lead Lydon

James Finn blasted five goals and picked up an assist to lead Lydon's to a 13-9 win over Barry's Deli in recent Quincy Youth Hockey Mite Division play.

Victoria Virtue scored a hat trick and Christian Durham tallied two goals and two assists. Matthew Troy (assist), Mark Graham (assist) and Matthew McGuire added goals. Brendan Deasy picked up three assists and David O'Connell and Patrick Adducci each had one.

For Barry's Deli, Derek Murphy pocketed five goals, Kevin McDonough (assist) three goals and Nick Scibilio (assist) one. Vincent Cameron had an assist.

Michael Gates potted a hat trick to lift Doherty & White Ins. to a 4-3 win over Jay Cashman. Matt Rodriguez chipped in with the other goal. Max Kelly, Chris Baker and Leroy Wallace had assists.

For Jay Cashman, Jake Mullaney scored all three goals. Derek Graham had an assist.

Doran & Horrigan Ins. knocked off Hayes' Dream, 6-4, as Steve Brown (2 assists) and Tim Riordan each scored a pair of goals. Brendan Glynn and Brenna Morrissey added the other goals.

For Hayes' Dream, Mike Galloto scored two goals and Madam Nazzaro and Kevin Magoon had one apiece. Trevor McCarthy and Jimmy Vialpando had assists.

Kevin Keith tallied five points (hat trick, 2 assists) to power Bruce Ayers Club to a 13-6 win over Kiley Real Estate. Matthew Brundige (3 assists), Mark Glynn (2 assists) and Evan Verhault each deposited two goals. Joseph Alibrandi (assist), Brendan Kilcullen, Owen Kilcullen and Malcom Kelly also found the cage. Ryan O'Connell had an assist.

For Kiley Real Estate, Shawn Dowling scored two goals. John Jones, Chris Mariano, Joe Bertucci and Tom Ridge each scored one. Matt Cardarelli, Ned Gould, Paul Gould and Kevin Therrien had assists.

Brian Bowe and Brian Furey each scored two goals to propel Quincy Sheet Metal to an 8-5 win over Paul Harold Club. Connor Flaherty (assist), Nick Furey (assist), Wayne Milford and Andrew Stacy also scored. Justin Lawless had two assists and Brian Grasselli one.

For Paul Harold Club, Zack Helfrich recorded a hat trick and Matt Sullivan (assist) and Ryan Gorman also lit the lamp. Seamus McKenna picked up two assists.

Tapper, Malone Pace Bernie's

Dave Tapper (assist) and Nick Masone each potted a pair of goals to lead Bernie's General Store to a 6-5 win over Mike Morrissey in recent Quincy Youth Hockey Pee Wee Division play.

Steve Bythrow (2 assists) and Mike Barter also found the back of the net. Meg Shea picked up two assists and Sam Shaw had one.

For Mike Morrissey, Brian Gilligan scored a hat trick. Andrew Donovan and Frank Sorrento added the other goals. Jeff Bailey, Evan Harrington, Mike Maxey and Joe Fontana had assists.

Alex Smith tallied two goals and an assist in Wood Commercial Painting's 5-1 win over Colonial Federal Savings Bank. Matt Tobin (assist), Joe Ferris and Tim Lally also scored. Paul Fasoli and Andrew Potter had assists.

For Colonial Federal Savings Bank, Joe Fitzpatrick scored with an assist from Joe Canavan.

Coffee Break Café beat Westminster Dodge, 4-2. Bryan Gilligan, Zack Sloane, Ian McRae and Luca Ledonne scored. Mike MacPherson had two assists and Andrew Donovan, Nick Masone and Joe Connelly each had one.

For Westminster Dodge, Jim Fitzpatrick (assist) and Chris Garvey scored. Rob DeAngelis and Glen Gibbons had assists.

Squirt A's District 3 Champs; Qualify For State Tournament

The Quincy Squirt A travel hockey team recently defeated the Mohawks, 6-2, at Quincy Youth Arena to capture the District 3 championship and qualify for the State Tournament March 9-11 in Springfield.

Johnny McInnis powered the Wolfpack with four goals and Brian Sullivan and Teddy Walsh each added one. Kenny Patey picked up a pair of assists, while Ricky Penzo, Stephen Barresi, Walsh and McInnis each notched one.

Forwards Casey Conley,

Youth Hockey

Lammy Papalambros, Mike Griffin and Glenn Peterson also played well.

In the opening game of the State Playdowns, McInnis netted a pair of goals and dished out three assists to lead the Wolfpack to a 5-1 win over Norwood. Chris Brown, Walsh (assist) and Sullivan also found the back of the net.

In the second game, goalies Barresi and Jeff Giordani backboned Quincy to a 3-0 win over Wellesley. Brown potted two goals and Walsh scored the other. Kyle Tobin and McInnis each had an assist.

Defensively, captain Mike Leone, Matt Furey, Zac Deegan, Kevin Lewis, Patey and Penzo played well.

Squirt C's Edge Needham For District 3 Championship

The Quincy Squirt C travel hockey team recently pulled out a 3-2 win over Needham to win the District 3 championship and qualify for the State Tournament in March.

Trailing 2-0 at the end of one period, Quincy scored a goal in the middle frame and a pair in the third for the come-from-behind victory.

Quincy reached the finals with wins over the Mohawks (5-3), Canton (10-0) and a 4-3 double overtime thriller against Milton.

Team members are: Jason Laura, Justin Laura, Andrew Bythrow, Brendan

Mite B's Bow To Brookline

The Quincy Mite B travel hockey team fell to Brookline, 3-2, last Saturday at the Cleveland Circle MDC Rink in Boston.

Quincy came out strong with great forechecking and kept Brookline bottled up in its own end. The Brookline goalie came up big with numerous saves and his team scored a goal for a 1-0 lead after the first period.

In the second, Quincy continued to play solid two-way hockey which led to a goal by Timothy Young. Young received a pass in the slot and, with his head up, wristed a hard shot into the corner of the net to tie the game.

Halfway through the final frame, Brookline scored for a 2-1 lead. Less than two minutes later, Quincy knotted the game up when Matt Troy intercepted a pass, skated down the ice, faked the goalie and beat him with a backhand.

Momentum appeared to be on Quincy's side, but less than seven minutes later Brookline scored the go-ahead goal. Not conceding defeat, Quincy pressed the attack and had many good scoring chances.

With less than a minute to go, Quincy pulled goalie Tom Ridge, who played a strong game, for the extra skater. Quincy missed an open net with 15 second left and went home knowing it had missed a great chance to tie the game.

Mite A's Double Up Hyde Park

The Quincy Mite A travel hockey team recently defeated Hyde Park, 4-2, behind the solid goaltending of Derek Murphy.

Murphy, who filled in as the goalie, robbed a frustrated Hyde Park team with several glove saves to keep his team ahead.

Brian Bowe put Quincy on the board in the first period with an assist from Seamus McKenna. Matthew Rodriguez scored the next two goals, both assisted by Kevin Magoon. McKenna netted the final goal.

Hat Tricks For Cronin, Campbell

Mike Cronin (2 assists) and Brian Campbell (assist) each notched a hat trick as Cotter Club defeated the Quincy Sun, 11-1, in recent Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt Division play.

Joe Vilpando (assist) scored two goals, while Matt Grady (2 assists), Zack Deegan (assist) and Justin Laura (assist) each had one. Steve McNally picked up two assists and Jason Laura and Billy Connors had one apiece.

For the Quincy Sun, John Sessions scored with assists from Steve Markarian and Mark Gilbody.

Richard Shea scored a hat trick to power Local #102 IBEW to a 4-3 win over Quincy Car Wash. Frankie Florie added the other goal. Mike Prioli, Mason Mayberry and Brian Marks had assists.

For Quincy Car Wash, Mike Leone netted two goals and Anthony Alibrandi one. Scott Richardson had an assist.

Burgin Platner Hurley Ins. topped Keohane's, 7-4, as John McInnis scored two goals and had an assist. SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A glance at the history of our civilization reveals the fact that many of those who have contributed most toward its advancement have come up through great difficulties. We are reminded of:

Homer, blind, living on crumbs, leading the company of poets;
Milton, blind, living in hell, writing Paradise Lost;

Beethoven, deaf, yet giving to the world some of its greatest music;

Helen Keller, blind and deaf, yet rising to heights of greatness unequalled by any other under such handicaps. She once said: "I knew there would be obstacles in the way, but I was eager to overcome them. Every one who wishes to gain true knowledge must climb the hill of difficulty alone."

What gave us John Huss, Martin Luther, John Wesley, Cromwell, George Washington, Lincoln, Livingston, William Booth, Jane Adams, Booker T. Washington and hundreds of others? The answer is: Persecution, Slavery, City Slums, Dark Continents, Civil Wars, Ignorance, Hard Places - DIFFICULTIES...

New Rules Encourage Work Efforts Of People With Disabilities

By LAURIE ZASTROW

Social Security announced several new rules, effective Jan. 1, that will allow more persons with disabilities to test their ability to work without fear of losing their cash benefits and important health care coverage.

The first new rule increases the amount of earnings considered to be substantial gainful activity (SGA) from $700 to $740 a month and still remain eligible for benefits.

Social Security uses the term "substantial gainful activity" to determine if work is substantial enough to make a person ineligible for benefits. The current monthly SGA earnings limit will be automatically adjusted annually based on increases in the national average wage index. This amount applies to people with disabilities other than blindness.

The second new rule affects the trial work period (TWP) which allows disability beneficiaries to test their ability to work for at least nine months. During the TWP, beneficiaries may earn any amount and receive Social Security disability benefits. The rule increases the current amount from $200 to $530 a month and links annual changes to increases in the national average wage index.

After completion of nine TWP months, the SGA level is used to determine whether earnings are substantial or not. If earnings fall below the SGA level, benefits generally continue. If earnings are higher than the SGA level, cash benefits are normally suspended while medical benefits continue.

The third and final rule allows for more income to be excluded when a student who receives Supplemental Security Income (SSI) returns to work. The new rule increases the monthly excluded amount from $400 of earned income to $1,290 a month and the maximum yearly amount from $1,620 to $5,200. This yearly exclusion roughly corresponds to what a student may realistically earn in part-time or summer employment. Both amounts will be automatically adjusted annually based on increases in the cost-of-living index.

Quincy To Host Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament

Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball has been announced as the host of the 2001 14-Year Old Babe Ruth Baseball Northeast Regional Tournament to be held Aug. 4-11 at Adams Field in Merrimont Park.

The tournament will feature eight of the best 14-year-old Babe Ruth teams in New England, with a team from Quincy, eastern Massachusetts, western Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut,

New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine. A round-robin style of elimination, each team will be guaranteed a minimum of three games.

"This regional tournament will bring the finest young baseball players in New England to Adams Field," said Dick Lombardi, President of Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball League. "It is a chance for our young players to challenge the best and our fans will get a chance to see the best young talent in the region."

The Quincy Babe Ruth League is seeking to host the 2003 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth National World Series. A letter of support from Mayor James Sheets and the Quincy Park Department has been filed with the National Babe Ruth offices and indications are that Quincy is the front-runner to host the event.

For those interested in volunteering to support the 2001

Regional Tournament or the 2003 World Series, contact Lombardi at (617) 479-5724 or Peter Williams at (617) 479-4850.

"Through the support of our volunteers, guests to Quincy will enjoy a great event and some great baseball," said Williams, Vice President of Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball. "Hopefully, the regional tournament will be the impetus to Quincy getting a chance to host a National World Series."

"The regional tournament will allow Quincy to showcase the finest amateur baseball field in New England at Adams Field," said Thomas Koch, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments. "I look forward to working with Quincy Babe Ruth Baseball in hosting a fine regional tournament and I hope we have the opportunity to host a National World Series."

Neighborhood Housing Services Homebuyer's Workshop Feb. 24

Neighborhood Housing Services, an MHFA- and HUD-approved First Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold a free informational First Time Homebuyer's workshop in partnership with Consolidated Mortgage Services Saturday, Feb. 24.

The informational workshop will be held at the Roche Brothers Supermarket, second floor community room, 101 Falls Blvd., Quincy. The workshop will begin at 2p.m. and continue until 4:30 p.m. Agenda will be comprehensive as well as individualized. The focus will be on different aspects of the homebuying process, including how to locate a property within budget, how to make an offer and determining the best mortgage program.

Each participant will have the opportunity to meet individually with a mortgage professional from Consolidated

Mortgage Services. Participants will learn how they can purchase property with little or no money and how to best utilize local down payment and closing costs grants now available across the South Shore. Advanced registration is required and space is limited. For more information or to register, contact Carol Nemet at Consolidated Mortgage Services at (617) 479-1971, ext. 225.

clients at Father Bill's Place are working full-time," Yawzinski told councillors and audience members.

Other supporters of inclusionary zoning were Rosemary Wahlberg, a long-time civic leader and former executive director of QCAP; Joseph Finn, former executive director of Father Bill's Place; and Jack Mather, current director of the Quincy Housing Authority.

"I applaud the work of this committee," Mather said, adding that he wished other communities would follow Quincy's lead on the issue.

City residents spoke in favor of the proposal as well, including Ann Yeomans, also a leader of the GBIO, and Janet Poole, both of Winthrop Ave.

"It's nice to think of Quincy as a city which includes people," said Poole. "We need to think about families now in Quincy."

Yeomans detailed for councillors the suggested changes in the GBIO version of the ordinance. One significant change, Yeomans said, was making the ordinance apply to all developments in the city and not just the largest PUD proposals permitted by the City Council. "A unit here or there makes a difference," Yeomans said.

Another suggested GBIO change was to expand the Affordable Housing Committee which would oversee the Affordable Housing Trust to include: one person appointed by the mayor; three people appointed by the City Council; one banker, one developer; and five additional members from Quincy's community and faith-based organizations for a total of 11 members.

The GBIO also favors replacing the existing income eligibility language to read "sixty-five percent of the median income of households in the Boston Primary Metropolitan Statistical Area" as opposed to the current "80 percent of the median income of households at or below 80 percent of the Norfolk County median income" because it considers the former a standard guide for most federal programs on inclusionary zoning.

Principal Planner Angelito Santos addressed the committee and said inclusionary zoning also means incentive zoning, which means that "in return for contributing to the creation of affordable housing units, a developer is given permission to build more than they would 'by right.'"

Similar ordinances, Santos said, have worked successfully in communities such as Boston, Brookline, Cambridge, Lexington, Newton, and Somerville.

"This was just an amazing response," said Ward 1

CITY COUNCIL CHAMBERS were crowded Monday night as residents, clergy, and community leaders voiced their support of an inclusionary zoning ordinance which would set aside 10 percent of new developments for affordable housing, or the cash or land equivalent.

(Quincy Sun photo)

Councillor and Housing Committee Chairman Gregory Hanley, who submitted the draft ordinance in the form of a resolve Dec. 18 working closely with the city's Planning Department.

Although changes and recommendations were suggested, including the strengthened draft of the GBIO, no one spoke in opposition at the public hearing.

The next step in the process will be today (Thursday) when Mayor James Sheets is scheduled to meet with the developers themselves in an effort to gather their perspective on the matter and work toward a consensus.

"We'd like very much for the developers to concur with the ordinance," said Sheets, who will schedule a follow-up meeting the week of the Feb. 26.

Sheets, who said developers will receive both the ordinance written by the Planning Department and the GBIO version, said one possible area of disagreement may be the dollar amount of the contribution developers must make to the escrow account for affordable housing. "That's really the issue," said Sheets.

Another important step in the consensus building efforts will be a Feb. 28 meeting of the city's Fair Housing Committee, led by Chairwoman Joan Pritchard, which will have access to the minutes from Monday night's meeting.

Hanley said that once a consensus was formed, the ordinance would go to the solicitor's office, the Ordinance Committee, and finally the full council for passage. Although hopeful, Hanley urged those in attendance to also voice their support at future meetings.

"Without your participation, this will fall by the wayside," warned Hanley.

Still, the mood of the meeting was overwhelmingly positive, as witnessed by the comments of Council President Paul Harold, who formed the Housing Committee last year and was in attendance at the meeting.

"There was an impressive cross-section of religious, business, and community leaders represented here tonight," Harold said. "It wasn't just one sector or neighborhood or ward, and that's what moves public policy."

In the past year, the average price of a Quincy home has risen 24 percent, from $185,500 to $230,000.

Under affordable housing guidelines, unit rentals cannot exceed 30 percent of monthly income.

Quincy's housing stock is currently less than the 10 percent required to avoid comprehensive permits issued by the state which circumvent local oversight.

D'Amico Takes Stand Against Quarry Hills Apartment Complex

By CRAIG SALTERS

Citing resident concerns over density, traffic, and drainage, Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said he would not support the proposed construction of a 332-unit apartment complex on roughly 16 acres off Ricciotti Drive, land originally intended as part of the soon-to-be-completed Quarry Hills Golf Course.

"My recommendation will be to vote it down," D'Amico told The Sun before a Tuesday night public address to the Quarry Hills Advisory Committee at the Ward 4 Community Center, adding that he would also speak in opposition to the proposal at a meeting of the Planning Board Wednesday night.

MICHAEL D'AMICO

That apartment project is not a positive for the ward.

"That apartment project is not a positive for the ward and should not move forward," D'Amico said of proposal put forth by the Texas-based Finger Companies.

Two particular concerns, D'Amico said, were a controversial easement on Malvesti Way and lack of a comprehensive traffic study for such a development.

The purpose of the remarks Tuesday, D'Amico said, would be two-fold: to express opposition to the apartment complex and to reiterate his continued support for the overall Quarry Hills Golf Course project, expected to open sometime next year.

"I believe the Quarry Hills Golf Project to be the most positive initiative to come to Ward 4 in decades," said D'Amico, citing not only the golf course itself but the capping of landfills and the recreational fields for public use. "The project has cost Quincy taxpayers nothing while preserving hundreds of acres of open space."

The proposed apartments have come under fire recently, most notably by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond, because the land

Sheets Says Park Land Still Possibility

'Old QHS Not Answer To New'

By CRAIG SALTERS

The question of whether to renovate the current Quincy High School into the new Quincy high school is not a question of can it be done but should it be done, said Mayor James Sheets.

And the answer, to the mayor's thinking, is no.

"Renovation can occur but it is not, in my opinion, the best academic or social solution for the school," Sheets told The Sun Tuesday. "The real issue is that it would take a minimum of two years to renovate and could take longer. And during that time, where do you educate those students?"

Sheets recalled the experience with "double sessions" during the construction of an addition to North Quincy High School years earlier, saying running two programs in one school disrupted student life for both schools and was not a suitable alternative.

"We got through it," Sheets remembered, "but we lost a good academic solution."

In addition, the mayor asked proponents of renovation to be "very cautious" in a plan (which, Sheets said, could leave the school with a very limited footprint and parking problems).

Sheets also responded to those who would declare parkland off-limits for the new high school, saying that it simply could not be done.

"Every site has to be considered," Sheets said. "We wanted to clean up the site off Quincy Avenue and build

No Place For Hate Campaign Begins Feb. 27

The year-long No Place For Hate campaign sponsored by the city's Human Rights Commission will kick-off Tuesday, Feb. 27 at 5:45 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall as Mayor James Sheets reads a proclamation declaring the day No Place For Hate Day in Quincy.

The event, which will also include Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating as well as city officials and community leaders, will be the first in a series of commission efforts to end bias and discrimination in the city of Quincy, said Nancy McDonald, chairwoman of the Human Rights Commission.

"We're all very excited," said McDonald, who predicted a large crowd for the occasion. "It's time we band together to stamp out intolerance in Quincy."

The second event in the series, said McDonald, will be Sunday, March 25 at The United First Parish Church in Quincy Square sponsored by the church and its minister, the Rev. Sheldon Bennett.

The mayor's reading of the official proclamation Feb. 27 will be incorporated into what is the regular monthly meeting of the Human Rights Commission.

The Commission recently sponsored its annual Martin Luther King Jr. Celebration breakfast held at the VFW Bryan Post, attended by over 350 people.

Ward 4 Candidate Opposes WQ Apartment Complex

Bryan Connolly, candidate for Ward 4 City Councillor, announced Tuesday that he is opposed to the 332-unit apartment complex in West Quincy proposed by the Finger Companies.

"Ward 4 residents have made it extremely clear that the most appropriate use for this site would be open space rather than a large-scale apartment complex," Connolly said. "An apartment complex of this magnitude would be out of character with the surrounding neighborhoods and the community as a whole."

Connolly said a Feb. 15 meeting at the Ward 4 Community Center was attended by roughly 50 Ward 4 residents and that opposition to The Finger Companies' project was "overwhelming."

A show of hands opposing the current proposal and requesting that the site be used as open space was nearly unanimous, Connolly said.

"The voice of the community on this issue could not be clearer," Connolly said. "This proposal would only exacerbate an already troubling traffic situation in Ward 4 and add further congestion to the area as a whole."

The Finger Companies, based in Texas, seeks a special permit to construct a 332-unit apartment complex overlooking the Quarry Hills Golf Course. A portion of the land, the 16-acre "Shea Property" off of Ricciutti Drive, is owned by Quarry Hills Associates, developers of the golf course project.

Ward 4 Neighborhood Meeting

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico has scheduled a neighborhood meeting for Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the following:

- Update on Quarry Hills Golf Course -- Building and opening schedules.
- Update on proposed 332 apartments at Quarry Hills.
- Traffic issues on Crescent St. and Hall Place.
- Update from Community Police Department.

Raymondi Presents Check From Mitigation Fund $1,000 Donation To Help Care For Dogs, Cats At Animal Shelter

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi recently donated $1,000 of ward mitigation funds to Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. to assist in its efforts caring for city dogs and cats.

"We need to be very sensitive to animal control issues," said Raymondi, adding that the "healthier and more humane" treatment of animals was a concern not only for his ward but city-wide.

The Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. is a non-profit, all-volunteer organization which began in November of 1998 and works in the same building as the city's office of Animal Control on Broad St. The organization provides veterinary care, food, and shelter to the animals on a budget of roughly $70,000 per year.

"It's really a tremendous burden they undertake," Raymondi said.

Donald Conboy, animal control officer for the city, lauded both Raymondi's concern for animals and the assistance of the 50-plus volunteers with whom he works closely.

"We went from a 'kill' shelter to a 'no-kill' shelter," said Conboy, explaining that some animals are still put down for health or public safety reasons but never for reasons of space. "We've now had dogs for nine months or more; they all get adopted. That would have been impossible without the hard work of the volunteers."

Accepting the $1,000 check from Raymondi was Bradford Howard, past president of Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc., who said he was as pleased as he was surprised by the "out-of-the-blue" donation.

"On behalf of the volunteers of the Quincy Animal Shelter and the animals we care for, we're very grateful to Councillor Raymondi for this contribution," said Howard.

Martha Dula, current president of the group, was out of town and unable to attend the presentation.

Howard, who estimated that the shelter had placed over 600 cats and dogs since November of 1998, praised the volunteers, some of whom donate a few hours a week and some of whom are there daily.

"They're fantastic," said Howard, who added those wishing more information on becoming a volunteer or making a contribution could call (617) 376-1349, with all calls returned.

The group will also sponsor an Animal Awareness Day Saturday, March 31 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd. where residents can brush up on city regulations concerning pets, pick up flyers from such groups as the MSPCA or Animal Rescue League, and learn the importance of the spaying or neutering of pets.

Kathleen Hefner, a Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. co-director along with Sandra Morse and Wendy Brown, said adult volunteers can donate time in as little as two two-hour shifts, doing everything from walking the dogs to feeding the animals to tackling the ever-present loads of laundry.

All the animals, Hefner said, are spayed or neutered (or given a pre-paid certificate for the appropriate time), given their age-appropriate shots, and checked weekly by volunteer veterinarians from Veterinary Centers of America (VCA) of the South Shore.

Hefner thanked VCA of the South Shore, as well as generous benefactors such as Kristi Henriksen, owner of Siro's Restaurant, for their efforts at the shelter, which placed 25 cats and 17 dogs last month alone.

The shelter, which can hold up to 12 dogs and 35 cats, currently has eight dogs and 15 cats.

WARD 2 COUNCILLOR Daniel Raymondi (left) recently presented $1,000 in ward mitigation funds to the volunteer efforts of the Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. Accepting on behalf of the organization was Bradford Howard, a past president, here joined by Animal Control Officer Donald Conboy. (Quincy Sun photos)

A RECENT CONTRIBUTION of $1,000 to the Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc., will make possible more successful adoptions like that of T.J., a five-year old male Australian Shepherd with a blue merle coat. Joining T.J. outside the shelter are, from left: Bradford Howard, past president and current member of the Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc.; Animal Control Officer Donald Conboy; and Assistant Animal Control Officer Bruce DiBella.

Review Sites For New QHS

Editor, The Quincy Sun: Citizens of Quincy, please speak out and be heard. With the Mayor's Building Needs Task Force once again undertaking a comprehensive analysis to determine the best location for constructing a new Quincy High School, now is your opportunity to speak out and ensure that the best location is selected. Thus far the Task Force has demonstrated itself open to ideas, thoughtful in its process, and inclusive with all interested parties.

Unfortunately, with the list of prospective sites winnowed to five, the logical, safest, most convenient, and cost effective locations are being challenged by two sites that should never have been considered.

The two sites that do not deserve further consideration are Faxon Park and Pageant Field in Merry Mount Park. These two parklands were donated by wealthy benefactors (The Faxon and Adams families, respectively) for the benefit of all, as recreational land, into perpetuity. Think about it: if the Adams or Faxon families had wished their largesse to be used as school land, they would have decided then as such. With tremendous foresight, however, they recognized the need for parkland in a congested city and acted to preserve these parcels. Today, they are the crown jewels of the city's park system. For over 100 years every succeeding mayoral administration has recognized the value of these parks and prevented numerous attempts to destroy or build upon them.

Now, amazingly at a time when the rallying cry from city residents and politicians alike is to preserve open space and beautify our limited number of parks, here we are seriously debating destroying Faxon Park or Pageant Field forever. Fool yourself not, build in either one and it's gone forever. Parking lots and additional buildings will follow as sure as the sun rises every day.

Let's examine the facts and you make the choice. Parkland is limited in this city. The vast majority of residents in this city want to preserve open space parkland. We can't produce new land — build on this land and it's gone. Faxon Park is isolated at the south end of the City in a congested residential neighborhood. Its primary access is Kendrick/Faxon Park Road, a two-lane traffic bottleneck every morning and evening. Pageant Field is part of the Merry Mount Park complex — a beautiful park used by many.

The three logical choices — adjacent to the existing Quincy High School, the DPW site behind the police station, or the Koch Recreational Area adjacent to Adams Field — are all centrally located on wide, four-lane roads. They are not in residential neighborhoods. They are accessible by public transportation, near the new library, and within walking distance to many existing ball fields. In addition, the costly infrastructure (water, sewer, electric) is already present at these sites. Clearly, the cost to build on these sites would be significantly less than the rocky, hilly, undeveloped Faxon Park site.

Please be clear on this point: The Task Force's directive is to select the best location for a new high school. Location — meaning cost, accessibility, and safety. For me then, the choice is clear. Cost, accessibility, a central location, the least disruption to the city and its residents, traffic flow, existing ball fields, and infrastructure all point to the current high school site as the number one choice for the new high school. The DPW site is second and the Koch site is third.

What do you think? Call or write a Task Force member, attend a meeting on Tuesday nights at City Hall, and help them select the best location.

Bigger Mayoral, Council Pay Checks

The mayor and city councillors are now taking home bigger pay checks.

Mayor James Sheets's salary is now $95,000 and the councillors' $17,500. That's pay raises of $20,000 for His Honor and just under $5,000 ($4,893) for the nine councillors. The increases went into effect in January.

Frank McCauley, now chairman of the City Council Finance Committee, never got close to the $95,000 when he was mayor but he thinks that figure is appropriate these days.

McCauley, whose own top salary as mayor was $55,000 in 1989, thinks the $95,000 Sheets is now drawing "is fair in today's market."

"It is commensurate with that of mayors in other cities," he says.

And adds: "He is the chief executive running what is like a corporation with a $183 million budget."

The salary of Quincy mayors for years was under $10,000. Amelio Della Chiesa and James McIntyre got to the $10,000 mark during their administrations in the late 1950s-1960s. Councillors' pay then was $1,500.

"But they were part-time mayors, as were those before them," McCauley notes.

Della Chiesa was a state representative while mayor and McIntyre a state senator.

The city's first full-time mayor was Walter Hannon, elected in 1971. His salary jumped to $25,000. And the council's pay went to $3,000.

All of Quincy's mayors since -- Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, McCauley and Sheets -- have been full-time mayors.

The City Council's new salary was originally proposed as $19,500 but McCauley had it amended to $17,500.

"I think that's fair," he says. "The council hasn't had a raise in a number of years."

The councillors also got a $200 boost in their monthly expenses account to $400.

McCauley, who has long had a reputation as the Jack Benny of Quincy politics when it comes to spending money -- his own or the city's -- apparently also doesn't play favorites.

He cut his own $200 expense account increase out of the budget.

"I just couldn't justify the extra $200 for myself," he says.

He also cut out his own $1,500 allowance for postage that councillors at-large receive. Ward councillors are allowed $7,800 because they have more mailings to constituents.

"I'm not mailing out $1,500 in postage," says McCauley. "So why take it? I'm the conservative guy and sometimes you have to bite the bullet yourself."

McCauley says he doesn't need the $1,500 because he doesn't send out mailings.

"I don't even have City Council stationery. If I am sending a letter to an individual, I use plain ordinary stationery and put the words City Council at the top."

And, his wife, Sandra, types the letter.

He feels he doesn't have to bother with bulk mailings to constituents.

He lets them know where he stands on issues, he says, through statements in the press and radio, and at the city council meetings which are also covered on cable television.

And it's not very difficult to see just where he stands. On any issue.

LOOKS LIKE A good race for the Ward 5 City Council seat is shaping up.

James Mullaney, Wollaston CPA who is active in the community, will be making his first run for elective office.

"I am definitely running -- not just thinking about it," he says.

And apparently he would like to get off to an early campaign start.

He was at City Hall the other day to pick up the necessary papers for form a campaign committee. But was told they won't be available until May.

Mullaney is president of Quincy 2000, a member of the Quincy Medical Center Foundation board, treasurer of Quincy Community Access Television, treasurer Quincy Elder Housing Corp. which is developing Squantum Gardens, and an active member of the Quincy Business Council.

He says he is not running to challenge incumbent Steve Durkin. He's running because of concerns he has for the city. He feels the city could be getting into a financial rut.

"I think we have to slow down the spending and do a little belt tightening," he says. "It's okay to spend for what the people need and want. But there are times when you have to say no, like a good parent does."

He cites increased taxes.

"Taxes are going to keep going up if nothing is done to curb the spending."

And, if Doug Gutro, past president of the Ward 5 Association, gets into the race it will mean a preliminary election in September.

Gutro has said he is "giving serious consideration to running" and is in the process of organizing a campaign committee. He'll make a final decision in March.

AN APPRECIATION NIGHT for Nick Barbadoro, who retired in January as Norfolk County Clerk of Courts, is set for Thursday, March 1, 6 p.m. to midnight at the Quincy Neighborhood Club, Glendale Rd.

Barbadoro served 35 years in the County Clerk's Office, the last 19 as the head man. Prior to that he was a practicing attorney in Quincy.

The Appreciation Night -- a deserving tribute -- is being held by family and friends. Among those attending will be Chief Justice William Young of the U.S. District Court as well as other judges, lawyers, colleagues and friends.

Tickets are $50 and should be made payable to "Nick Barbadoro Night," and sent to 25 Harness Lane, Braintree, MA 02184.

Or, call Paul Barbadoro at 781-848-9610.

Nick is like an old fire horse. They don't completely retire. He's volunteering two days a week at the Superior Courthouse assisting on cases as a conciliator.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A postcard view of the last working farm in Quincy. Starting in the early 1900's Timothy Dennehy and his son, Daniel, operated this dairy farm for over 40 years. Their home and barn buildings were on London Avenue in Montclair. The farm covered about eight acres lying south of West Squantum Street near the city's border with Milton. They delivered milk throughout Quincy and Milton, and Daniel Dennehy took the time to serve as Quincy city councillor for two years in the early 1930's. Perhaps he wanted to change some city regulations because he later was cited by the city for maintaining a swine on his farm. In 1950 the property was sold to Wollaston developer Chauncey Luce who named the area Green Acres and built 50 houses there. The postcard was produced by E.E. Hoxie, an amateur photographer who lived on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Agrees With QHS Task Force Vote

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like to thank the current task force for their Feb. 8 vote to eliminate the possibility of renovating Quincy High School in lieu of a new high school. After attending the meeting and listening to a few who believed that there was a sector of the city who supported renovation over a new building, it was comforting to hear that our children would not have their education disrupted by that plan.

I have attended many meetings regarding a new high school and have only heard a handful who supported renovation. The overwhelming majority of those who spoke supported a new high school. The issue was where the new site would be.

It is not as though renovation wasn't considered. It is not educationally sound to have renovations done while our children are in attendance or have double sessions. It is not in the best interest to separate a particular school and bus them to one or more different buildings. Which will also affect the school they are transferred to. Not only is this educationally unsound, but it is socially disruptive to children and neighborhoods.

The children of Quincy will not be faced with all these problems if a new high school is built. A new high school will allow a smooth transition for all these children of Quincy High School. Central Middle School and Sterling. The current plan allows the children of these schools to remain together as a community while their new school is built and the current Quincy High and Sterling are renovated. They will not be exposed to the dangers of renovations being made while the children are in attendance. This seems to be a sound educational plan.

At some point the city will have to absorb the cost of building a new high school. The time is now. Let's get the job done. The Department of Education's preference is to reuse and renovate existing buildings. Central Middle School has to go. The current Quincy High School is an existing building that will be reused as a beautifully renovated Central Middle School. Allow our children to compete educationally and give them the resources to do so. Don't allow Quincy to be left behind.

The Military And Telling The Truth

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

About a week ago, the nuclear submarine, USS Greenville, rammed into a Japanese fishing boat off Honolulu, Hawaii, in a bizarre accident that killed nine fishermen.

In a stunning announcement the Navy at first stated there was no damage to the sub, then later decided to tell the truth and admitted there was damage; however, what amazed me was the fact that civilians were operating two vital sections of the submarine -- the sonar and the periscope.

A key sailor operates the sonar which can tell what is near them and the periscope is usually raised and lowered by the captain's first officer. If the captain turned the periscope 180 degrees, he would have seen the fishing boat.

Now the falsehoods start. The Navy stated Feb. 14 that they were considering charging Capt. Waddle with criminal neglect, when in fact, senior officers are to blame for allowing civilians to be in position to operate the submarine. For this to occur Capt. Waddle had to be told by the Chief of Naval Operations with the approval of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to allow this procedure to proceed. Capt. Waddle will now be the scapegoat.

Doesn't anyone in the military every tell the truth anymore?

Quincy's Yesterdays

Hospital Losing $4 A Day

By PAUL HAROLD

Dr. Joseph Leone, director of the Quincy City Hospital told members of the Lions Club meeting at the Fox and Hounds Restaurant that the hospital was losing $4 a day. He noted the average cost of a patient stay was $25.40 a day, but the hospital was bringing in a little more than $20 a day per patient.

He said, however, that the Quincy hospital's losses were better than most city hospitals in the state. The deficit for 1956 was $343,000, $14,000 less than the year before.

Dr. Leone also spoke of the overcrowding at the hospital with a wait 28-29 day for some elective surgeries. He said the city was facing a dilemma over tax dollars. "As long as we are building schools we cannot build a hospital, you can depend on that," he said.

WORLD PRAYER DAY IN CITY

Women from 28 of the city's Protestant churches celebrated World Prayer Day in conjunction with women around the world. Founded in 1887, the prayer day was fixed on the first Friday of Lent in 1920. Mrs. Walter Main of Christ Church was the general chairman. Committee members included Mrs. James Neil of Quincy Point Congregational, Mrs. Fred Gullickson of the Adams Shore Community Church, Mrs. Ernest Blair of Wollaston Baptist and Mrs. Harry Dawson of the First Church of Squantum.

Three prayer services were held across the city, at the First Church of Squantum, St. Paul's Methodist Church and at Bethany Congregational Church where Mrs. Norman Nash, wife of the Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts, presided.

The prayer day exhibit entitled "One Flock, One Shepherd" on display in the Granite Trust windows was made by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tucker.

RED CROSS GOAL $55,000

Edmund Genereau, general chairman for the Quincy Red Cross annual campaign, set the 1956 goal at $55,000, $4,500 over the previous year.

He noted 1955 was the worst year for disasters in the history of the country, with the Red Cross responding to numerous floods in New England. The new monies in Quincy would be used to expand the water safety program and home service counseling and financial assistance to servicemen and their families.

The annual fund-raising campaign coincided with the 75th anniversary of the founding of the Red Cross by Clara Barton.

QUINCY-ISMS

The city council's finance committee voted the first monies to hire an architect for the new Atlantic Junior High School. . . The Quincy Health Department reminded parents to sign consent forms for polio shots. . . Patrolman Joseph Duffy radioed an alarm when he saw smoke coming from the basement at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church. It was a false alarm. Palms were being burned for distribution as ashes on Ash Wednesday. Duffy's concern was in part in response to a fire that destroyed Most Blessed Sacrament Church a few months earlier. . . The Mass. House of Representatives approved a bill transferring the Hall Place Cemetery to the city. . . City Manager Donald Blatt included a provision in the budget for a part-time city historian at a salary of $3,000. The position was for historian and author William Edwards. . . The state Senate killed a bill that would have created a city comptroller, combining the auditor's job and the post of director of finance. The city council unanimously voted for the change to end the conflict between office holders, one reporting to the council, the other to the city manager. Sen. Charles Hedges, however, killed the bill in the Senate because he found no local support for it among the people he polled. . . Rev. John Allison reported that 600 attended the annual St. Joseph's reunion at the Fore River Club House. . . Pastor Rev. Roy Shoaf officiated at the ceremonies at the First Presbyterian Church where Alton Hortie and Marshall Miller were ordained as elders and Ernest Bishop, Wallace Pearson, John Manning, Alexander Smart and Edmund Wood were installed as trustees. . . Rita's Melt-in-your Mouth Cookies

At a recent family gathering, our daughter Rita brought these heavenly meringue cookies that melted in our mouths. They are so easy and baked so differently, you won't believe it. And only four ingredients!

Rita's Melt-in-your Mouth Cookies

Preheat oven to 375 degrees

Ingredients

2 egg whites
3/4 cup sugar

1 teaspoon vanilla
6 ounces chocolate chips

Beat the egg whites. Add the sugar and vanilla. Fold in the chocolate chips.

Place in teaspoons full on greased cookie sheet. Now here is the different part. As soon as you put the cookies in the oven, turn off the oven and let the cookies stay in there for two hours. They are so light and delicious.

Kim Dorsey Honored At Black Recognition Gala

Kim M. Dorsey of Quincy was among 72 African American business and community leaders recently honored at the 26th annual Black Achievers Recognition Award Gala at the Boston Marriott Copley Place.

The Black Achievers Program strives to recognize and encourage successful African American professionals who have committed themselves to working with minority youth to develop educational and career aspirations. The honorees, who were nominated by their employers, will serve as volunteers, mentors, and tutors for high school and youth programs throughout Greater Boston. This year, FleetBoston Financial Corporation is the lead sponsor of the Black Achievers Program.

The Black Achievers Program was founded by the Harlem YMCA in 1970. The YMCA of Greater Boston established the nation's second Black Achievers Program in 1975 and in the past quarter century it has honored more than 2,000 African American businesspeople throughout the area.

To be nominated as a Black Achiever, a candidate must have accomplished the following: established a solid work history; been employed at least two years with his/her present company; progressed within this company and demonstrated potential for further advancement; and agreed to commit to at least 40 hours of community service to benefit area minority youth.

Eastern Nazarene To Present Arthur Miller's 'The Crucible'

The Communication Arts Department of Eastern Nazarene College will present a classic American drama, The Crucible by Arthur Miller March 15-17.

The Crucible is based on the 1692 Salem witch trials and tells the story of a New England community plagued by a paranoia that leads to its own destruction. As the town of Salem faces the ultimate crucible, Miller's characters communicate not only the destructive nature of prejudice and hatred, but also the importance of being true to one's self, regardless of the consequences.

The McCarthy hearings in the 1950s created a similar hysteria in the United States as many public figures were suspected of favoring communism. It is against this backdrop that Miller wrote The Crucible. Miller was one of the many artists called before the House Committee on Un-American Activities for having attended Communist Party meetings. In the course of his questioning, Miller refused to give the names of others who attended.

The Crucible has remained popular because of its universal message, addressing the continuing struggle for truth and individual liberty under oppressive circumstances.

Katharine Ellis will direct a cast of talented students and Professor Michael Ballard will design the set and lighting.

The performance dates will be at 7 p.m. Tickets are $7 and can be ordered by calling the box office at (617) 745-3715 or by sending a check to Eastern Nazarene College, Department of Communication Arts, 23 East Elm Ave., Quincy, MA 02170.

An Educational Matinee for local school groups will be offered March 15 at 10 a.m. Tickets for the matinee are $5 and require advanced reservations. For more information, call the box office.

'Dinner At The White House' Historical Society Feature

Actress Judy Bernstein will be featured in her new one-woman show "Dinner At The White House" at the Quincy Historical Society meeting Feb. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy.

Appropriately for Presidents' Week and for a program on George Washington's birthday, "Dinner At The White House" is a social history of the presidents and first ladies, with stories of their entertainments, grand occasions, acts of kindness and hospitality.

The material ranges from amusing anecdotes and descriptions of spectacle to moments of real emotion when the White House ceremonial and leadership roles intersect in times of national crisis.

Bernstein has researched and compiled the program herself and draws her text from the actual historical record, including the first-ever invitation to dinner at the White House — issued by John and Abigail Adams.

The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

Antiques-Flea Market At Viking Club March 10

The Ladies Group of the South Shore Viking Club will hold their annual Antiques & Collectibles Flea Market Saturday, March 10.

The event will be at the club, 410 Quincy Ave., Braintree, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Bernice Creed is chairwoman.

Tables are $30. There will be a snack bar all day. Donation is $1.

QUINCY RESIDENT Brian McDonough (center) of Ground Transportation Unit at Logan International Airport was recently honored by Massport for outstanding customer service at the airport. With him are John Faro, Manager Ground Transportation Unit, and Ron Gaudet, Assistant Manager Ground Transportation Unit Operations.

An ambitious professional development opportunity, designed especially for aspiring business and professional leaders throughout southeastern Massachusetts, is set to begin Thursday, March 1, at Quincy College.

The South Shore Leadership Institute will bring together successful practitioners and "local experts" in a 14-week collaborative and informative setting to expose issues and topics of importance to leadership and the region.

"Imagine a weekly meeting where enthusiastic, exceptional individuals gather to share insight and discuss the skills necessary to perform at their highest personal level," said Sean Barry, president of Quincy College. "That's what this is all about."

The list of presenters include local clergy to discuss ethics and moral leadership, representative of the Patriot Ledger, the Quincy Sun and MPG Communications to speak on media responsibilities, practitioners from the United Way and other non-profits to discuss fund-raising and volunteerism.

Also marketing experts from a brewery and a restaurant to take up corporate imaging and marketing, local and state office-holders to discuss city and state relations, school superintendents to speak on education and the work force, female and minority leaders to discuss diversity and many others.

"Clearly, we draw a wide and inclusive program together with this institute," said Barry. "Our objective is to create more savvy, more practically informed individuals who might network and increase their collective and personal clout in the region."

Stop & Shop, Wal Mart and W. B. Mason have contributed to underwrite the cost of developing and presenting the program. Participants will pay a tuition of $299 which includes light refreshments, a certificate and concluding banquet.

"The tuition is minimal, and the content is significant," said Barry. "Employers and individuals will certainly recognize the appeal of the program and its long-term benefit."

Program registration will continue through the first meeting, Thursday, March 1 at 5:15 p.m. Each module concludes by 7 p.m. Registration is handled by the president's office at Quincy College.

was purchased using state funds and had been intended for recreational and open space.

"Those issues (resident concerns) are important, but the main issue here is that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts gave $4.7 million dollars to buy property for the sole purpose of providing open space and recreation," said Raymond.

"Now, somehow, that's being translated into a 330-unit apartment complex and a hotel. That's the problem."

Addressing the issue, Mayor James Sheets explained Tuesday that once the city had been made aware of Quarry Hills Associates' change in intended use for the property, it requested and received signed authorization by the state officials in charge.

"This is state money, not city money," said Sheets. "Approval had to be secured from the state and Lancellotti (Anthony Lancellotti, deputy program manager for the Central Artery Project) indicated that the reduction in tipping fees was adequate payment for the land."

Acting as special permit granting authority, the City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposal March 19 at 6 p.m. in council chambers.

The multi-million dollar golf course project has private developer Quarry Hills Associates filling three former solid-waste landfills in West Quincy and Milton with more than 11 million tons of Big Dig Dirt and creating a 27-hole public golf course, along with soccer and baseball fields, in the process.

In return for disposal of the fill, Quarry Hills has received millions in "tipping fees" from the state via the Massachusetts Highway Department which have gone into construction of the golf course and will also finance a $16.5 million clubhouse. It has also received a 50-year lease on the property, after which ownership reverts back to the city.

The 16.3 acre parcel off Ricciotti Drive, referred to as "The Shea Property," was purchased for $1.49 million in 1998 as part of $4.7 million purchase of 88 acres of private property which Quarry Hills said were necessary for the construction of the golf course.

But roughly 25 acres, including the Shea Property, are now considered unnecessary by the developer and, as a result, Quarry Hills Associates wants to sell the Shea Property to the Finger Companies for $6.1 million.

Another 10 acres of undeveloped land is being considered as a possible site for a hotel.

D'Amico said he believed Quarry Hills Associates had compensated the Massachusetts Highway Department for the disputed property with the reduced tipping fees and had the legal right to sell the land, but should consider what the public perception might be.

"I believe that Quarry Hills Associates has to be more sensitive than other private developers here," D'Amico said, noting their unique relationship with city and state government on the project.

As for Raymond's assertion that state funds originally earmarked for open space were now part of an apartment project with profit by private companies, D'Amico responded that the original lease agreement was signed in 1994, before either he or Raymond took office.

"If Councilor Raymond has an issue with the legal intricacies of the agreement, he can discuss them with the mayor," said D'Amico, adding that he would support a smaller project on the parcel which "struck a better balance" between development and open space.

Raymond, who said he has reviewed both the inter-agency agreement between the city and the Massachusetts Highway Department and what he called the more "loosely worded" agreement between the city and Quarry Hills Associates, said whether or not Quarry Hills could legally sell the land for private development was debatable but less important than the fact that land bought by the state for open space was now being considered for private development.

"Legally, can they do it? Probably," said Raymond. "But should they do it? No way."

"State funds were used for both of these parcels (Shea Property and hotel site) and both ought to maintain open space in accordance with the agreement."

Raymond, who said the development proposals jeopardize future plans for increased walking trails or a possible skating rink at the golf course site, said he attended a Feb. 15 meeting along with D'Amico where Ward 4 residents were kept from keeping the parcels open space.

Peter Frith, a longtime West Quincy resident and member of the Quarry Hills Advisory Committee, said the neighborhood was still behind the golf course project but opposed the apartment complex proposal.

"We'd rather have open space or maybe single-family homes or condo units," Trafficante said.

River Bay Club's New Assisted Living Community Grand Opening Feb. 27

River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St., Quincy, will open the doors to its newly refurbished Assisted Living Community with a ribbon cutting ceremony Tuesday, Feb. 27 at 1 p.m.

Mayor James Sheets is among those scheduled to participate.

River Bay Club has provided independent and assisted living in Quincy for the past 10 years. The entire second floor has been renovated to allow care to be delivered to those seniors aging-in-place who need assistance. The new Assisted Living Community includes new dining facilities, an activity room and a country kitchen.

The program includes a Memory Impairment program geared towards seniors with Alzheimer's Disease and has a Wellness Center. The Wellness Center will enable residents to receive all of their health care needs in a private and comfortable setting with appointments scheduled on site with a variety of providers.

The goal of the Assisted Living Community is to maintain and foster independence in a comfortable and home like setting. The community also features a social activity program that focuses on encouraging independence, group participation and the involvement of families and friends.

The celebration will continue at 2 p.m. with a Mardi Gras party in the Club Room, with the New Orleans Jazz Band and refreshments. All are welcome.

River Bay Club is a Brookdale Living Community. For further information on independent and assisted living or to arrange a tour, call Geri Dussault, Marketing Director, at 617-472-4457.

CREATING A BOND

Bonding involves the application of a tooth-colored resin to repair a fractured, worn or chipped tooth; cover up a discoloration, or close a small space or gap between two teeth. To do so, the dentist then brushes on the tooth by etching the surface so the resin has more surface area with which it can bond. Then, the tooth is coated with a bonding liquid and a light is shined on the tooth to set it. The resin is then brushed on the tooth and shaped as desired. A light is again shined on the tooth to harden the resin, after which the resin is trimmed and polished to a luster. Bonding usually lasts from three to five years.

This column on bonding has been brought to you in the

REAL ESTATE

First Time Homebuyer Informational Workshop Saturday At Roche Bros.

Neighborhood Housing Services, an HUD approved First Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold a free informational First Time Homebuyer's Workshop in partnership with Consolidated Mortgage Services Saturday, Feb. 24 from 2 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. in the second floor community room of Roche Brothers Supermarket, 101 Falls Blvd.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. The focus will be on different aspects of the homebuying process, including how to locate property within your budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program for your needs.

Each participant will have the opportunity to meet individually with a mortgage professional from Consolidated Mortgage Services. Participants will learn how they can purchase property with little or no money and how to best utilize local down payment and closing costs grants now available across the South Shore.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. For more information or to register for the workshop, contact Carol Smet at Consolidated Mortgage Services at (617) 479-1971, ext. 225.

Single-Family Market Slows In 2000, But Still Third Busiest For Bay State Home Sales

After four consecutive years of record sales activity in the Massachusetts single-family housing market began to moderate in 2000, as rising mortgage rates early in the year and a steadily diminishing supply of homes for sale softened demand in many areas, according to a report issued by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR).

Conversely, average home selling prices continued a seven-year climb in 2000, fueled by the shortage of residential listings, a healthy local economy, and strong sales in the trade-up, second home and high-end housing markets.

The MAR report shows sales of detached single-family homes declined 9.1 percent across the Bay State in 2000, from 49,338 units in 1999 to 44,831 this past year. Condominium sales also decreased a more modest 4.3 percent, from 13,324 units a year ago to 12,748 in 2000.

Despite the drop, the 57,579 detached single-family homes and condos sold in 2000 is the third highest residential sales total on record in Massachusetts, exceeded only by the years 1998 and 1999.

A slower home sales pace was in evidence in all four quarters of the year, but over the final three months of 2000 the market received a noticeable boost from declining interest rates, which fell over a third of a point on a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage from the third quarter (8.11 percent, third quarter 2000 vs. 7.74 percent, fourth quarter 2000), and one-half a percentage point in the last 12 months (8 percent, Dec. '99 vs. 7.49 percent, Dec. 2000).

After three consecutive quarters of double-digit declines, detached home sales slid just 3.5 percent in the fourth quarter, from 11,581 units in the final quarter of 1999 to 11,173 in the same three months of 2000. Condominium sales also slipped 3 percent, from 3,234 units in the fourth quarter one year ago to 3,137 in the comparable quarter of 2000.

Regionally, last year's sales of detached single-family homes declined in all jurisdictions of the state, but activity remained strong by historical standards in the Northeast, Central, South Shore and West regions, where sales were off 5-8 percent from 1999.

In the condo market, sales improved in Worcester County and western Massachusetts over year ago levels, climbing 6.8 percent and 15.5 percent, respectively, in 2000. Condo sales also were fairly stable on Cape Cod, the South Shore and southeastern Massachusetts, with sales activity down less than 50 units in the past year compared to 1999.

In the past year, there was, on average, 13.2 percent fewer homes on the market in any given quarter compared to the same time in 1999 (32,886 single-family listings in 1999 vs. 28,554 listings in 2000), leaving just 5.3 months of supply available for purchase by year's end.

purchasing decisions a parent can make, AAA is offering "Ten Features to Look For When Buying a Child Safety Seat."

Motor vehicle crashes are the No. 1 killer of children under 10, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. In 1999 alone, over 1,100 children were killed and 182,000 more were injured in car crashes. Every day, three children under age 10 are killed and 500 more are injured in car crashes.

To reduce this fatality rate, AAA recommends that parents look for the following important features when selecting a child safety seat. These features can make your child seat more convenient for parents and safer for children:

1) Check Your Car Owner's Manual — Before purchasing a seat look for specifications and proper placement of the child seat.

2) Fits a Variety of Vehicles — Avoid seats with larger bases because they will not fit in smaller vehicles.

3) Ease of Installation — There should be clear instructions on the seat itself.

Choose one that explains installation with a diagram instead of text. The instruction booklet should be written in a clear, concise manner with proper illustrations.

4) Easy Belt Path — For your convenience, make sure the child's seat belt path is easily accessed.

5) Built in Locking Clips — These are a great alternative to the traditional locking clips.

6) Two-Piece Retainer Clips — Two-piece clips are important in helping the child stay in place.

7) Accessible Harness Adjusters — Adjusters make it more convenient for parents to move the child in or out of the seat.

8) Pay attention to Weight Limits — Look for rear-facing convertible seats with weight limits up to 30 pounds, usually noted on the seat. These limits help protect young children who have outgrown smaller seats.

9) Color Coding for Age and Weight — Many seats offer color coding to differentiate age and weight ranges for that seat.

10) Easy Care and Cleaning — Choose a seat with a smooth fabric you can easily wipe clean. Difficult fabrics such as corduroy can be harder to wash.

Slick Facts About Oil

It's time to change the oil on your trusty car and you decide to do it yourself. You find yourself at the auto parts store staring at the assortment of oil on the shelves, trying to decide which one to buy and trying to decipher all the numbers and letters on the containers.

Cracking the oil code requires some basic understanding of what your vehicle requires. In every owner's manual there is a chart with a recommendation of oil type for that car.

The right engine oil is important to cold weather starts, says AAA. Oil can become thick and gluey when cold and can make it difficult for engine parts to move. Some oil grades are thinner than others, and thinner is better for winter weather.

The Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) rates oil for its viscosity in both cold and hot conditions. The first number, usually a 5W or 10W, is an indication of how thin the oil stays when cold. The second number is an indication of how thick it stays when hot and usually ranges from 30-40. This means that 5W-30 oil is thinner than 10W-30 when cold.

AAA advises motorists to refer to the SAE oil rating to decide which oil grade is best, and to look in the owner's manual for the viscosity recommended for the vehicle.

Dr. Craig Korbin Chief Of Radiology At Quincy Medical

Dr. Craig D. Korbin, MD, credited for having developed a state-of-the-art breast imaging program at neighboring Milton Hospital, has left that hospital to serve as the Chief of Radiology at Quincy Medical Center.

"Those who have been watching us closely know that Quincy Medical Center is attracting top talent, so it should come as no surprise that Dr. Korbin has chosen to join our team," said Quincy Medical Center President and CEO Christine Schuster.

"But his willingness to build yet again what he built just two years ago at a neighboring health care facility says an awful lot about what he views to be our potential. Dr. Korbin has devoted his career to comprehensive, compassionate and quality care for women in the context of breast imagery, and he would not be here but for his belief that we have the makings to offer women breast care as good as anywhere in New England."

"Any good radiology department offers women high quality diagnostic testing to determine the state of their health," Dr. Korbin said. "A great radiology department also offers them timely, courteous and accurate services. That's what we are providing for patients of Quincy Medical Center."

"Women who have mammograms at Quincy Medical Center are having their images read while they wait, and are informed of their results before they leave. We do our best to ensure that they understand their results, and have all of the information they need to make informed decisions should additional testing be necessary. If images suggest the need for further testing, those services can frequently be provided right at the time of the initial mammogram."

Dr. Korbin is now implementing new systems and procedures for the Department of Radiology at Quincy Medical Center. The hospital is also in the process of purchasing new equipment and redesigning the department to be more patient friendly and efficient.

Dr. Korbin joins Quincy Medical Center from Milton Hospital where he was the founder and director of that hospital's Breast Program. Before joining Milton Hospital, Dr. Korbin completed a fellowship in Ambulatory Women's Imaging at Harvard Medical School's Brigham and Women's Hospital, and had worked in the radiology departments of three other Massachusetts hospitals: Newton-Wellesley Hospital, Emerson Hospital and Martha's Vineyard Hospital.

Dr. Korbin completed his residency at the UCLA School of Medicine's Harbor Medical Center. Additionally, Dr. Korbin is the author of numerous publications about various aspects of radiology and women's health.

Eating Disorders: Causes, Treatment Of A Growing Problem

The stories have become too common: Teenage girls dieting to the point of emaciation and college-aged women inducing vomiting after periods of binge eating.

Whatever the manifestation, an estimated 5 million

Americans, predominantly women, suffer from some form of eating disorder, most commonly anorexia nervosa or bulimia nervosa. One out of 10 of these sufferers will die as a result of their eating disorder, according to the National Institute of Mental Health.

"A true eating disorder is a serious problem," says Brenda Richardson, M.D., who chairs the Massachusetts Medical Society's Committee on Nutrition. "The physical side effects can include an imbalance of the electrolytes in a person's body. This can lead to serious cardiac problems and possibly death."

What differentiates the desire to lose a few pounds with potentially life-threatening eating disorders? The issue is complex, but medical researchers generally agree that anorexia (preoccupation with dieting and thinness leading to excessive weight loss) and bulimia (ridding the body of food usually following rapid food consumption) are often linked to psychiatric disorders related to identity and self-concept.

Psychologist Margaret Marino, Ph.D., the director of child and adolescent eating disorders and obesity at the New England Medical Center, also cites genetic, environmental and cultural issues as factors that frequently cause eating disorders.

"Family dynamics play an important role in establishing patterns that lead to eating disorders," says Dr. Marino. "An over-emphasis on physical appearance and negative experiences resolving conflicts within the family can result in their onset, usually coinciding with the start of adolescence."

Diagnosis
Drs. Richardson and

Marino agree that early diagnosis is key to successful treatment of eating disorders.

Dr. Marino recommends that family and friends use generally accepted checklists if they're concerned that someone they know may be suffering from an eating disorder.

Specific signs of anorexia include:

- Significant weight loss in the absence of illness.
- Significant reduction in eating coupled with a denial of hunger.

- Dieting when not overweight.

Sufferers of bulimia may exhibit different signs, including:

- Evidence of binge eating. (Including actual observation and verbal reports, large amounts of food missing, or the stealing of money or food.)
- Frequent weight fluctuations.

- Evidence of purging, including vomiting, laxative or diuretic abuse, frequent fasting and excessive exercise.

There are instances when an individual displays a combination of both sets of symptoms and when binge eating is not followed by the purging found among bulimics. This is commonly referred to as Binge Eating Disorder or BED.

Treatment

Medical professionals agree that curing these disorders can take months or years and that the most important factor is early detection.

"Clearly, these patients have many psychological problems," says Dr. Richardson. "However, the physical damage is significant if the problem is not attended to. Many disciplines contribute to the whole picture including the physicians, nurses, dietitians and therapists."

Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

ARM & SHOULDER PAIN

Arm and shoulder pain can have a number of causes, but the large percentage of cases are caused by misalignment of one or more spinal bones (vertebrae), improper posture, spinal curvatures, occupational stresses, or injury to the spine. Any of these conditions may cause irritation or impingement of the nerves supplying the arms, shoulder and neck. Arm and shoulder pain does not always mean trouble where the pain is felt.

The degree of pain may vary between slight and intermittent, to excruciating. But do not be fooled by the degree of pain; sometimes a slight pain goes along with a serious condition while intense pain may be a symptom of nothing more than temporary muscle soreness caused by a weekend of unusual activity.

It should be apparent to anyone that arm and shoulder pain may indicate a serious condition. But whether the problem is serious or not, the pain can become quite debilitating. Fortunately, the doctor of chiropractic is eminently qualified to correct arm and shoulder problems. The chiropractors education and experience have been directed to such problems that involve the spine, nerves, muscles and joints of the human body.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Casey Ridge Sets North Quincy Record For Assists

By CHRIS POISSON

Although she would've liked to have it had it happened earlier, it couldn't have come on a better day for North Quincy's Casey Ridge.

The senior point dished out career assist No. 268 in last Friday night's 66-28 win over Quincy to set the new school record, surpassing the previous mark held by Nancy Flukes (1984-88).

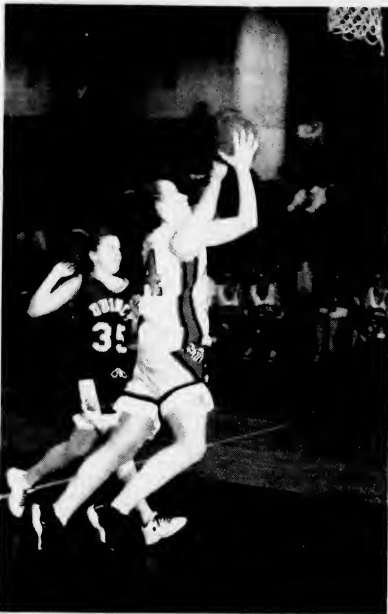

The home crowd, along with the Quincy fans, serenaded her with a standing ovation while the game stopped briefly to recognize her amazing achievement. What makes the feat remarkable is that she accomplished it in half the time as Flukes — two years.

A transfer from Fonthonne Academy, Ridge arrived on Hancock Street last season and dazzled the Old Colony League with her passing fancy, finishing with the school's single-season assist record with 107.

"I think it's an awesome feat," said head coach Doug MacFarlane. "I never figured she'd do it. Last year she set the mark with most assists in a season with 107. She just went flying by that this year."

The record-breaking 13th assist was vintage Ridge that North Quincy fans have grown accustomed to the past two seasons. With 8:19 left in the game, Ridge dribbled at the top of the key, cut left through the lane and when a second defender approached her, she slipped a perfect, two-handed shovel pass to center April Suprey (10 points) for a layup.

With North Quincy (15-5) holding a commanding 56-24 lead over its city rival, Ridge (8) retrieved the game ball and watched the rest of the game from the bench. When Suprey came off the floor a several minutes later, she parked herself next to Ridge and gave her a big old hug.

"Right before April said, 'I really want this last one. Can you give it to me,'" Ridge said. "She got the rebound and I was like, 'Give me the ball and I'll get you this one.'"

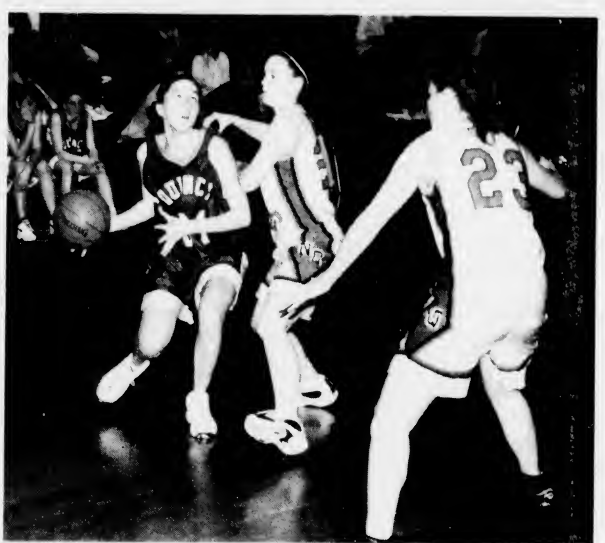

The Red Raiders and Ridge are relieved the record is finally over so they can now shift their attention solely on the upcoming state tournament, in which the pairings will be announced tomorrow (Friday).

In last Monday's loss to Abington, Ridge sustained a Charlie Horse above her knee and although she later returned, she finished with zero assists. Two days later in a loss to Randolph, she handed out only a pair while still being hampered by the injury.

"It felt good," said Ridge about setting the record. "[Coach] told me like three games ago, I didn't get any in the Abington game and had two in the Randolph game. I wanted to get it over with before the tournament so I wouldn't have to worry about it. It was awesome."

"I told the girls before the game, 'Let's get this over with so we don't have to worry about it,'" MacFarlane said. "I'm glad it's done. I

CHRISTINA KEENAN zeroes in on the rim as she looks for a shot over North Quincy's Kathryn MacRitchie and Kristen DiMattio. The Quincy senior captain scored 8 points and grabbed 8 rebounds.

She deserves it."

As for the game itself, the OCL champs cruised from the get-go and constructed a very comfortable 37-12 lead at halftime. In the second half, Quincy came out strong before stalling offensively over the final nine minutes.

"Quincy had a tough year this year," MacFarlane said. "The kids fought hard. They didn't quit. They're 0-19 and they didn't quit. I told my girls in the beginning, 'These guys aren't going to roll over for us.' They played real hard."

Senior Kerry Eaton led Quincy with 10 points and senior captain Christina Keenan added 8 with 8 rebounds. For North Quincy, junior Lauren Sleeth scored a team-high 16 points and NORTH QUINCY'S Casey Ridge handed out 13 assists in last Friday night's 66-28 win over Quincy to become the new career assists leader with 268. The senior point guard surpassed the mark previously held by Nancy Flukes (1984-88) in only two years at North Quincy.

sophomore Kristen DiMattio added 15 off the bench.

Sacred Heart Basketball Soaring

The Sacred Heart (North Quincy) sixth and eighth grade boys' basketball teams are enjoying tremendous seasons with a combined record of 52-2 in league play.

Recently, the sixth-graders (15-0 Patriot League, 9-2 CYO) knocked off undefeated St. Thomas More (Braintree), 37-23, in CYO action by using aggressive defense, unselfish team play and fine foot shooting to overcome their lack of size.

Brian Mahoney scored a team-high 15 points and Mike Horgan (7), Matt Edgerly (6), Matt Jaehnig (5) and Chris Boyd (4) also contributed to the offense. Sean Clifford was tough defensively.

Sacred Heart doubled up St. Leonards, 66-33, behind a career-high 21 points from Edgerly. John Huethch chipped in with 12 and Jaehnig and Horgan added 9 apiece. Chris Doyle, David Guerriero and Mike McPherson also played well.

In a battle of undefeated teams, Sacred Heart pulled out a thrilling 35-34 victory over Pembroke in Patriot League action. Patrick Austin buried a huge shot from the wing with two minutes left to give his team the lead for good.

Boyd played an outstanding floor game at point guard and scored 10 points. Jake O'Brien scored 7, Huethch 6, Steve Connolly 4, Mahoney 4 and Jaehnig 2. Brian McQuinn flew all over the court defensively on the press. Jared Tucker also played well.

The eighth-graders (15-0 Patriot League, 13-0 CYO) recently handed defending champion Pembroke a 43-31 loss in Patriot League action. David Jaehnig scored 16 of his 19 points in the second half to break open a tight contest.

Dean Sandonato scored 8 points and Rick Schiffone, who has been a spark plug all season, scored 6 points to get things rolling in the first half. Nick Malvesti (4) and Chris Marinelli (2) dominated the defensive boards against a taller Pembroke club. Kyle Costa (4) was his usual aggressive force defensively as were Tom Ross and Rob Gardner.

Sacred Heart picked up a 35-28 win over a physical Taunton squad. Sandonato (9) shined on both ends of the court and Costa (8) drilled a clutch 3-pointer to spark the victory.

In CYO play, Sacred Heart prevailed over last year's champion Sacred Heart (Roslindale) with a hard fought 59-52 win. Sandonato and Jaehnig combined for 40 points as they continue to form a potent inside-outside combination.

Schiffone added 12 points, Marinelli 5 and John Dahlquist 2. Kevin Donovan and Mike Nee have been nice additions to the team in their rookie seasons.

Winter Tai Chi
Classes At Beechwood

Beechwood on the Bay announces two Winter Tai Chi classes are beginning in February.

The first winter session will be Wednesdays from 7-8 p.m. with Beechwood instructor Susan Hudgens. An afternoon class will soon begin Mondays from 1-2 p.m.

"An Introduction to Tai Chi," an hour-long free demonstration class is scheduled for Monday, Feb. 26 at 1 p.m. All interested may attend with no cost or obligation.

Tai Chi, the popular "Eastern" martial art known as "meditation in motion," is a series of low-impact movements that reduce stress and increase flexibility, balance and general good health.

Registration is underway. Class size is limited. For more information, call Beechwood at 471-5712.

North's Tourney Hopes Alive; Quincy's Dashed

By CHRIS POISSON

Laying face down on the cold floor, Kevin O'Connell slammed his right fist onto the hardwood like it was a soft pillow and stayed there before coach John Franceschini lifted him to his feet and brought him to the bench.

Like the rest of the players on the court, the super sophomore had just played 32 minutes of basketball like it was the last 32 minutes of his life. When his last-second desperation heave from just beyond the arc clanked to the right, all the emotion that had been brewing evaporated — as did Quincy's season.

Aside from city bragging rights, post-season hopes were also at stake in last Friday night's Quincy-North Quincy showdown. Senior sniper Brandon Sleeth (10 points) canned a pair of free throws with three seconds left to hand the Red Raiders a 58-55 victory in front of the home crowd.

The win kept North Quincy's tournament bid alive. It defeated Norwell on the road yesterday (Wednesday) in the season finale, then it would sneak in the back door with a 10-10 record.

Earlier in the year, the Red Raiders knocked off Norwell, 64-51. A lot has changed since then as Norwell (11-6) has transformed into a tournament-bound team, led by Eastern Massachusetts' ninth leading scorer, Gerry Corcoran with 25 points per game.

"We beat Norwell, we're in," said head coach Ted Stevenson after the win over Quincy. "That's what it comes down to. We beat them earlier in the year, but they're playing a lot better. They have that kid Corcoran who can light it up from anywhere. And it's at their gym. But we'll be ready."

Meanwhile, the loss left Quincy's post-season dreams shattered. And to make matters worse, the Presidents (7-12) opened its annual Quincy Invitational with an 84-75 loss to Revere on Presidents' Day. On Tuesday, they concluded their season against Stoughton in the consolation game.

That's the way it has been for the Coddington Clique, as their season has had more peaks and valleys than the Grand Canyon. The Presidents started off 4-3 including a huge win over a tough Barnstable squad, but then proceeded to drop five of their next six games — the lone win being a 74-72 overtime thriller against North Quincy Jan. 20. But during that stretch they lost two players to injuries — senior Adam Jurewicz and junior Mike Lorenzano — and didn't have enough man power for a play-off push down the stretch.

"They got us the first time and we got them this time," Stevenson said. "It's two evenly matched teams. They played hard. They had a lot of adversity this year. They lost a couple of kids."

Quincy opened the game with an 8-2 lead on adrenaline alone before Stevenson called a timeout with 13:32 left to slow the pace down. Missing starting point guard Joe Holleran (pneumonia), the Red Raiders engineered a 19-3 run over the next six minutes to grab a 21-11 lead. Senior center Matt Mooney (8 points) overpowered the undersized Presidents in the paint, scoring 6 points in that stretch.

Quincy kept the score close at the break, 31-26, thanks to five 3-pointers, three from senior Mark Robertson (game-high 21 points) who tallied 13 first-half points.

In the second half, O'Connell stole the show in the first four minutes by scoring his team's first 13 points to knot the score at 39-all. O'Connell buried two treys, connected on a three-point play and added four more free throws in the outburst. He finished with 20 points, 17 in the second half.

"The sophomore, O'Connell, I thought he played tremendous for them," Stevenson raved. "He's going to be a helluva player."

North Quincy went up 47-42 before Quincy's full-court press caused them fits. In one sequence, sophomore Shawn Munchbach dove to the floor for a loose ball and, while sitting down, passed it behind his back to senior Dave Centrella, who pushed the ball upcourt to Robertson for a layup. Sophomore Matt Ramponi followed with a pull-up jumper as the shot clock expired to give Quincy a 48-47 lead with 4:52 left.

A spinning drive by senior Adam Woo (12 points) and a low-post move by junior John O'Connell (14) put the Red Raiders ahead 51-48 before Robertson drained his fourth bomb of the night to even the score again with 2:12 remaining.

Woo, however, responded immediately with the shot heard around the gym. Left alone on the left wing, as if Quincy was daring him to pull the trigger, Woo stroked a huge 3-pointer for the go-head basket.

"Adam is coming on strong for us," Stevenson said. "I don't think he has beaten Quincy since his freshman year. We've lost to them four or five straight times. These kids wanted it big time."

After O'Connell and junior Phil McGillicuddy traded baskets, Centrella knifed through the lane for a layup to make it 56-55 with 49 seconds left. Centrella finished with just 5 points, but none were more bigger than those two at that moment.

Although Quincy relies on his offense, he is of even more value as an emotional leader who sparks his teammates with his Kamikaze defense play. Take a look at him after a game and you'll see knees brighter than Rudolph's nose. He was all over the court against North Quincy, holding McGillicuddy, one of the top guards in the league, to a quiet 12 points.

"I'll tell ya, I'd take Centrella any time," said Stevenson, who watched him torch his team in the first meeting with 29 points. "We had our All-Star meeting [last Thursday night] and I had him as the fifth best player in the league. That's how much he has impressed me this year."

After Centrella's hoop, the final 49 seconds became interesting when North Quincy missed four straight free throws before Sleeth stepped to the line to seal the win.

"I thought our nemesis from the foul line was going to get us again," Stevenson said. "Brandon Sleeth came through with two big ones. Typical North Quincy-Quincy war. Everything was left on the court. It came down to another three at the buzzer. They got an awful good shot. Quincy has nothing to be ashamed of. They gave it all."

Outstanding Season For North Quincy Boys' Track

The North Quincy boys' winter track team concluded the regular season with an outstanding second-place finish in the recent Old Colony League Championship — its best performance in head coach Peter Chisom Jr.'s 15 years at the helm.

North Quincy (5-2) finished three points behind Bridgewater-Raynham, but triumphed over Barnstable, Taunton, Quincy, Plymouth South and Silver Lake. The Red Raiders will also be sending two members — Christian Donovan and Kyle Piazza — to New York in March for the Nationals.

Like they have done all season, Donovan and Piazza took first place in their respective events. Donovan led the way with his best time of the year in the 600 meters, breaking the league record set by Jojo Comperchio of Weymouth in 1997. Piazza won the shot-put, also breaking the league record.

John Fidalgo (1,000 meters), Derek Whitman (high jump) and Brian Breslin (2 mile) all finished second. Whitman also picked up a third-place finish (55 meter hurdles), as did Jeff Bartoloni

(1 mile). The 4x200 meter relay team of Peter Chan, Sean Cote, Keith Doherty and Jeff Hunt also placed third.

In the high jump, Mike Maguire recorded his personal best as he jumped into fourth place. Hunt earned his season best in the long jump and George Phipps threw his personal best in the shot-put, as both athletes placed fifth.

The 4x400 meter relay team added the final touches with a first-place finish, beating rival Bridgewater-Raynham for the first time and missing the league record by 0.74 of a second. Sean Ginty took the lead at the beginning and never looked back, while Bartoloni and Paul Griffith maintained the lead in their legs of the relay before Donovan cruised in the last leg to widen the gap.

Other competitors were: Ryan Farnham (7th, 55-meter dash), Steven Barkowski (7th, 1 mile), Mike D'Angelo (10th, 1 mile), Gary Dalton (10th, long jump; 17th, 300-meter dash), Griffith (10th, 600-meter dash), Ginty (11th, 300-meter dash), David Vo (16th, 1,000 meters) and Sean Drews (17th, shot-put).

Wrestling Benefit At Armory March 2

The World Wrestling Alliance will return to the National Guard Armory, 1000 Hancock St., Quincy, Friday, March 2 to raise money for the Armies Family Support Group.

The event will feature superstars from the top three companies — World Wrestling Federation (WWF), World Championship Wrestling (WCW) and Extreme Championship Wrestling (ECW).

Opening bell is at 7:30 p.m., but doors will open at 6 p.m. for autographs and pictures with the superstars. Advanced tickets are $15 and can be purchased at Papa Gino's, 1 Beale St., North Quincy, or at the National Guard Armory. Tickets sold at the door will be $20.

Former WWF superstar and Intercontinental Champion Ken Shamrock will headline the event. Before he entered the WWF, Shamrock held many titles in the Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC).

Hometown hero "The Boston Brawler" Jerry Garibaldi will return home to compete.

Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tourney Underway

The 28th annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament dropped the puck Monday at Quincy Youth Arena for the 28th season.

The USA sanctioned class A tourney includes teams from Austria as well as Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Greater Boston and the South Shore. All four divisions (Mites, Squirts, Pee Wees, Bantams) are featured.

Here are the results from the first day of the week-long event:

In Bantams action, Quincy knocked off Charlestown, 3-1, in the last game of the night. Ryan Conley, Matt Germain and Kevin Richardson provided the scoring. Matt Lavery tallied a pair of assists, while Matt Grazioso, Steve Kelley and Josh Giordani had one apiece.

Three games were scheduled for Pee Wees play. The Mohawks downed Hyde Park, 5-2, in the first game and the Seahawks edged Hingham, 5-4, in the third game.

The middle match showcased Austria against Quincy. Although Quincy fell, 4-2, it was a well-played game on both ends. Andrew Donovan and Matt Tobin netted Quincy's goals. Brendan Mulcahy and Chris Garvey picked up assists. For Austria, Patrick Vaschauner paced the attack by potting a pair of goals and Nico Toff and Stefan Kenda also found the back of the net.

In the Squirts Division, the South Coast Stars topped Milton, 4-2, and Braintree defeated the Warwick (R.I.) club, 4-2.

In Mites, Parkway handed

Win Over Quincy Puts North In Hockey Tournament

By CHRIS POISSON

There seemed to be some confusion last Saturday night as to the whereabouts of North Quincy's precious team hockey puck, the one with the Yakoo that has been with the program for over a decade.

One year ago, head coach Bob Doyle passed it around the locker room for luck before the Red Raiders dismantled their city rivals to clinch a tourney berth. A similar scenario presented itself Saturday night: North Quincy needed to beat Quincy in its final game to reach the postseason.

With so much on the line, Doyle wanted that puck with him for the team's biggest game of the season. So as he packed his bag at home before heading to Quincy Youth Arena, he made a phone call to the puck's possessor — James Flaherty of Quincy Youth Hockey's Cotter Club to whom he gave the puck to as a gift last year. Flaherty, however, thought Doyle had it.

"I called James Flaherty's mom and asked for the puck," Doyle said. "But he seems to think that I still have it. So I said, well, if you can't find the puck then bring James. Sure enough, at the end of the first period he was the first kid at the gate to give me a high five."

And deservedly so, North Quincy skated off the ice with a 2-1 lead and built a 4-1 advantage after two periods before thwarting off a late Quincy (12-6-1) rally to hold on for a 4-3 victory and earn an improbable spot in the state tournament with a 10-10 record.

"He was here and that's better than having the puck," Doyle said. "So indirectly James Flaherty is still a part of the winning tradition."

A winning tradition that has the Red Raiders March-bound for the fourth straight year; albeit, it has been a helter-skelter ride to the promise land the past two seasons. Last season North Quincy secured a spot with a game to spare and this year it didn't happen until the 20th game.

"I'd like not to make a habit of this," Doyle said. "We had one game left last year. If we didn't get the Quincy win we had a chance against Newton North on a Monday. [Saturday night], we had no more chances."

The Red Raiders have been playing with that sense of urgency all month. It wasn't too long ago when the team was falling apart like loose pages in an over-used school notebook, eventually bottoming out after a 7-2 debauch to Silver Lake Jan. 31 that dropped their record to 5-9.

At that point, Doyle had tried everything possible to steer his team on course. But all the benchings, suspensions and lineup changes didn't do a thing. Instead, the turnaround came from the voices of 12 seniors who didn't want their last game to be a bust.

"I'll be very honest with you," Doyle said. "I didn't think it was possible to make the tournament the way the season was going early on. I really didn't think we had the character or the belief that we could do it."

"It has been a real tough learning year for myself, trying to get everybody on the same page," he added. "It was definitely the seniors that kept that fire burning for us. I think they did a real good job of letting the younger kids know that we did have a chance."

From Groundhog's Day to Presidents' Day, North Quincy was practically unbeatable, winning five of its last six games, including its final three, to complete the steep climb to respectability, which is all you need to qualify for the postseason.

"Very similar to what we did last year," said Doyle, referring to last year's rebound from a 2-6 start. "I'm very pleased. We're playing the way I thought we were capable of playing right from the beginning of the year. It was nice to see that we can play with the upper-echelon teams."

Not only can they play, but they can beat elite teams. After playing powerhouse Falmouth (15-1) tough in a 6-3 loss, North Quincy knocked off Barnstable (12-5-1) last Wednesday to setup the showdown with the Presidents.

The Red Raiders clearly played like a team on the brink of elimination, out-hustling and out-muscling their neighbors through the first two periods. In the middle of the first, they quickly grabbed a 2-0 lead with a pair of goals 1:10 apart.

Junior forward Joe Fitzpatrick struck first when he poked the puck past junior goalie Tom Shruhan (13 saves) at 6:56 and freshman defenseman Stephen Kelley followed with a great individual move from the right circle to beat Shruhan short-side at 8:06.

Quincy pressed North Quincy late in the first, slicing the lead in half when freshman forward Matt Germain beat senior goalie Matt Gregory (29 saves) on the power play with 2:17 left.

"I felt we needed to get the first goal after the 5-0 whitewash in the first game," Doyle said. "If I had one complaint in the first period it was that we didn't play physical enough. Quincy has an explosive three lines of forwards and they just keep coming at you. I thought the key for success was to play like we did in the Barnstable game: use the size to our advantage and hit these guys."

If the game were a boxing match, the middle frame would've been scored a convincing win for North Quincy. It scored at the beginning when junior center Chris Matacunas redirected Kelley's shot from the point and at the end when sophomore forward Matt Grazioso cleaned up the leftovers on junior forward Charlie Sorrento's rush. In between, it landed body check after body check, stymieing Quincy's quick-strike offense.

"Guys like Rob Rice, Matty Holt and Joe Cronin definitely stepped up their physical play in the second period, and you could kind of see Quincy going back on their heels after those body checks," Doyle said.

In the final frame, the tide turned as North Quincy's sold nemesis rolled in like waves. Penalties, four of them, put the Red Raiders in a defensive stance as the Presidents dominated play and racked up 17 shots.

Gregory, though, clearly brought his Hasek-like game to the rink, blanking the Presidents on their first two man-advantages with several splendid saves, including a sensational left pad save to rob junior forward Dave Germain, Matt's older brother.

Quincy finally solved Gregory late in the frame with a pair of power-play tallies 1:42 apart. Junior forward Andy Ross made it 4-2 at 9:25 and Germain netted his second of the night on a beautiful pass from junior forward Bill McKeon with 3:52 left in the game.

The Presidents had several quality chances to score the equalizer down the stretch, but Gregory (15 third-period saves) rejected each attempt like they were mangled credit cards.

"Mr. Gregory held the fort," Doyle said. "He played fantastic. Last year he took us to the state tournament, and he has played well in the last three games."

Now North Quincy awaits the tournament pairings, in which it will no doubt draw a low seed. Someone will need to find that puck if the Red Raiders want to write a fairy tale ending to this bizarre season.

Robert Taylor Named ISS Executive Director

Robert Taylor of East Bridgewater has been named Executive Director of Interfaith Social Services, a Quincy agency which has served South Shore residents for more than 50 years.

Taylor returns to the agency he directed from 1967 to 1994. In the seven-year interim there have been many changes at the agency, including a name change in 1998.

"I was pleased to find programs such as the Pantry Shelf and the Bureau Drawer which serve the most needy in our area doing so well," Taylor said. "It was also exciting to learn about new programs the agency has developed such as the Career Closet which provides work place attire for women re-entering the work force and the Faith in Action program which provides volunteer companions for persons recovering from mental illness."

Taylor, who spent his formative years on the South Shore, holds a master's degree in Social Work from Denver University. During his "retirement" years he worked for a number of Cape Cod agencies, most recently as director of Development for Lower Cape Outreach Council in Orleans.

Interfaith Social Services derives a large part of its support from churches and synagogues on the South Shore. In addition, fund raising events such as the annual Walkathon and appeal letters to South Shore residents help to provide the funds necessary to carry out the work of the agency.

Interfaith Social Services is located at 776 Hancock St. in Wollaston and can be reached at (617) 773-6203.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Yours is one of the most potent good-luck signs of the Zodiac. And this week you'll get some news that reinforces why that's so.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There's an underlying sense of anger making the Divine Bovine see red. Deal with it now before it explodes, so you can avoid more problems from the fall-out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Even if you don't expect to make a career move anytime soon, investigating an upcoming offer will certainly pay off. Travel arrangements need to be made soon.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A friend from the past returns and makes an unsettling demand. Don't allow your emotions to take over.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A workplace problem needs more attention before it can be settled. Your financial picture improves. Someone's surprise revelation creates an unusual reaction.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Being the sixth sign of the Zodiac makes you more selective than most folks. But you might need to be a little more flexible about a long-deferred matter.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The blame game could get out of hand. All accusations need to be weighed carefully in order to determine what is true and what is potentially harmful innuendo.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new job could be within your grasp. Be patient and allow the decision-making process to work itself through. Spend more time with loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Sometimes you might feel that you're not getting your share of life's good things, but prospects open up this week that could make you feel otherwise.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Patience and understanding finally enable you and a loved one to work out those pesky problems once and for all.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Expect good news from someone whom you thought had forgotten you. This could lead to that change you had earlier considered but then set aside.

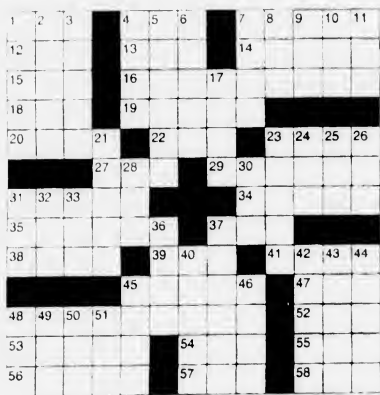

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A romance that seems to be floundering needs tender, loving care if you hope to rescue it. Be prepared to change travel plans as new information emerges.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You can bring various elements together to create something new and wonderful. No wonder you're considered the Celestial Chemist.

'Old QHS Not Answer To New,' Says Sheets

there so that we wouldn't have to build on our parkland.

"Once parkland is gone, it's gone for good, so if it is possible not to build on parkland, we won't. However, that may not be possible."

Sheets added that he appreciated the responsibilities School Committeewoman Christine Cedrone shoulders as chairwoman of the Quincy High School Siting Commission.

"She's in a very difficult position because the land you're looking at to build a new high school is either parkland or open space or it is marginal land, such as the Quincy Avenue site," said Sheets.

However, he said that he remained confident both the siting commission and the School Committee would find a suitable location for the new high school by the May 2 deadline imposed by the School Committee and Jo-Ann Bragg, its vice-chairman.

The siting commission, which was formed shortly after Sheets' Nov. 28 decision to remove from consideration the original school site off Quincy Ave. — a 16-acre parcel thought unsafe by many residents because it was a former dumpsite for Bethlehem Steel, onetime owners of the Fore River Shipyard — has narrowed its list of sites to a possible five: Faxon Field along with the current site of the Center for Technical Education (CTE); The DPW headquarters at 55 Sea St.; Faxon Park; Pageant Field, and the Koch Recreation Complex.

The new Quincy High School, currently scheduled to open in September of 2004, is expected to receive 90 percent reimbursement from the state.

The existing plan calls for the old Quincy High School to be renovated into the new Central Middle School and the current Central Middle School to then shut down.

Cedrone, who was recently criticized in a newspaper article not written by The Sun which charged that the commission was acting heavy-handedly by not considering the renovation of the old QHS, responded in a two-page letter sent to The Sun Friday.

Remarks from Cedrone's response include:

"As chairman of the Quincy High School Siting Commission, my responsibility is to keep order and focus on the task that was given to the Commission. Under Roberts Rules of Order, the chairman shall keep order and know when to continue discussion and know when discussion would not assist the group in making their decision. "After reading the resolve given to the Commission, it was clear to me that further discussion was not necessary — we had no power as a Commission to discuss renovation. Our job was to find a new site to build Quincy High School."

"Regarding the number of members who are on the city payroll, again there seems to be some confusion. To begin with, only 11 out of 22 members are on the city payroll and, by law, the Superintendent and the Commissioner of the Department of Public Works must be on the committee. "One of the 11 is from the Mayor's office, which I feel is important in order for the mayor to be kept informed by his staff on the process and progress of the commission."

"Five of the 11 happen to be principals from Point Webster Middle School, Central Middle School, Sterling Middle School, Quincy High School, and the director of the Center for Technical Education, one of which is also a member of the Park

Department Board.

"That leaves two members of the 11 on the city payroll: a teacher and a dean from Quincy High School who is also a parent of children who will be attending the new Quincy High School. There are five elected officials also on the Commission and, out of the five, only one is on the city payroll."

"By law, there must be at least one member of the Quincy School Committee and, since one of them is the chairman, it would make sense to add at least one more. I chose to add two more, one of which is the chairman of the Building Needs Subcommittee of the School Committee."

"There are also two city councillors. I feel that it is imperative to have city councillors on the Commission because, ultimately, they will need to vote on the bond issues to build the new high school and should be aware of the process and issues."

"The remaining six members are parents of children who have are currently in elementary school. These children live in areas where their district high school will be the new Quincy High School and the decision of the Commission will have a direct effect on them."

"Regarding comments about Central Middle School, the Commission's responsibility is to find a new site to build a new Quincy High School. The resolve is clear: there is no mention of discussing Central Middle School."

"There are several reasons why moving/rebuilding Quincy High School has been decided. Although the needs of the building are not specifically mentioned in Quincy High School's 2000 accreditation report, the accreditation committee knew we were building a new high school and renovating the building for a new Central Middle School. Therefore, the need to discuss the extensive building needs were unnecessary."

"An issue of the size of the building was brought up during the open forum last week. The building will not be too big due to the fact that the Quincy Public School's administration offices will be located in the same building."

"In addition, the Building Needs Task Force has stated that they will not disrupt the education of the children by working around them. A complete renovation requires all plumbing, electrical wiring, etc. to be replaced as one job — not by piece meal. To do otherwise would be extremely difficult, cause potential serious problems in the future, and would be cost prohibitive."

"In addition, where would we place the children while we renovate the high school to Central Middle School? The previous task force answered that question. They looked at several ideas and the least disruptive to students, faculty, and staff is the current plan."

"The comment that the current high school is built for 3,100 students is false. The building capacity of the high school is 3,100. This means that you could fit 3,100 people in the building. To do so, you would have to fill the cafeteria, gym, library, media center, classrooms, administrative offices, etc."

"There is a difference between building capacity and educational capacity. Educational capacity is the amount of classroom space available and the amount of students in each class. The school committee has made it a priority to keep class size under 30 students. The 1,400 number is the educational capacity of the new building and not the building capacity."

"The comment on who owns the commercial real estate abutting Central Middle School, again, is not the role to be determined by the Commission. Our focus is finding a new site for building Quincy High."

"What we will use the Central (Middle School) location for has been discussed and several ideas have been presented. One idea is to build an early childhood center with full-day kindergarten; others are to build quality programs in the city to reduce the costs of outside placements of our special populations which continue to grow."

"I believe that when information is provided to the citizens of Quincy, they should receive all the facts and not the assumptions of a few. I have made it a priority to make all meetings open to the public and have kept the public informed through print media and radio."

"I feel the commission is doing a terrific job. It is not an easy task and I truly appreciate the time and effort the members are putting in to find the best solution."

"As chairman of this Commission, I was given a charge to find a location to build a new Quincy High School and that is what I will do."

The Quincy High School Siting Commission meets Tuesday nights from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Parker Suite of Quincy High School and meetings are open to the public.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

After losing many battles, but winning a war, George Washington hoped to retire from public life to his beautiful and beloved home on the banks of the Potomac.

His countrymen, however, needed George Washington in peace even more than in war. They called upon him to lead their infant republic forward.

How Washington responded to the summons is described in his Inaugural Address. In an eloquent passage, the first President of the United States gave his countrymen of that day and of our own day a responsibility which should always guide Americans: "The preservation of the sacred fire of liberty and destiny of the republican model of government are justly considered as deeply and finally staked on the experiment entrusted to the hands of the American people."

We Americans have preserved this heritage; its future rests in our hands today, as surely as when the Father of our Country gave his trust to those who heard him on April 30, 1789. We, like Washington, are summoned by our country to preserve "the sacred fire of liberty."

Benjamin E. Neill, 86

Marine Artist And Nature Enthusiast;
Quincy High School Track Star

A memorial service will be held at a later date for Benjamin Earl Neill, 86, of Sandwich, formerly of Quincy, a marine artist and nature enthusiast who died Sunday at home after a long illness.

Born and raised in Quincy, he lived in Braintree for 20 years before moving to Sandwich 32 years ago.

He was a graduate of Quincy High School, where he was a track star, and attended several art schools, including Massachusetts College of Art.

He began his career as a commercial artist. He focused on illustrating men's fashion for 10 years before joining the former Boston Herald Traveler as a staff artist, a position he held for 30 years.

When the newspaper was sold, Mr. Neill began painting fishing schooners and sailing vessels, drawing inspiration from the New England coast. His works were shown in several marine art exhibits.

Several of his paintings hang in prestigious galleries throughout the country and appear in books on marine art.

He enjoyed researching the history and details of the vessels in his paintings, and took an active interest in fishing, hunting and wildlife.

Mr. Neill was a member of First Church of Christ.

He was a member of the American Society of Marine Artists and International Society of Marine Painters.

He is survived by his wife, Marion Elizabeth Neill; two sons, Arthur W. Neill of Sandwich and Robert K. Neill of Holbrook; a sister, Charlotte Steen of Bridgewater; and five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. He also was father of the late Alan B. Neill.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Nickerson-Bourne Funeral Home in Sandwich.

Donations may be made to Hospice and Palliative Care of Cape Cod Inc., 923 Route 6A, Yarmouthport, MA 02675.

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Lofty Oaks Affiliation

Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall. This program is part of a large endeavor to restore the landscape and environment with the eternal beauty of living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by Michelle and John J. Lydon, Jr. of the Lydon Funeral Home. When a certified nurseryman has planted the tree, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

Dale Earnhardt Condolence

Register Book At

Deware Funeral Home

The Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Wollaston, has a register book available to those who wish to sign it along with their condolences for the family of Dale Earnhardt.

Earnhardt, a NASCAR legend, was killed Sunday when he crashed in the Turn 4 wall during the final lap of the Daytona 500.

Those wishing to sign the book may do so today (Thursday) and Friday between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. The book will then be sent to the family.

Earnhardt, a seven-time Winston Cup winner, suffered basal skull fractures when the front of his black No. 3 Chevrolet hit the speedway wall at about 180 mph.

Scott Deware, president of the Deware Family Funeral Home and an auto racing professional, said he and Earnhardt had a "racetrack relationship." Three weeks ago, Deware and Earnhardt competed in the Rolex 24 at Daytona endurance challenge.

Deware first met Earnhardt when the two worked in 1993. He saw and talked with the 49-year-old stock car champion throughout the ensuing years.

Wollaston Congregational

Rev. Elden D.J. Zuern will deliver the message at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave.

COOL R'N'NING

If your vehicle's engine has aluminum cylinder heads, you have all the more reason to have the vehicle's cooling system inspected on an annual basis. Aluminum heads are more vulnerable to damage from overheating than the traditional cast iron type. A major repair expense is involved in the event that excessive heat warps the temperature-sensitive heads. And the problem can come on with little warning. Most commonly, over heating develops when there is a leak in the coolant system. In other cases, a sticking thermostat may be to blame. If so, it may prevent coolant from circulating through the engine. With all this in mind, it is best to avert costly repairs with an inspection.

Regularly scheduled maintenance, including the cooling system, can greatly extend the life of your car, van or truck. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every system in your vehicle. Our friendly, professional, ASE Certified service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. Give us a try. We'll earn your trust! Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon-Fri 8am-9pm, Sat 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: An overheated engine is the most common reason for mechanical breakdown that interrupts vacation travel.

FurnitureFan.com Teams Up With Devine & Pearson

Devine & Pearson Public Relations, 300 Congress St., Quincy, has been selected as agency of record for on-line powerhouse FurnitureFan.com, the largest search engine available to shoppers browsing for furniture retailers and manufacturers in their local areas.

FurnitureFan.com is a free, on-line service for consumers that works directly with local stores and manufacturers to create virtual showrooms where consumers can "pre-shop" their neighborhood stores for furniture and accessories before getting into their cars.

"FurnitureFan's progressive approach to on-line shopping is an exciting concept... one that D&P is looking forward to introducing to a whole new audience of consumers," said Joe Burniecka, managing director of D&P.

D&P will provide strategic communications and public relations services to support and expand FurnitureFan's growth in the virtual marketplace.

Future plans for FurnitureFan include the introduction of an innovative kiosk program that allows shoppers in the retail brick-and-mortar partner showrooms to log on in-store and view the entire on-line catalog in addition to what is available on the showroom floor.

Liquor, Entertainment License For Quarry Hills Clubhouse

By CRAIG SALTERS

With construction of the three-story, 44,000 square-foot Quarry Hills Clubhouse and Function Facility set to begin by June, Quarry Hills Associates Tuesday received both the common victualer/all-alcoholic license and the entertainment license for the facility.

The building of the golf course itself is on schedule, project managers say, and will open by the spring or early summer of 2002.

By unanimous voice vote, the five-member License Board granted both licenses pending successful completion of the clubhouse according to specifications and issuance of an occupancy permit.

"This seems to be the final plan which will be implemented," said Chairman Joseph Shea, explaining that the board had been aware of the application for some time. "We're now ready to take this application."

Will Devote Full-Time As Register Of Deeds Harold Won't Run For Re-Election

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Paul Harold definitely will not seek re-election to the City Council this fall, a decision expected to trigger a scramble for his seat and possibly open up a ward seat or two.

With three ward councillors already facing challengers, this could be the biggest and most momentous city council election in recent times.

Harold declined to confirm that he will not seek re-election.

"I'll be making a statement in a week or two," he said.

But those close to him say he has definitely decided not to run again.

They say he wants to focus on his new duties as Norfolk County Register of Deeds to which he was elected last November.

A number of potential candidates have been waiting in the wings for Harold's will-he-or-won't-he-run decision.

Ward 4's Michael D'Amico has been considered a possible candidate for the Harold seat but seems, to warm up to it one day and cool off on another, and then warm up again.

D'AMICO

There's speculation that Ward 5's Steve Durkin might take a shot at it although at the moment he looks more like a candidate for re-election.

Both D'Amico and Durkin face re-election challenges from Bryan Connolly and James Mullaney.

Ward 6's Joseph Newton also has a challenger in his former opponent, Maryann Mahony. But he is not interested in an at-large run.

PAUL HAROLD

Ward 2's Dan Raymondi is also being mentioned but he really doesn't need an at-large seat as a forum on the way to a future mayoral bid. Although a ward councillor, Raymondi has a natural knack for drawing city-wide attention with both ward and city-wide issues.

Two definites appear to be John Keenan and Joseph Finn.

Keenan, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, is leaving that post to become Financial Coordinator to the Norfolk County Ad-

Burgin Pkwy. Crossing Guard Topic Of Durkin Meeting

Ward 5 City Councillor Stephen Durkin has organized a meeting at 7 p.m. tonight (Thursday) at the Thomas Crane Public Library between Central Middle School parents and a representative from the Quincy Police Department.

The meeting will address parent requests that a crossing guard be posted at some point along Burgin Parkway to assist children on their way to and from school.

The requests follow an accident last month in which a student was struck by a vehicle on his way to school.

Durkin encouraged all parents who wish to share their safety concerns to attend the meeting.

For more information, residents can call (617) 773-5120.

Joseph Newton Chairman Of Redistricting Committee

Ward 6 City Councillor Joseph Newton has been appointed chairman of the council's Redistricting Committee by Council President Paul Harold.

The committee was formed last month to deal with the redistricting of the city's ward and precinct lines, which is mandated every 10 years and is based on figures from the 2000 Federal Census.

"It's an exciting opportunity," Newton said. "We will be setting the political boundaries of the city for the next 10 years."

Newton, who is on the committee with City Clerk Joseph Shea and the city's Board of Registrars, said the next step in the process would be to schedule a public hearing on the matter after census figures are received via the state sometime in April.

Some changes were expected in Wards 4 and 6, Newton said, because wards must be relatively equal in population -- given the "one man-one vote" rule -- and both wards had experienced the most growth since the 1990 Federal Census.

"Crown Colony (Ward 4) and Marina Bay (Ward 6) have seen dramatic growth over the last 10 years," Newton said, predicting the wards might lose a street along their borders.

The committee will also consider reducing the number of precincts in the city from 30 to 24, meaning that each of the city's six wards would have four, not five, precincts.

The precinct reduction, which was suggested by the state, would be evaluated with local polling areas in mind, Newton said.

"People should vote close to their homes and it should be accessible," Newton said. "What we want is to come up with the best solution."

By law, Newton added, the city must work with natural boundaries such as rivers when redistricting and cannot break up longstanding neighborhoods, such as Germantown or Houghs Neck.

The re-aligned precincts and wards will affect elections for state representative in 2002 but will not affect city elections until 2003.

The process of redistricting must be completed and approved by the state on or before August 25.

At an update on the matter Feb. 5 before the City Council, Shea said that, given the city's above-average census return rates, the city could top the 90,000 population mark.

Harold Won't Seek Re-Election

visory Board. He has said he would run at-large if he got the county post and if Harold did not seek re-election.

(A farewell party for Keenan is planned for Friday, March 9 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the second floor conference room at City Hall.)

Finn, former executive director of Father Bill's Place, is already out campaigning. He made a strong showing in his first run in 1999 up against four political veterans: at-large incumbents Tim Cahill, Frank McCauley and Harold, and Peter Kolson who gave up his Ward 1 seat to run at-large.

FINN

KOLSON

KELLY

Three former councillors--Michael Cheney, Leo Kelly and Kolson are also seen as interested.

Also being mentioned are Brian McNamee who ran for the Ward 6 seat and Rosemary Wahlberg, former long-time executive director of the Quincy Community Action Program.

MCNAMEE

WAHLBERG

Not all of them will actually run, of course. But probably enough to make it an interesting election year.

Harold has a few things on his plate he wants to give priority to as the Register of Deeds: possibly opening a satellite office in Quincy or Braintree, expanding on-line capabilities and renovating the registry building.

Then there's the future of Norfolk County itself, one of the few still in business. The Registry of Deeds plays a major role through its collected fees in financing the county government.

A number of counties have bitten the financial dust and Bristol is expected to follow soon.

Harold wants to keep his office modernized and efficient to in turn help keep the county financially strong and healthy.

Harold has had two careers in the city council. First elected in 1975, he resigned in 1979 after being elected state senator to devote full-time to the latter post. He served 14 years on Beacon Hill, giving up the Senate seat in 1992 in an unsuccessful bid for Congress. He then returned to the council and is now in the final year of his third and final term.

The fact he is stepping down from the council doesn't necessarily mean "The End" to his local political career, friends insist.

He's only 52 they point out and still young enough that somewhere down the road he might yet make that run for mayor so many wanted him to do.

NOW, ARE THERE any more potential council at-large candidates mulling a run? Well, how about Plumbing Inspector Ralph Maher.

Maher, who likes to keep people guessing and wondering, says he is thinking about running.

"I'm serious," he insists. "I'm already talking with supporters."

Maher says he is also talking with his attorney to check on whether he could serve in the council without a conflict with his job as plumbing inspector.

"I think I would be eligible to serve," he says. "I could give my salary as a councillor ($17,500) to an unwed mothers' group or Father Bill's Place. And not vote on matters pertaining to my job."

That should cause a bit of a stir along the political front.

SPEAKING OF ELECTIONS, Quincy's Isadore "Izzy" Zack must be a record holder of sorts.

He was just elected again -- for the 52nd time -- as secretary of the Military Intelligence Association of New England. And has also served a term as president.

MAINE is an organization of World War II veterans with intelligence service in the Army and Navy.

Izzy was a reporter and a good one with both the old Quincy Ledger and the now long-defunct Quincy News. After the war, he served 34 years with the Anti-Defamation League.

Izzy, who now lives on Puritan Drive, grew up in Quincy Point. And you're a young oldtimer if you can remember Zack's clothing store on Washington St. near Chubbuck St. run by his mother.

FUN TIME: Atty. Tom Williams is hosting a Pre-St. Patrick's Day blast Tuesday, March 13, 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. at The Fours, Cottage Ave. Featuring the Donnie Curtin Irish Band.

READERS FORUM

Affordable Housing Shortage Truly A Crisis

Editor, The Quincy Sun: Quincy is currently experiencing an affordable housing shortage. I consider the shortage so bad, it is truly a crisis. As Rev. Sheldon Bennett of the United First Parish Church said, "The middle class as well as lower incomes are really hurting."

Ward 1 Councillor Greg Hanley and Mayor James Sheets are proposing an ordinance requiring developers to set aside at least 10 percent of the housing they build as affordable (United Front For Affordable Housing, The Quincy Sun, Feb. 15).

On Feb. 12, Quincy area residents from the local chapter of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization showed up in large numbers at City Hall as the City Council's Housing Committee chaired by Hanley discussed how to attack this housing crisis growing by the day.

In 1984, home prices here were under $130,000. You could still find fixer-uppers for around $90,000. Rents for two-bedroom apartments were averaging around $600 a month. Today, families are being chased out of the city as home prices have more than doubled and the average two-bedroom apartment is going for a grand a month.

At Father Bill's Place, more than 40 percent of the residents are holding down full-time jobs, but how can individuals and especially families afford Quincy monthly rents of a $1,000 or more? Everyday moving vans are taking Quincy residents to new homes elsewhere. People born and raised in Quincy are being pushed out.

The so-called inclusionary zoning ordinance being drafted by the City Council is but a tiny first step. I'm not too sure I like the idea of developers being able to throw money into an affordable housing trust fund. No one lives in a trust. Rev. Bill Mullin of St. John's Church is right, "We need a stronger ordinance so developers won't be able to wiggle out of it."

I'm also not sure I like the idea of the city controlling the trust fund either. Actions speak louder than words or trust funds. All the ordinances in the world are useless if we don't increase affordable housing units in the city. It will all be for show.

When there is only about 119 acres of developable land left in the city, I don't have the same faith that Rev. Bennett or Father Mullin hold that the housing crisis can be tackled head-on.

I wish the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization would tell the city loud and clear that City Hall remains a part of the problem rather than the solution when it goes AWOL on affordable housing. When Developer Dean Stratouly and City Hall were fighting over the size of Highpoint, Stratouly threatened to build 400 subsidized units up there. City Hall seemingly backed down because it apparently thought 400 affordable units would have a negative impact on nearby schools such as Lincoln Hancock and Sterling.

Then when the city gets its hands on some prime housing over at the old Squantum Air Base, it pushes for market rent elderly housing. Wouldn't Naval Terrace have made great affordable homes for working-class families and wouldn't Squantum Gardens have been great apartments for the working class looking for affordable rents?

The city had a chance to do something and did little to ease the crunch of affordable housing shortages. Affordable housing gets shut out again. Mayor James Sheets talks about affordable housing, but under his watch we continue to build more and more luxury apartments and condo projects. In a city with very little land left to build on, is it any surprise to hear Councillor Hanley say, "There's a lot for sale in Houghs Neck for $300,000. Just the lot. How can people afford that?"

Leaders of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization support the Hanley ordinance strategy and so do I, but I still wonder if it isn't all just a little too late to help. The ordinance may slow things down but the tide keeps getting higher and higher.

When the city seemingly and reportedly tells a developer they don't want subsidized housing at Highpoint because it may have to build more classrooms, when a city takes land it bought for a dollar and turns units into market-rate ones and when the city then cries about a lack of affordable housing for working people, don't you just want to scream?

Close Exam Of Ration Book Applications

By PAUL HAROLD

The Quincy rationing board reported that in accordance with directives from Washington, close scrutiny would be made of applications for replacement food ration books.

The national Office of Price Administration alerted local ration boards of potentially fraudulent claims because of the larger than usual requests for new books. In most cases the books presented were missing the red stamps.

In Quincy, there were 35 applications filed in two days, not an unusually high number.

MORE WORKERS NEEDED AT FORE RIVER

Fore River shipyard's general manager William Collins told the 500 members of the Fore River Graduate Apprentice Association that in the next two years 2,000 more workers would be needed at the yard. The Bethlehem plant currently employed 20,000 in Quincy, with an additional work force at their Hingham yard.

Collins said that in the post war era, quality and cost would be the most important measures in determining the success of a shipyard. He rated the quality of Quincy at 100 percent compared to 80 percent for Newport News and 60 percent for the New York shipyard.

General Superintendent John Wiseman thanked the graduate apprentices for the role they played in the war bond and Red Cross fund-raising campaigns.

HIGH REPORT OF MAPS

Dr. Richard Ash, the city's health commissioner, told city officials that for the second month in a row cases of mumps topped the list of reportable diseases. There were 122 cases city-wide, with 79 reported in Ward 1.

Cases of chickenpox showed a sharp decline from the same month last year, falling from 302 cases to only 12.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Wrapped Meat Loaf

Meat loaf has always been our favorite, maybe because it depicts homestyle and comfort food. Served with mashed potatoes and creamed peas, it's always been a family staple.

But always trying to find another way to present or prepare food, I wrapped this loaf with dough. A delicious difference. (I used to make the dough, but now the store bought is very good.) You can do either. And you can either expand the recipe or reduce it.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

Wrapped Meat Loaf

1-1/2 pounds ground meat
2 eggs
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
2 slices bread (soaked) any favorite herb (I use a combination of basil, parsley and oregano.)

2-3 tablespoons ketchup (optional)

1/4 cup parmesan or romano cheese.

salt and pepper to taste

Mix all ingredients together until well blended so you can handle it. Form a roll out of the meat mixture. Roll out the dough to about 1/2 inch thick. Wrap it around the meat and brush top with an egg wash (one egg with a smidgen of water mixed)

Bake until dough is lightly browned on top. You'll love how it looks and taste. (PS there are so many ingredients one can use in making a meat loaf...so be creative and add anything you prefer.)

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!

PACKING FOR A CRUISE

Packing for a cruise can be confusing when you see the ship's itinerary with its array of formal, semi-formal and casual activities. During the day, choose comfortable clothes, including shorts, short-sleeved shirts, lightweight pants, a sweater, bathing suit and cover-up. Non-skid shoes are a good idea on deck and comfortable walking shoes will keep you moving while docked in the various ports of call. For evening, casual means sport shirts and slacks for men and sundresses or skirts for women. For semi-formal evenings, men will wear jackets and ties and women will choose dresses or pantsuits. Formal evenings mean cocktail dresses or evening gowns for women, suits and ties or tuxedos for men. Try to avoid over-packing. Taking a cruise is one of the best ways to enjoy a carefree vacation. You don't need to pack and unpack between hotels yet you get to visit different destinations, there are a variety of exciting activities and entertainment on board, and the dining opportunities are not to be believed. If you have chosen a cruise for your next adventure, come talk to our travel agents at PRIME TRAVEL and hear all about their experiences. We're located at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay, or call 617-472-3697.

P.S. Remember to bring an extra bag to tote home all of your souvenirs.

Want Special Commission To Resolve USS Salem Relocation, Finance Issues

A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun by the writers for publication.

James Sheets, Mayor
City of Quincy
City Hall
Quincy, MA 02169

RE: U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum (USS Salem) relocation

Dear Mr. Mayor:

As condo owners whose unit directly faces the water and thereby the property (pier) in question, we consider the proposed relocation of the museum to be both a risky and expensive venture.

The "temporary" (10-year) placement in front of some of the city's most expensive, tax paying real estate will increase traffic and safety problems in the area of the soon to be developed Squantum Point Park.

In the first mass public meeting of this potential move more serious questions were raised concerning its environmental impact, amounts of monies to be expended, and the judgment of attempting to place a Shipbuilding Museum outside the appropriate venue of our present shipyard.

Additional questions concerned the museum's current income, which is admittedly insufficient to maintain day-to-day operations. Will taxpayer funds be used to cover any shortfall, and does this non-supporting tourist attraction currently have access to city support from other public sources?

Please appoint a special commission of impartial citizens, technical professionals, and public officials to resolve these financial issues and to determine why the museum would not be a more viable entity at a berth at the Fore River Shipyard rather than at Marina Bay.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter. We look forward to your earliest reply.

Sincerely,
J. Kenneth and Sandra M. Taylor

Quincy, North Quincy Boys' Basketball At Its Very Best

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On Feb. 16, a tremendous high school boys basketball game was played between North Quincy (58) and visiting Quincy (55). It was high school basketball at its very best. The game came down to the final seconds with a Quincy shot just missing at the buzzer to tie the game.

Years ago, Jim McKay liked to host Wide World of Sports and in its opening credits there were two clips with McKay saying, "The thrill of victory, the agony of defeat." All you had to do on this Friday night was look down each end of the court and see "the thrill of victory, the agony of defeat."

Kids playing their hearts out, fans cheering their teams on, just a tremendous night of high school basketball. So kudos and praise to the players, the coaching staffs, the administrators and also the fans of both schools on a night of heart stopping, pulsating basketball.

The ironic part of this night was just one month ago the same scenario was being played out. But this time

Quincy pulled out a dramatic two-point overtime win, with a North Quincy shot rolling out at the buzzer. In less than a month apart, these two teams played basketball with utmost of intensity, spirit and a will to win that you don't see much any more.

So congratulations to the two schools for putting on such a great display of high school basketball that will be remembered for a long time to come.

Three Cheers For John Ashcroft

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Contrary to the liberals huffalaboo about John Ashcroft, in his pre-confirmation debates, in the Press and in the Senate, he is not what the liberals say he is.

Above all, he is not a racist. To oppose a candidate for an office of justice, who happens to be black as Ronnie White was, does not follow that Ashcroft is a racist. He supported other candidates for the office of justice, who happened to have been black.

They also say he is a racist because he opposes desegregation. Wrong again. If the goal of desegregation is integration, desegregation is not the route to take. Education is.

Governor George Wallace of Alabama is famous for his statement: "Segregation now, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever!" Yet, it was Wallace, I am told, who instituted the first state schools for the blacks in Alabama. Those schools, quality-wise, were better than any schools the other American governors instituted for education of the blacks. Mere elbow rubbing with whites does not mean education for the blacks.

The liberals also claim Ashcroft is against women's rights. Ashcroft is for the women's rights to pursue any education of their dreams and to be paid equally well as men for the same work they do.

But Ashcroft is not for abortion. It does not mean he is against women's rights. He is against women's rights to hire skillful artisans, knowledgeable in human anatomy, to kill their yet-to-be-born babies for money. If it is true, as the science of biology claims as well as the Roman Catholic Church, that life begins at conception, abortion is a crime de facto, if not de jure as well.

To say a woman has the right to control her body, does not mean she has the right to kill her unborn baby. An unborn baby is not woman's body. It is another human body in the first stages of development. Ashcroft is in line with 200 years of American history, the American Founding Fathers, 40 American Presidents and with American philosophy of life.

Abortion became legal in America less than 30 years ago. Abortion is out of step with America at its noblest and its best.

I am inclined to be somewhat sympathetic with those who are for gun control. Their argument for it is that guns end up in the hands of criminals and children. It is amazing that the same people who are for gun control because of concern for children are also for abortion.

I do not understand how Senators Hillary Clinton, John Kerry, Edward Kennedy and others pretend that they are for children, their education and health care, when they approve their extermination before they are born. The abortion doctors approve and perform yet-to-be-born children's exterminations, but they are very upset when pro-life extremists threaten their lives.

Long live life, every life no matter how conceived.

Three cheers for John Ashcroft.

Park, Recreation Board Opposes New QHS In Park System

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

For the past four years I have had the distinct pleasure of serving as the Chairman of Quincy's Park and Recreation Board. I believe that the City's inventory of parks and playgrounds is as good as it has ever been in our City's history. However, I believe that the integrity of our entire park system stands threatened by the current School Siting Committee's persistent mentions of siting a new school within our park system.

At the December 2000 meeting of the Quincy Park and Recreation Board, the Board approved a resolve to oppose any efforts to site school buildings within our park system. The Board chose to act early to help the School Siting Committee eliminate any conflicts later on in the process; conflicts that might jeopardize the 90 percent reimbursement that Quincy may receive.

It is with a certain degree of dismay that I read there are multiple park sites that continue to be handled about by the Siting Committee. After the Park and Recreation Board voted, without any opposition, to oppose such action on land that we have jurisdiction over, I am surprised that the Siting Committee would act oblivious to this fact. The Siting Committee's choice to ignore the protections afforded to municipal parkland by State Law, the specific Deeds of Land of each parcel, and the Park Board's opposition could result in a protracted dispute over the disposition of municipal parkland. This is an error in judgment by the Siting Committee that could potentially jeopardize Quincy's unique and extremely fortuitous opportunity to receive a 90 percent State reimbursement for school construction.

As chairman of the Park and Recreation Board, I remain steadfast by our original vote to oppose a park location for siting a new school.

As a parent with a child that will someday attend Quincy High School, I feel as equally resolved. It is my hope that the School Siting Committee sees the wisdom in choosing a viable alternative to parkland in the interests of all parties involved.

Quincy And The Braintree Dam

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Paul Harold's Quincy Yesterdays is a feature of your excellent newspaper that I really enjoy, and the Feb. 8, 2001 issue was of special interest.

The portion titled "McIntyre Pushes Transfer of Dam to Braintree" is what fascinated me as at the time I was the chairman of the Braintree Dam Committee, appointed by the late Braintree Moderator, John Canavan, years before.

After these years of research and many discussions, an agreement was reached with Quincy to return the 64 acres containing the dam to Braintree to be used only for recreational purposes. Braintree had sold the property in 1887 to the Quincy Water Company for supplying water to the city.

Quincy Councillor John Quin supported the plan but wisely wanted to transfer deed to include that the property would revert back to Quincy if Braintree used it for purposes other than recreation.

This clause infuriated some Braintree officials as the South Shore Plaza was in the works at the time, and on a technicality all members of the Braintree Dam Committee were dismissed by the then Braintree Town Moderator Mr. Canavan having ended in the meantime.

A replacement "Braintree Dam Committee" was appointed to replace us, with the predictable result the entire transfer deed as this group took no action as far as I know. A shame John Canavan did not live a bit longer.

USS Salem Museum Asset To City

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In response to your recent article about the movement of the US Naval Shipbuilding Museum to Squantum Point Park, I believe that not all sides to the issue are being equally expressed.

While there is no doubt that the museum has had anything but smooth sailing in its short existence, it is very unfair to start throwing stones at it when you don't have all the facts on hand.

The purpose of the USS Salem and the museum is to preserve for all time the rich history and contributions that Quincy residents have made during a century of shipbuilding. I have not yet met any longtime resident of the city or the surrounding area that did not know someone or had a family member that was employed at the Fore River Shipyard or worked at or operated a business that benefited from the shipyard's existence.

The impact of the Yard on the Massachusetts economy and families for 100 years has never been shown. The stories of the many thousands of people that worked their entire lives, in good times and bad, have never been collected for posterity. In short, a very valuable piece of our history is left unaccounted for.

Such an undertaking does not happen overnight. It takes years. The museum does not enjoy the support of deep pocket benefactors but must rely on the good will of the local community for its being while we strive to create a museum that all can be proud of. The physical condition of our largest artifact, the USS Salem, is slowly improving. The tiny volunteer staff has put thousands of man-days into her restoration and rehabilitation.

Our programs that have taken several years to put together are just now starting up and will continue to grow in the coming years. We have an international reputation proven by all the foreign visitors that come to see us as well as from all 50 states. They come and not only visit the museum, but they also will drop in at the Adams historical site and spend their money in local businesses. And all this is just the beginning.

It took over 100 years for the USS Constitution to be recognized as the icon she is. While we are not putting the USS Salem in the same historical category, she and the museum are carving out their own place. Someday, visitors will come to Quincy and learn about the men and women that built over 600 naval vessels and hundreds more of commercial ships that sailed the world oceans. Learn the history of the vessels themselves and go away with a little more appreciation of contributions that Quincy made to the history of our country.

I will let others address the specific issues recently raised. The museum is an asset to the community and we make good neighbors.

Ward 1 Democrats To Caucus Saturday

Registered Democrats in Ward 1 will hold a caucus Saturday at 1 p.m. at 1193 Sea St. to elect 11 delegates and six alternates to the Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

The convention will be held Saturday, June 2 at the Springfield Civic Center in Springfield.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Ward 1. Candidates for delegate and alternate must consent to nomination in writing. All candidates may make a two-minute statement and may distribute materials on their behalf. All ballots will be written and secret.

Those registered Democrats unable to attend may be considered for delegate and alternate by two-thirds of those present and voting. Those not elected as delegate and alternate may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic State Party, 129 Portland St., Boston 02114 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

For more information, contact War 1 Chairman Michael Berry at 479-2787 or the Democratic State Committee at (617) 742-6770.

Applications Available For Rotary Scholarships

Tom Galvin, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Quincy Rotary Scholarship Fund, announces the trustees have allocated scholarship funds to be awarded to successful applicants from the Quincy Public School's senior graduating class of June, 2001.

Applicants must be residents of Quincy who are committed to continuing their education at the post-secondary technical, college or university level, as well as having achieved sufficient academic success to have distinguished themselves in the Quincy Public Schools.

Consistent with the ideals and objectives of Rotary International, applicants must also account for how they have conducted themselves in a high ethical manner and applied the ideal of service and goodwill to family, school and community life.

Applications are available in the Guidance Department office at both North Quincy and Quincy High Schools. Completed applications must be submitted by March 30.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

FLOURIDE FACTS

Families that rely on bottled, instead of tap, water for drinking should assess their children's need for fluoride supplements. According to a recent survey of bottled water, only five percent of the water met recommended fluoride levels. By contrast, in Cleveland, where the survey was conducted, all samples of the city's tap water that were tested met fluoride standards. On the basis of this survey, it is recommended that parents make sure their children's fluoride needs are being met if they drink bottled water. This determination should be made in consultation with the dentist. If children get too much fluoride, it can lead to tooth discoloration. Too little can make teeth more susceptible to decay.

Could you or your child benefit from fluoride supplements? We provide quality, comprehensive dental care for both children and adults and we're always happy to discuss improving your smile, and thus, your total feeling of self-esteem. Please call us at 617-479-6220 and find out if fluoride supplements could be part of your solution. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are dedicated to saving and restoring your teeth and help you look your best. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Fluoride is primarily responsible for the widespread decrease in tooth decay over the past few decades in this country.

Liquor, Entertainment License For Quarry Hills Clubhouse

off Ricciutti Drive — will boast a 400-seat function hall and lobby on the first floor and a restaurant on the second floor. It will also feature a 417-space parking lot.

Once built, the function facility will be one of the biggest in the city, said QHA Project Manager and former Mayor Walter Hannon.

"We're only 15 months away (from opening)," said Hannon, who estimated that the clubhouse itself would take 10 to 11 months of construction time.

For the purposes of the license, Walter Hannon III will serve as manager of the clubhouse. Upon completion, management of the clubhouse will be transferred to a professional foodservice company.

Although project managers are still hopeful that all 27 holes of the golf course will be ready by opening day, the course could open with 18 holes ready in addition to the clubhouse and driving range.

Hannon emphasized that the golf course would be a "daily-fee" public course and that he personally was opposed to membership at Quarry Hills.

"We hope not," responded Hannon when the question of membership was posed. "If we're going to have a public course, we shouldn't have membership."

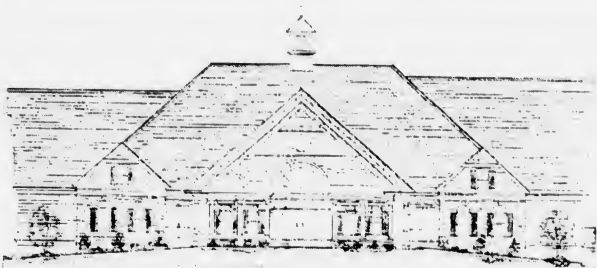

Shea, who said he considered the decade-long process of transforming landfills into a 27-hole golf course "pretty amazing," stated that it was not unusual for the License Board to issue liquor or other licenses to establishments prior to construction, provided that specific plans were presented. Similar licenses, Shea said, had been granted to the 99 Restaurant on Newport Ave. and the proposed Applebee's Restaurant in North Quincy.

The Quarry Hills Golf Course Project represents a unique partnership between city and state government and private business whereby more than 11 million tons of dirt from the Central Artery Project are being used to fill landfill property in West Quincy.

Quarry Hills Associates, which is financing the project from "tipping fees" paid by the Massachusetts Highway Department, has signed a 50-year lease with the city, which is entitled to a percentage of the revenue from the course as well as ballfields built and maintained by Quarry Hills Associates.

After the 50-year lease, ownership of the golf course, clubhouse, and ballfields revert back to the city.

THE QUARRY HILLS CLUBHOUSE, construction for which will begin this summer, will be a three-story, 44,000 square-foot facility with a 417-space parking lot and a function room capable of seating 400 people. Quarry Hills Associates, developers of the 27-hole public golf course project in West Quincy, received liquor and entertainment licenses for the clubhouse Tuesday.

Coffee Break Cafe Serves Quality Customer Service

By CRAIG SALTERS

Realistically, not every customer visiting the Coffee Break Cafe will be as happy as the man who purchased a $100,000 winning lottery ticket there last year.

But for many other customers, the experience is a pleasant surprise. Donald Ormond, 50, of Quincy, has been a customer since the cafe opened in 1996.

"We take pride in what we do," said Ormond. "Getting such attention to detail as hand stirred drinks, steamed milk for five different flavors of cocoa, and a much heeded customer suggestion box. 'We'll do whatever it takes to make the customer happy.'"

This old-fashioned focus on the customer seems to be working, as the Coffee Break Cafe — with locations on Old Colony Ave. in Wollaston and the Parkway in Quincy Center — celebrates its fifth anniversary in March with its traditional month-long thank you to customers.

The month of March at both cafes will feature trivia days, prizes, and a calendar of coupons offering discounts on its assortment of coffees, teas, iced and frozen drinks, bagels, pastries, and muffins.

"This is our favorite time of the year," said Ormond, who added that preliminary planning for a third Coffee Break Cafe is under way due to the success of the first two.

Coffee Break Cafe began five years ago in Wollaston, said Jennifer Ormond, when the three future owners, all restaurant workers in the local area, became disgruntled with the lack of service and quality of food in the area.

Sun Spotlight

"We just got sick of bad service and bad coffee," recalls Ormond. "People have gotten so used to bad service that they just don't realize it anymore, but there wasn't a place that sold good coffee which also provided things like lottery, newspapers, and cigarettes."

"Finally, we just said, 'Why don't we stop complaining and do something about it?'"

Husband Donald Ormond agrees. "We take our time and our customers appreciate it," he said. "We want your first sip and your last sip to be perfect, and we want your drink to taste the same every time you order it."

There's no "typical" Coffee Break customer, said Ormond — noting the high school students, Eastern Nazarene College students, commuters, and seniors who visit the coffee shops, sometimes two or three times a day — but the typical atmosphere, he said, is relaxed and friendly with couches and coffee tables at each location.

"We've gone through a lot of couches," joked Ormond, who joined his fellow owners in a disclaimer that, given their previous night schedules in the restaurant business, not one of the three had ever seen an episode of the television show Friends prior to opening shop.

The comfortable furniture and easy-going atmospheres of both, they insist, are just happy coincidences.

But what isn't a coincidence, the owners say, is the level of service expected from its 32-member staff, each of whom receives a page of instructions detailing how to treat Coffee Break customers.

"First and foremost, they need to be friendly and like dealing with customers," said Jennifer, adding that employees are taught such important details as greeting customers, maintaining eye contact, and dealing with each customer one-on-one.

"Customers can't say enough about our employees and that really makes us proud," added Erin. "We wouldn't be anywhere without our staff."

Pressed for details about their 17 varieties of gourmet coffees, their vanillachinos, or their "Oreo Brain Freezes," the three owners fall silent.

"Sorry, trade secret" said Donald with a smile.

Coffee Break Cafe is a member of the Wollaston Business Association and actively supports such organizations as the Quincy Crisis Center, Father Bill's Place, and the American Cancer Society.

Now non-smoking, they are located at 12 Old Colony Ave. in Wollaston and 77 Parkway, Quincy Center. Hours are 5:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays and 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekends.

'The Best Is Yet To Come' John Noonan Elected To 20th Term As Chairman Of Council On Aging

John Noonan was unanimously reelected to a 20th consecutive term as chairman of the Quincy Council on Aging at the recent annual meeting for the Board of Directors.

Noonan, originally was appointed to the Council on Aging 29 years ago by former Mayor Walter Hannon.

Other officers elected were John Molloy, vice chairman, and Mary Kay Bamford, secretary. Board members reappointed to new three-year terms by Mayor James Sheets were Tracy Wilson, Trudy Buckley, Alexander Farquhar and Mary Kay Bamford.

Other board members are Frank Kearns, Kathy Quirk, Dr. Joseph McDermott, Mary Vallier, John Chen, Gerard Weidmann. Ex-officio members are Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue; John Mather, executive director, Quincy Housing Authority; and Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The Quincy Council on Aging was established with the approval of the mayor and city council shortly after Congress passed the Older Americans Act (OAA). The purpose of the OAA was to provide assistance and funding to develop programs to improve the quality of life of elderly citizens, confidence and predicted that the "best is yet to come."

He recalled the Council on Aging was one of the first city agencies to take advantage of public access television. The program consisted of interviews with city officials and senior advocate officials on important issues of interest to Quincy seniors.

Noonan launched a program called "Cable Talk," which has become to longest running public service program on Quincy Community Television.

Noonan also received two national awards and five consecutive state awards for the "Senior Beat" program he hosted and co-produced, interviewing senior citizens on location.

In 1995 Noonan was appointed by Governor Weld to serve as an alternate delegate from Massachusetts to the White House Conference on Aging. As a result, the idea of a mini-conference for seniors of Quincy was conceived.

Mayor Sheets gave his approval. Together, the COA and the Commission on the Family hold a conference to stress the many services available in Quincy.

The daylong sixth annual Quincy Seniors Conference will be held Sept. 15 at Broad Meadows Middle School.

Noonan recalled when a single second hand vehicle served the transportation needs of the COA. Today there are 12 vans which transport seniors within the city and for medical transportation to 12 major Boston hospitals. There is not fee for seniors needing medical transportation.

The Meals on Wheels program is another senior service which grows each year as the senior population increases, he noted.

Noonan is a graduate of UMass/Boston Gerontology Institute and became a consultant to the Massachusetts Public Health Division of Elderly Health. He was involved in planning and implementing programs such as flu immunization, prostate cancer seminars, domestic violence and crime prevention.

In 1995 Mayor Sheets appointed him as the senior advocate representative on the Citizens Advisory Committee for the multi-million dollar Quincy Center Concourse.

He has appeared before the City Council on numerous occasions in support of legislation and ordinances to place a cap on rental charged at certain subsidized senior housing facilities, 20-mile safety zones in the vicinity of senior housing, and on legislation necessary to keep the Quincy Hospital from closing.

He urged senior citizens to attend rallies at the State House and to write their legislators when the Quincy Medical Center affiliation legislation was up for a vote.

Noonan has received a number of awards and recognitions: grand marshal for of appreciation for public service, Beechwood Community Center Citation for his Elder Life Leadership and several others.

Noonan and his wife, Arline, have two daughters, a son, nine grandchildren and three great-grandsons.

Mrs. Noonan has been a volunteer supervisor for 28 years for the American Red Cross Quincy office blood donor services.

"We have come a long way in the past 29 years but there is still much that needs to be done as we move into the new millennium," Noonan concluded.

Child Passenger Safety — What Do You Know?

Do you know what percentage of child safety seats are used incorrectly? Do you know when it's safe for a child to ride in a vehicle with only the lap and shoulder belts? What is the best child safety seat to buy?

Not knowing these answers can place a child passenger at higher risk than necessary, says AAA. Motor-vehicle crashes are the leading cause of death and injury for American children — ranking ahead of all other types of unintentional injuries and claiming more lives than any other childhood disease. That is why all 50 states and the District of Columbia have passed mandatory child safety seat usage laws.

All motor-vehicle occupants need to be protected from hitting the vehicles' interior in case of a sudden stop, swerve or crash. They also need to be restraining to prevent ejection from the vehicle itself. If unrestrained, infants and children are throw-around the vehicle like flying missiles. In a 30 mph crash, with a force equal to 30 times their own weight, a 10-pound infant at 30 mph equals 300 pounds of force.

When buying a child safety seat, remember to select one that you will use every time you transport your child. Choose a seat that fits your child, your vehicle and your budget, but don't base your selection of a child safety seat solely on price. The seat should fit your child's weight and height. Be sure to check the manufacturer's recommendations. Try installing the seat in your vehicle to be certain that it fits and can be tightly secured. Most stores will allow you to examine different models.

Types of Child Safety Seats

Infant-only Seats. These seats are designed for babies weighing up to 22 pounds, generally from 9 to 12 months of age. Infant safety seats should be installed to face the rear of the vehicle only and are secured by the vehicle's safety belt. Infants under one year of age must ride in a rear-facing position. Never install a rear-facing child safety seat in the front seat of a vehicle equipped with activated air bags.

Convertible. These seats are designed for use by infants and toddlers. They can be used in a rear-facing position for infants up to 22 pounds or in the forward-facing position for toddlers up to 40 pounds and about four years of age. Some convertible seats are designed to accommodate infants up to 35 pounds in a rear-facing position. Convertible seats are available in three basic styles: five-point harness, T-shield and tray shield. Typically, those equipped with a five-point harness system fit small infants best.

High-back, Belt-positioning Booster. These seats are intended for older children. The seat is used as a transition from a convertible seat to the adult safety belt. These booster seats offer the best upper body protection for children weighing 20-80 pounds. Before the child is 40 pounds and tall enough for the vehicle's lap and shoulder belts, these seats offer a five-point harness system to protect the upper body. High-back, belt-positioning boosters are also designed to help lap and shoulder belts fit better on children who are between 40 and 80 pounds. Booster seats should be used until the child properly fits the lap and shoulder belts. The average child should be able to fit in lap and shoulder belts correctly when they are approximately 4 foot, 5 inches in height and weight at least 80 pounds.

North Quincy's Pete Zoia Honored By City, State

By TOM HENSHAW
The city of his birth finally got around to honoring Pete Zoia last week after, lo, these many years.

But it was worth the wait.

Zoia, 84, possibly the only surviving member of the first North Quincy High School football team in 1933, was honored at the City Council meeting with Council and State Senate and House citations for his contributions to Raider football, youth football and the community.

For many years, it was traditional that Zoia, wearing his No. 20 football jersey, lead the North Quincy team on a lap around Veterans Memorial Stadium prior to the Thanksgiving Day game with rival Quincy High School.

He still does, only now he rides in a golf cart.

Seven of the 13 children born to Zoia and his late wife, Elaine, and countless grandchildren and great-grandchildren were at the Council meeting to hear the family patriarch lauded as "a noble gentleman who was an outstanding player, coach, role model and inspiration to the students of N.Q.H.S."

Councillor Patrick W. McDermott of Ward 3 was there to present the Council resolution citing Zoia as the "noble gentleman" and "a fine leader who achieved the greatest success in his pursuit of excellence in sportsmanship and life."

State Rep. Bruce J. Ayers presented a citation to Zoia from the House "in recognition of his dedicated service as NQHS assistant football coach, 1980-97, and his enduring loyalty to the Quincy Community."

Ayers also filled in for Sen. Michael Morrissey in presenting a Senate citation which read, "In recognition of his outstanding dedicated service to the NQHS football team."

Lou Ioanilli, principal of North Quincy High, gave him a Red Raider sweat shirt and Peter Chrisom, the football coach, had a North Quincy T-shirt for him.

Also in attendance were seven of the 13 Zoia children, five daughters, Janet Campbell, Beverly Gregory, Barbara Younie, Rhonda Nickley and Gail Ayoub, and two sons, Gregory Zoia and Dean Zoia.

Pete Zoia played football at North Quincy High School in 1933, 1934 and 1935. The first North Quincy team upset Quincy, 6-0. The second tied the Presidents, 0-0. The third team, captained by Zoia, also beat Quincy, 14-6.

Later, he played and coached for the semi-pro teams, the North Quincy Alumni, the President City

A RED RAIDERS jersey and shirt were presented to Pete Zoia by the NQHS delegation attending the tribute at the City Council meeting. From the left are Ryan Craig, assistant football coach, Principal Lou Ioanilli, Ken McPhee, former head football coach and now Security Director for the Quincy public schools; Brian Buckley, NQHS athletic director and present head football coach Peter Chrisom.

Club and the Quincy Varsity Club. He also coached football at Quincy Point and North Quincy Junior High Schools.

Actually, the man who became known as "Mr.

North Quincy," was born in South Quincy but the family moved to North when he was 6 years old. There he met his wife of more than 60 years, Elaine, and they lived in the same house where Elaine was born.

He was the first president of Quincy Youth Football and was assistant football coach at North Quincy for 17 years, retiring in 1997 at the age of 80.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Put that restless surge to good use this week by preparing your winter-weary home for spring. Also, be more flexible about accepting a workplace change.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your well-known ability to be patient is challenged as you wait for more news about a promising opportunity that could lead you to a new career path.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A setback in your travel plans could prove to be a blessing in disguise. Use this extra time to help close a growing gap between you and a family member.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't let a sudden sense of separation between you and your spouse or partner go unchallenged. It's important to make a strong effort to clear things up.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Use the information you recently received to make some long-deferred changes regarding a personal situation. Continue to exercise financial restraint.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That new responsibility you're now considering could lead to many opportunities. But be sure you have all the facts before you agree to take it on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A friend might try to advise you against a potentially risky move. Ultimately, the decision is yours, but hear him or her out before you decide.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel justified in demanding an apology, but it might be wiser to settle things so that today's adversary doesn't become tomorrow's enemy.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good news: Expect a more positive aspect to dominate your personal and professional lives. Someone close to you seeks your counsel.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A disappointment can turn into a learning experience. Now, at least, you know what not to do. Meanwhile, expect more options to open up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) What goes around comes around, as a friend from the past returns a favor. Don't be timid about accepting it with good grace. You deserve it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your spiritual strength helps you deal with a family member's problem. Expect some difficulties, but stay with it until it's ultimately resolved.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You can observe people and situations with absolute honesty. You'd be a fine social worker, psychoanalyst or member of the clergy.

Tobacco Free Network Breakfast Friday At QMC

The Blue Hills Tobacco Free Community Mobilization Network will hold a Community Leadership Breakfast Friday at Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St.

The breakfast will be from 8:15 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. in the first floor conference rooms A and B.

Membership of the network include representatives from the Milton and Weymouth Boards of Health, the Quincy Health Department, South Shore Collaborative Boards of Health, the Youth Action Alliance, the American Cancer Society, the Massachusetts Prevention Center and Quincy residents.

Some of the work that is continually being done in the community around tobacco-related illness includes education, community mobilization, policy and enforcement around youth access to tobacco and exposure to environmental tobacco smoke.

The Blue Hill Tobacco Free Community Mobilization Network is a program of Bay State Community Services. The Network was recently funded from a grant through the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. The money from the grant covers from tobacco tax money.

First-Time Homebuyer's Workshop March 3, 10

Neighborhood Housing Services, an approved First Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold an accredited and MHA certified First Time Homebuyer's Workshop in collaboration with The Bank of Canton March 3 and March 10. The workshop will be held at Roche Bros. Supermarket, 100 Falls Blvd., Quincy, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive your homebuying certificate, which is required by most lenders to qualify for the many different mortgage options such as the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs, down payment and closing costs grants and other special first time homebuyer financing options. Neighborhood Housing Services is a non-profit organization dedicated to assisting first time buyers through the homebuying process. The staff at NHS is unique in their approach to obtaining down payment and closing costs assistance as well as rehab grants for their clients, which are available throughout the entire South Shore area.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. The focus will be on the many changing aspects of homebuying, including how to locate a property within your budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program for your needs. Advanced registration is required and space is limited. A $10 refundable registration fee is required. For more information and to register, contact Janice Tucker at (617) 770-2227, ext. 22.

HOMES OF STEEL

Future homebuyers should be aware that steel is increasingly becoming the material of choice for framing new homes. While only about 3 to 6 percent of new homes are currently framed with steel, that percentage is expected to rise to as high as 25% by the year 2004. There are a number of factors behind this expected increase. To begin with, homebuilders are frustrated with fluctuations in lumber prices. In the cost of lumber rises between the time a house is sold and the time construction is completed, the builder stands to lose money. Moreover, steel has advantages over lumber, including the fact that it will not warp, shrink, or swell. It is also more resistant to fire. Steel is becoming a more popular material for building homes because of its performance and resistance to fire. CENTRAL REAL ESTATE emphasizes open communication and provides buyers with the information and recommendations they need to make smart choices. We sit down with you to review your wish list of features and show you homes listed in Multiple. Are you interested in building a new home? We can show you plots of land and direct you to reputable builders in the area. Call us at 328-1312 or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway for exceptional residential and commercial real estate service.

HINT: In light of the fact that steel framing is resistant to termites, half the houses in Hawaii have steel frames.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Size Discrimination Highlights Need For Eating Awareness Week

Sarah, a 30-year-old professional in the Boston area, went to a local dating service looking for love. What she got instead was discrimination. Sarah, by her own description, is fat. "Some people might say overweight, but to me that implies that there is a normal weight that I am over," she said. Sarah had hoped the dating service would match her with men who would appreciate all of her qualities, as she had come to appreciate herself. Instead, Sarah discovered that the dating service apologized to at least one man about her weight and told this man that Sarah was actively trying to lose weight.

Sarah was horrified. She had never told the service that she was dieting; she doesn't believe in it. She was angry as being presented as someone who had a problem, when she herself did not see it this way. After complaining, the dating service did refund Sarah's money, but denied they had made these statements or were discriminatory in anyway. Sarah hopes that through her complaint she has at least educated the service about fat discrimination and is committed to educating others.

Sarah's experience highlights the need for education on size discrimination and body acceptance in our society.

The South Shore Eating Disorders Collaborative (SSEDC) in conjunction with Eating Disorders Awareness and Prevention, Inc. (EDAP) is celebrating Eating Disorders Awareness Week this week (Feb. 25 to March 4). The theme for the week is "Every Body Is Beautiful." The goal is to celebrate the diversity of people from every ethnicity, size, age and gender. It is important to remember that eating disorders do not discriminate.

SSEDC is a group of health care professionals who are committed to helping the fight against eating disorders and size discrimination. Kathleen Burns Kingsbury, LMHC, a psychotherapist and educator specializing in the field of eating disorders, founded the group in 1998. The Collaborative also includes Elayne Daniels, Ph.D., Madeleine Flynn, LICSW, Christine Shrohan, LMHC, Louise Valiquette, LMHC, Mary Ellen Williams, LICSW, Jennifer Campbell, LMT, Lori Lieberman, MPH, RD and Stacy Richmond, RD.

"I formed the Collaborative to help raise awareness among the residents of the South Shore about the dangers of dieting, unhealthy exercise and food and weight obsession," Kingsbury said. "When I hear Sarah's story I understand that we have more work to do in the area of size and weight discrimination. It is the last form of discrimination that is acceptable in this society and it leads many men and women to engage in unhealthy diet and weight loss practices that often result in clinical eating disorders."

"My hope is that by participating in Eating Disorders Awareness Week 2001, the Collaborative can raise community awareness regarding size acceptance and the need to promote the idea that "Every Body Is Beautiful."

WE'RE FIGHTING FOR YOUR LIFE

Older people who hibernate these chilly months could lose stamina, strength and flexibility. Stay fit while you stay warm this winter with the National Institute on Aging's inexpensive, at-home exercise program.

Exercise with the National Institute on Aging, the 48-minute video, is based on medical research and "road-tested" by scores of older Americans.

The exercise program emphasizes:

- Endurance exercises, which increase stamina and may help delay or prevent diabetes, colon cancer, heart disease and stroke;

- Strength exercises, which increase metabolism helping to control weight and regulate blood sugar. Studies show they also may help prevent osteoporosis;

- Flexibility exercises, which may help prevent and aid recovery from injuries; and

- Balance exercises, which help prevent falls — a major cause of broken hips and other injuries that lead to disability and loss of independence.

To order the program or for more information, call 1-800-222-2225.

The NIA, part of the National Institutes of Health at the Department of Health and Human Services, leads the federal effort supporting and conducting research on aging and the special medical, social and behavioral issues of older people. A part of NIA's research involves ways to prevent frailty and reduce disability with age.

DID YOU KNOW...

The health effects of involuntary smoking are quite serious. The Office of Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) reports that non-smoking American workers will have up to 700 cases of lung cancer per year and between 2000 and 13,000 deaths from heart disease per year. Secondhand smoke belongs to the group of compounds classified by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) as a "Group A" carcinogen - cancer causing toxins for which no safe level of exposure exists. There are 25 smokefree restaurants in Quincy. There are nearly 200 smokefree worksites in Quincy that we are currently aware of. You can help to encourage smokefree worksites. Quincy Squirts, Bantams Kiwanis Champs

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy Bantam and Squirts hockey teams cruised through last week's 28th annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament like they couldn't wait another second for the school vacation week to end.

The two teams combined for a 9-0 record, culminating with championships Sunday at Quincy Youth Arena. The Bantams (4-0) dispatched Charlestown, 5-2, to capture its title, while the Squirts (5-0) whipped Arlington, 7-1, later in the afternoon to wear its crown.

In the other two divisions, the Seahawks edged Hingham, 3-2, to win the Pee Wee title and Dorchester won the Mite championship with a 7-2 triumph over Canton.

Proceeds from the week-long event will benefit the Quincy Kiwanis youth charities, including needy and underprivileged children in the local area.

The tournament featured teams from as far away as Austria, as well as from Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Greater Boston and the South Shore.

Here's a recap of all four divisions:

BANTAMS

In the final, Charlestown's Nolan Burns handed his team an early 1-0 lead with a goal 45 seconds into the match. Quincy responded with a pair of goals less than two minutes apart.

Ryan Feldhoff knotted the score with an unassisted goal at 2:15 and Kevin Richardson potted the go-ahead goal at 4:12 with an assist from Matt Grazioso. Charlestown, however, evened it at 2 about a minute later on a goal by Brendon Quinn.

In the second period, Grazioso scored the game-winner at 3:45 with an assist from Andy Patten. Patten put Quincy up 4-2 with an un-sisted tally with 1:04 left in the frame. In the third, Matt Germain sealed the game with assists from Grazioso and Feldhoff.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 3-1 win over Charlestown and then pitched a 6-0 shutout over Brockton. On Saturday, it defeated Dorchester, 4-1, to set up the rematch with Charlestown.

Also skating for Quincy were Kyle Carmody, Ryan Conley, Timothy Duggan, Joshua Giordani, Stephen Kelley, Matthew Lavery, Nicholas Manning, Patrick Maxey, Liam Powers and Danny Sullivan.

SQUIRTS

In the final, Quincy blitzed Arlington with two goals in the first 48 seconds of the game. Kyle Tobin scored 19 seconds in with Glenn Peterson assisting and then Johnny McInnis tallied the first part of his hat trick with an assist from Mikey Griffin. McInnis netted his second goal with 3:30 left in period for a 3-0 lead.

In the middle frame, Tobin pocketed his second of the day with Griffin assisting. Arlington finally got on the board at 6:59 to make it 4-1. In the third, Chris Brown scored an unassisted goal at 6:45. With 1:58 left, McInnis recorded his hat trick and Lammy Papalambros closed out the scoring with an assist from Peterson.

Goalie Jeff Giordani picked up the win with an outstanding game between the pipes.

Quincy knocked off Weymouth, 3-1, in the opener and then routed Braintree, 7-2, and Warwick (R.I.), 7-0, before taking down the South Coastal Stars, 5-1, in the semi-finals behind Brian Sullivan's two goals.

Also playing for the Squirts were Matt Furey, Casey Conley, Zach Deegan, Kevin Lewis, Ricky Penzo, Teddy Walsh, Stephen Barresi, Mike Leone and Kenny Patey.

PEE WEES
In the championship game, the Seahawks trailed 2-1 in the third period before striking for two goals in span of 55 seconds. Bobby Stembek tallied the game-winner at 4:56.

The Seahawks went 5-0 in the tournament, beating

Hingham twice, Austria, Quincy and Hyde Park.

Kiwanis Title A Tune-Up For Quincy Bantams

By CHRIS POISSON

Pretty soon, the Quincy Bantam A hockey team will need to build a museum to display all of its champion ships.

Its latest trophy came Sunday afternoon at Quincy Youth Arena when it knocked off Charlestown, 5-2, to win the Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament. After steamrolling through the 28th annual event last week, Quincy showed why it's a juggernaut on the Bantam circuit.

In the four games, the Bantams displayed their powerful, quick strike offense and stingy defense and goaltending by outscoring their opponents, 18-4. You don't lose too many games with that kind of disparity in the numbers.

In the championship game, the team also showed it has the poise and experience to go along with its talent. With the scored deadlocked at 2 after one period of play, Quincy dominated the final two frames, scoring three unanswered goals for the victory.

"They're a unique group of kids," said Al Grazioso, their former Pee Wee coach and president of Quincy Youth Hockey. "They've been playing together since they were Mites."

Indeed, they are a special group of kids. This is the same group of kids that won the Pee Wee state championship two years ago. Under-

Local And State Hockey Champions Heading To National Tournament

DAN SULLIVAN of the Quincy Bantam A team skates toward the action in Sunday's championship game of the 28th annual Quincy Kiwanis Youth Hockey Tournament. Quincy defeated Charlestown, 5-2, for the Kiwanis crown.

feated this year, Quincy hasn't lost a game dating back to December of 1999.

In April, it will be flying south to Atlanta, Ga., to participate in the National Tournament, which is quite an accomplishment considering only three teams from Quincy have competed in the Nationals in the past 25 years.

Quincy punched its ticket to Atlanta in December when it won its second state championship in three years. It's currently in the process of raising $20,000 to cover the expenses for the trip.

But before it makes reservations for the Nationals, Quincy has to take care of business in the Greater Boston League. It has one more game left and then the playoffs begin in two weeks. And you know the kids will want to add another trophy to the display case.

The team is sponsored by the Quincy Rotary Club.

Ron Deardon Nominated For Hall Of Fame

Ron Deardon, a former three sport star in basketball, football and track at Quincy High School, has been nominated for the George Washington University Athletic Hall of Fame.

He was nominated by Dr. Steve Korchek, the former All American football and basketball star at GW and a member of the GW Hall of Fame. Final selections for the Hall of Fame were made at the induction ceremony held Feb. 23 in Washington D.C.

During his senior year at QHS in 1955, Deardon led his basketball team to a 19-2 record and the GBI championship. He was also selected to the GBI and Tech Tournament All Star teams.

The team's top scorer and rebounder, Deardon led his team to the Tech Tournament finals before bowing out to Somerville, 60-57, in an exciting double overtime, sudden death game. One Boston sportswriter described the final game as "one of the most sensational basketball games in the 30 year history of the Tech Tournament."

Somerville was the only team to beat Quincy that year, handing them its first loss during the regular season at Somerville. Quincy, however, got revenge when it defeated Somerville, 69-57, later in the season to win the GBI championship and to remain undefeated on its homecourt.

After high school graduation, Deardon accepted a full basketball scholarship to GW, where he played three years and earned three varsity basketball letters in the late 1950s. After graduating in 1959 with a bachelor's degree, Deardon returned to GW to earn a master's degree in 1960 and an Ed.D. degree in 1967 while embarking on a successful 39-year career in public education. He is reported to be the youngest athlete at GW to earn a doctorate degree by age 30.

Deardon was inducted into the QHS Basketball Hall of Fame in 1990 and the QHS/NQHS Football Hall of Fame in 2000. If selected for the induction into the GW Hall of Fame, Deardon will join two other Hall of Fame athletes from Massachusetts — Mr. Arnold "Red" Auerbach, former head coach and general manager of the Boston Celtics, and Mr. Matthew Zunie, former basketball coach at Boston University.

Deardon currently resides in Orlando, Fla., with his wife, Norma-Jean, and recently retired from public education. He has four sons, Brian, Michael, Craig and Robert, who live their families and work in Bradenton, Orlando, Ft. Myers and Tallahassee, respectively.

North Quincy Girls Opens Tourney With Weymouth

By CHRIS POISSON

As on Monday afternoon, at least two seniors on the North Quincy girls' basketball team were ticked off about something that appeared in Sunday's edition of the Boston Herald.

Head coach Doug MacFarlane showed Casey Ridge and Jen Conley about a prominent preview article that picked Weymouth over North Quincy as a possible upset—and the two tri-captains took offense.

"I showed Casey and Jen and they're upset about it," MacFarlane said Monday. "I'm going to show the rest of the team and use that to get them going."

Couple that with last year's first-round exit and the Red Raiders must have been itching like they had a severe case of poison ivy to get the Division 1 South Sectional tournament underway. They didn't have to wait too long, though.

North Quincy (15-5), the No. 6 seed, hosted No. 11 Weymouth (12-8) yesterday (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in the first round. The winner will face the winner of the Braintree-Framingham match in Friday's quarterfinals.

Although it is an 11th seed, MacFarlane cautioned his team not to take Weymouth lightly. The Wildcats were sectional finalists last season and returned many of the same faces. The reason they're an 11th seed and not a sixth seed is that they have been without their starting center for most of the season.

Basketball

"They were sectional finalists last year and they're pretty much the whole team back," MacFarlane said. "They're a tough team. They have experience. They've been there. Their center is injured and that's one reason why they're 12-8. The seedings don't mean a thing any more. Once you get in the state tournament, everyone is tough."

After cameo appearances in the playoffs in recent years, North Quincy established one simple goal in the preseason: to get over that initial bump and go deep into the tournament. In the final week of the season, however, a tourney run looked far-fetched when several players became sick and injured.

But thanks to an 11-day layoff, the Old Colony League champs are healthy across the board. Sophomore April Suprey and Ridge have recovered from knee injuries and several other players have gotten over the flu.

"The nice part is we have everyone healthy," MacFarlane said. "The break helped us tremendously."

In the two losses down the stretch, the Red Raiders saw what life was like without Suprey, their best inside player, averaging just 27 points per game or about 14 ppg fewer. When she returned in the season finale against Quincy, she scored 10 points and the team tallied 66.

Ridge also played in that game and finished with 13 assists to set the career record for assists with 268. With the break, those two should only be stronger for the tournament.

Junior tri-captain Lauren Sleeth, the team's leading scorer, will benefit with a healthy Suprey in the post and with Ridge getting the ball into her hands. Sleeth struggled when the two were out of the lineup, but poured in 16 points against Quincy with them on the court.

Although North Quincy will rely heavily on that trio to lead the team, it needs contributions from its roleplayers, which has been the trademark all season. Starters Kahli Dearani and Conley along with bench players Kristen DiMattio, Nicole Grazioso, Allie Lacey and Kellee Conley need to play well if North Quincy wants to see another day.

"It's one game at a time, one half at a time, as far as I'm concerned," MacFarlane said. "It's do or die now."

Quincy, North Hockey Await Tourney Seedings

The Division 1 hockey tournament seedings were announced yesterday (Wednesday) morning.

As the paper went to print Tuesday night, the seedings were still in question as the committee had to await the outcome of the two Super 8 play-in games being held at Chelmsford.

For the teams in Division 1, that meant a stronger tournament because the losers of the two play-in games dropped down to the Division 1 field.

If Matignon or St. John's of Shrewsbury lost, they would compete in the North bracket. If Springfield Cathedral or Archbishop Williams lost, they would compete in the South bracket, which boasts Quincy and North Quincy.

North Quincy, which won five of its final six games to clinch a spot in the tourney, will face a similar situation as a year ago when it squeaked into the playoffs. Head coach Bob Doyle said he expects the Red Raiders (10-10) will play a preliminary round game Friday at UMass-Boston against a top-echelon team.

Quincy finished with a 12-6-1 record and hopes it has a little more luck than last year when it drew powerhouse Archbishop Williams, seeded below them, in the opener.

Women's Exercise Classes Start Monday At Fore River Clubhouse

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct women's exercise classes at Fore River Clubhouse beginning Monday, March 5, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

Two separate classes will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 8:30 and 9:30. The instructor will be Karen Gaughan.

Both classes will offer the same instruction and are designed to strengthen muscles, increase flexibility and improve endurance while promoting overall fitness. Hand weights may be used in the class and adaptations in the exercise will allow participants to exercise at their own pace.

Cost of the program is $30 for 20 classes. Classes will end April 23. Registration will be held at the first session of class. Late registration will be done at the main office of the Recreation Department at One Merrymount Parkway.

For more information, call the Recreation Department at 376-1394.

Former Bruin Terry O'Reilly Lecture At Curry College

Former Boston Bruins all-star and head coach Terry O'Reilly will give a lecture at Curry College's Alumni Recreation Center Tuesday, March 6 at 8 p.m.

The lecture is free and open to the public. O'Reilly will speak about numerous topics including his life experiences, leadership and his time in the National Hockey League.

O'Reilly enjoyed a 14-year career as a player with the Bruins. His hard work and leadership earned him two trips to the NHL All-Star game and honor of being named team captain. As a coach, he compiled a 115-86-26 record, never finishing lower than third place in the division.

Softball Camp At South Shore Baseball Spring Training Camp

Softball players will have an opportunity to get a jump start on the upcoming season by attending the South Shore Baseball Club's popular Indoor Spring Training Camp at its Holbrook headquarters.

The camp is scheduled for players in two different age groups, 8-12 and 13-18, Sunday afternoons, March 4-25. All sessions are two hours: 2-4 p.m. for younger players and 4-6 p.m. for older players. Advanced registration is required.

The camp features defensive instruction for infielders and outfielders, one hour of solid batting, hitting lectures by SSBC's experienced staff and five individual hitting stations.

"Our Indoor Softball Spring Training Camp has been designed for players who want to prepare for the upcoming season and get a jump on the competition," said SSBC President/Director Frank Niles. "We've assembled one of the finest coaching staffs for this valuable early season development."

The SSBC will also hold the third and final five-week session of its popular Softball Pitching Clinic, featuring Barry "No Hit" Needham, March 18 through April 12 (no clinic on Easter). Each session is one-hour long and groups meet Sunday mornings at 9, 10, 11 and noon.

Instruction focuses on mechanics and basics of the windmill style of pitching. Pitchers must provide their catchers. Needham has tutored many of the area's best and most promising softball pitchers.

Kelly Wigmore Colby-Sawyer Alpine Racer

Kelly Wigmore of Quincy placed 18th to help lead the Colby-Sawyer College women's alpine ski racing team to a second-place finish in the giant slalom at the recent Boston College Carnival at Acatun Mountain in Brownsville, Vt.

At the Brown University

Carnival at Loon Mountain in Lincoln, N.H., she placed 16th to lead the Chargers to a third-place finish in the giant slalom.

Youth Baseball, Softball Umpires Needed

Quincy Youth Baseball is looking for baseball and softball umpires for the upcoming season.

Clinics will be held at the Dawes House March 7, 21 and 28 from 7 to 8:15 p.m. For more information, call Everett Goodrich at (617) 472-9023.

Defensemen Hockey School July 9-13

A specialized defensemen hockey school will take place at the Zapatas Ice Arena in Randolph from July 9 through July 13.

All interested players ages

8-13 may call (603) 929-4967 for more information.

Quincy Marathoners Making Strides For Dana-Farber Challenge

On April 16, Quincy residents James Lamer, Michael Dalton and Jennifer Lamri will lace up their running sneakers to participate in the 12th annual Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge (DFMC).

Lamer, Dalton and Lamri, along with runners from 20 states, will comprise a DFMC team that will run in the 105th Boston Marathon to raise $2.3 million for cancer research.

By raising a minimum of $1,500 each to be a team member, DFMC runners are funding the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Cancer Research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston. Dana-Farber is a world-renowned leader in cancer research and treatment.

Since the DFMC's inception in 1989, the runners have raised more than $10 million for the Barr Program, which was founded in 1987 by Jacksonville Jaguars owners Wayne and Delores Weaver to honor Mrs. Weaver's mother, who lost her battle with cancer 30 years earlier.

In 1990, Dana-Farber was among the first charity organizations to be given official marathon numbers by the Boston Athletic Association (BAA). This year, 15 charities benefit from the BAA's charity program.

To send contributions, make checks payable to the DFMC to: Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge, 152A Trapelo Rd., Lincoln, MA 01773. For more information call (781) 259-8881.

RELIGION

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center, will have Morning Worship with Holy Communion Sunday at 10 a.m.

The Rev. William Harding, pastor, will conduct the worship service. He will preach on "Not To Live By Bread Alone." He will also have a moment with the children of the Church School before they go to their respective classes.

This Sunday will mark Rev. Harding's last Sunday before he joins his 399th Combat Support Hospital unit for a tour of duty in Kosovo. He will return to Bethany in mid-October.

Scripture reader will be Barbara MacFarlane. Music will feature the Chancel Choir under the direction of Tom Boyer, organist. Greeters will be Pam Sawyer and her daughter, Danielle Palmariello.

During Rev. Harding's absence, two retired ministers will assume some of his duties. They are Rev. Arthur Bowler, former pastor of the Randolph Congregational Church for 45 years, and Rev. Gary Smothers, former pastor of the Winthrop Congregational Church in Holbrook for 35 years.

Lenten Vespers services are being held on Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m. Pantry Shelf Sunday will be observed Sunday. All foods collected will go to the Interfaith Social Services Food Bank.

Evangelical Church

Rev. William Donahue will preach the sermon "Defining a Picture of Health, Part 2" at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services Sunday at Evangelical Church of Atlantic, 65

Newbury Ave., North Quincy.

Child care is available during service times.

The church is handicap accessible.

Quincy Point Congregational

Rev. Ann Suzedell, pastor, will preach the sermon "In the Hands of Jesus" at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

A potluck luncheon will feature church family album, slide show, crafts for children and mission project.

Novena Of Grace At Joseph's Church

St. Joseph's Catholic Church, 550 Washington St., Quincy Point, will host a Novena of Grace-Parish Lenten Retreat Monday, March 5 through Tuesday, March 13 at the 5:30 p.m. Mass.

A Novena of Grace is a nine-day period of prayer in honor of St. Francis Xavier to obtain special favors and blessings. Prayer petitions will be placed in front of the shrine of St. Francis Xavier. These petitions can be mailed to the church or placed in the collection basket at Mass.

Fr. Daniel Graham and Fr. Robert Monagle will be the presiders at the Novena.

The spiritual experience is open to everyone and visitors are welcome. The church parking lot is available beside the church and across the street from the church.

There is a handicap ramp near the side entrance and reserved handicap parking spaces.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"He that just don't have a thing to do." A pretty stupid remark. We think so.

We're all surrounded by things that are crying for attention. And isn't it true that as soon as we hear its cry, the thing becomes a duty? Perhaps this is why we sometimes try not to hear the cries. We don't really want something to do.

Once we hear the cry, though, and recognize it as a call to a duty we can take one of two courses... Do it or neglect it.

Taking on a duty can be taking on a lot of work and trouble, and it means exposing oneself to the criticism of those who think we're not doing it right. Someone once said that if you want to avoid criticism, do nothing, say nothing, be nothing. If you don't want to be criticized, neglect a duty. Nobody'll pick at you for neglecting it.

But remember this: If you do neglect it, there is one critic you can't get away from. Who? Your conscience, of course!

So can you truly say, "There isn't anything to do?"

We can't...

Families Gather To Hail Delahunt Adoption Law

Hundreds of families from across the nation gathered in Boston's historic Faneuil Hall yesterday to celebrate a new law that grants automatic citizenship to children adopted from abroad and other foreign-born children of U.S. citizens.

Co-hosts for the event were Democratic Rep. Bill Delahunt and Republican Senate Deputy Majority Leader Don Nickles of Oklahoma, authors of the bill, known as the Child Citizenship Act, which went into effect at midnight Monday.

Under the law, 150,000 young people, including more than 75,000 adopted children, became American citizens. Celebrations similar to the Faneuil Hall ceremonies were held in other cities from Atlanta to Anchorage.

Also participating were Democratic Sen. Marie L. Landrieu of Louisiana, co-chair of the Congressional Coalition on Adoption, Democratic Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Republican Rep. Henry J. Hyde of Illinois, chairman of the House International Relations Committee.

Accompanied by a fire and drum corps, adopted children from 26 foreign nations carried flags of their native countries into the hall as diplomatic representatives looked on.

The featured speaker was Pulitzer Prize-winning biographer and historian David McCullough, narrator of public television's "The American Experience." Adam Pertman, author of the pathbreaking book, "Adoptive Nation," also spoke.

Other presentations featured Chinese ribbon dancers and a color guard from the USS Constitution (Old Ironsides).

The Department of State has passport materials available for the new citizens and their families and the U.S. Postal Service arranged a special cancellation of the adoption stamp issued last year.

The new law confers citizenship on all foreign-born children under the age of 18, admitted to the United States as lawful permanent residents, and in the legal a physical custody of at least on U.S. citizen parent.

Delahunt himself is the adoptive parent of a daughter who was rescued during the fall of Saigon 25 years ago.

"The Child Custody Act will benefit countless foreign-born children and their families in the years to come," said Delahunt. "It spares them the frustrating, time-consuming naturalization process and puts and end to the serious problems that confront those who fail to complete that process before adulthood."

"For adoptive families in particular, who have overcome so many obstacles to bring their children to America, the naturalization process is an extra burden they shouldn't have to bear. Their children are Americans and should be treated as such. Now they will be."

Theresa Morgan Joins Neighborhood Health Plan

James Hooley, president and CEO of Neighborhood Health Plan, a not-for-profit health maintenance organization serving Massachusetts' communities since 1986, recently announced the appointment of Theresa Morgan as Clinical Support Assistant.

Morgan, a Quincy resident, was previously employed at the Worker's Compensation and Inspection Bureau as a Data Quality Services Assistant.

Paul Conroy On Dean's List

Paul Conroy, son of James and Carolyn Conroy of Quincy, has been named to the Dean's List for the fall semester at Southampton College of Long Island University, Southampton, N.Y.

Conroy, majoring in English/writing, with a minor in theatre, is a 1997 graduate of North Quincy High School. He has performed in 12 theatrical productions with the Southampton Players and has had two original one-act plays performed on stage. He has also directed several plays written by the College's MFA in Writing students.

Durkin Holding Office Hours

Ward 5 City Councillor Stephen Durkin will hold office hours today (Thursday) from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in the City Council office on the second floor of the old city hall.

Constituents wishing to meet with Durkin may do so by calling for an appointment at 376-1341 or stopping by City Hall during the office hours.

Ward 6 Democrats To Caucus Saturday

Registered Democrats in Ward 6 will hold a caucus Saturday at 10 a.m. at Amelia's Restaurant, Marina Bay, to elect 10 delegates and six alternatives to the Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Delegates will be divided equally between men and women.

A breakfast meeting will be held at Amelia's at 8:30 a.m. prior to the caucus.

The convention will be held Saturday, June 2 at the Springfield Civic Center in Springfield.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats in Quincy. Candidates for delegate and alternate must consent to nomination in writing. All candidates may make a two-minute statement and may distribute materials on their behalf. All ballots will be written and secret.

Those registered Democrats unable to attend may be considered for delegate and alternate by two-thirds of those present and voting. Those not elected as delegate and alternate may apply to be add-on delegates in the following categories: youth, minority and disabled.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, age, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited. Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed with the Massachusetts Democratic State Party, 129 Portland St., Boston 02114 no later than 10 days after the caucus date.

For more information contact the Democratic State Committee at (617) 742-6770.

Durkin Wants Redesign At Merrymount Pkwy., Hancock St.

In a letter sent recently to Mayor James Sheets, Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin advocated funding for the redesign and upgrade of the intersection of Merrymount Parkway (formerly Southern Artery) and Hancock St.

Durkin's letter cited a recent community meeting where Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon referred to the intersection as one of the most dangerous in the city and estimated that an Engineering Design Study would cost "in the vicinity of $35,000."

Providing traffic signals at Merrymount Parkway and Hancock St., Durkin continued, would result in "much-needed" traffic gaps at Fenno St. and St. Ann's Rd. and would greatly improve public safety for motorists and pedestrians.

"It is my understanding that, some years ago, the city obtained a funding commitment from the State Highway Department," Durkin said in his letter. "However, these funds have yet to be secured. At the very least, the city should get the ball rolling on this project and be conducting the design work."

As of press time, Councillor Durkin had not returned a phone call requesting further information and Mayor Sheets was unavailable for comment.

South Coastal Bank Donates $10,000 To USS Salem

South Coastal Bank has donated $10,000 to help fund general operations and education programs for the USS Salem, which was built at the Quincy Shipyard during World War II and is now home to the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum.

John O'Connor, President and CEO of South Coastal Bank, presented the contribution to Mayor James Sheets on the USS Salem last Friday.

The bank's contribution is based on its commitments to investing in the communities in which it operates, O'Connor said. South Coastal Bank opened a banking office at 1259 Hancock St. in Quincy last November.

"We are proud to support the preservation and education efforts provided by the staff and volunteers of the USS Salem," O'Connor said. "Our business philosophy of providing exemplary customer service is extremely compatible with the Shipbuilding Museum's philosophy of providing outstanding educational opportunities."

South Coastal Bank is an independent state chartered mutual bank. The bank and its employees have a long and successful history of commitment to the community. Founded in 1868, South Coastal Bank has branches in Braintree, Carver, Rockland and Scituate in addition to Quincy.

SHINE Seeks Volunteer Health Insurance Counselors

SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) seeks volunteer health insurance counselors who are interested in helping elders and Medicare beneficiaries understand their Medicare benefits and other health insurance options.

The SHINE Program ensures that Medicare beneficiaries have access to accurate, up-to-date information about their health care options. SHINE counselors are available at most area Councils on Aging and the program is free, confidential, and unbiased.

SHINE volunteers are community people who are trained and certified by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs in many areas of health insurance including Medicare, Part A and Part B, Medigap Insurance, Medicare HMO's, Retiree Insurance Plans, Long Term Care Insurance, Medicaid, and many free or reduced cost health care programs.

Those interested in health insurance counseling and who are available for training in April should contact South Shore Regional SHINE Program Director Jane Mudge at (617) 376-1247 for more information.

Mudge can also be reached by mail at the Quincy Council on Aging, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy 02171.

'Irish Night' Films At 1st Parish Church

It will be Irish Night March 8 at the United First Parish Church.

Two movies in the South Shore Independent Film Series will be shown, "Stars & Shamrocks," a documentary about Irish-Jewish relations in Boston, and "An Irish-American Story," a lyrical documentary look at the filmmaker's Irish grandmother and her life in the Boston area.

The festivities will be

Thursday, March 8, at 7 p.m. and the admission is $5. Refreshments will be on sale. Patrons are requested to enter by the rear door of the church at 1306 Hancock St., across from the T station.

The filmmakers themselves are expected to be on hand to answer and questions and discuss their work. Running time for both films is about 85 minutes.

Emergency Declared, Flooding Major Concern

City Braces For Worst Storm Since '78

By CRAIG SALTERS

A snow emergency was declared in Quincy as the city braced and prepared for a two-day northeaster expected to rival the devastating Blizzard of '78.

That storm, which hit more than two decades ago but is a vivid memory for most area residents, dropped 27 inches of snow in the area; predictions for the current storm, which was expected to last roughly 36 hours, were anywhere from 18 inches to more than two feet.

One major concern for the city, said Mayor James Sheets, was coastal flooding, which was predicted to be at its most severe Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning. Emergency pumps and crews, Sheets said, were in position and would deal with any situation appropriately.

The snow emergency was declared Sunday night, said Sheets, who met with officials from the Quincy Police Department, Fire Department, DPW, Traffic Department, Park Department, Emergency Management, School Department, Council on Aging, and Housing Authority.

Sheets also declared a local emergency Monday morning which allows the city to request major national guard vehicles to be located on the peninsula locations of Houghs Neck, Germantown and Squantum.

Additional police, ambulance service, and fire apparatus were also scheduled to be located in those areas.

Due to the snow emergency, parking was allowed only on the even-numbered side of city streets, with police towing violators. In addition, parking was not allowed on any roadway posted as an emergency artery and parked vehicles were towed from those streets.

Parking was available at the Ross Parking Garage in

Harold Makes It Official: He Won't Seek Re-Election

City Council President Paul Harold announced Wednesday that he will not seek re-election as councillor-at-large in this fall's city election.

His announcement confirms a report in The Quincy Sun March 1 that he would not run for another term.

Harold said he made his decision following meetings with long-time supporters and union officials and political and community leaders whom he has worked with as councillor for the past five years.

He said he was leaving the council to serve full-time as Norfolk County Register of Deeds and to open up a seat to give someone new an opportunity to serve as councillor-at-large.

Harold's decision is expected to set off a scramble for the vacant seat with at least a dozen names being mentioned as potential candidates. And possibly open up a ward seat or two.

John Keenan who is leaving as Mayor James Sheets' executive secretary to become Financial Coordinator to the Norfolk County Advisory Board has already said he will run if Harold did not seek re-election.

Joseph Finn, former executive director of Father Bill's Place who made a strong showing in his first run in 1999, is already doing some campaigning.

Ward 2's Dan Raymond, Ward 4's Michael D'Amico and Ward 5's Steve Durkin are being mentioned as possible candidates.

Also considered potential candidates: School Committee woman Christine Cedrone, former Councillors

Trash Pick-Up Delayed At Least Two Days

The city's Department of Public Works announces that trash collection will be delayed at least two days this week.

BF1 has informed the city that the trash transfer stations and incinerators do not open, which means there is no place for BF1 to unload trash.

The DPW advises residents to listen to WHJA 1300 AM and Quincy Access Cable TV to see if trash is being collected, even on Wednesday. If the trash transfer stations and incinerators do not re-open, trash will not be collected.

If trash collection can begin on Wednesday, BF1 will pick-up both Monday and Tuesday's routes. All other days will be on a one-day delay.

Residents are asked to take in their trash so that sidewalks are not blocked.

On 6-Month Leave From Bethany Church Rev. William Harding Will Serve As Chaplain In Kosovo

By CRAIG SALTERS

The Rev. William Harding, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church, delivered Sunday what will be the last sermon to his congregation for quite some time as he readies himself for a scheduled six-month deployment to Kosovo.

Rev. Harding, an Army reservist who serves as chaplain in the 399th Combat Support Hospital unit based in Taunton, will participate in the early March deployment of more than 100 members of his reserve unit to Camp Bondsteel in Kosovo, with a small rear detachment going to Macedonia.

"This is my first overseas appointment, so I'm anxious," Chaplain Harding admitted. "But it's God's time and God's plan, and He has always provided for me and will again."

"I've been in prayer since I heard (of the deployment) both for myself and the soldiers. We need to be sensitive to the people of Kosovo and what they've been through. As peacekeepers, if we can instill peace, especially in the children, then we can build upon that."

Chaplain Harding, who joined the reserves in 1989, said he will miss his wife and son very much and also the family of his church, expressing disappointment at the many weddings, baptisms, and the like for which he will be absent.

But he also spoke of the unique role a chaplain plays in the military and the rewards of helping soldiers deal with the stresses of missing home and family, being in strange culture, and dealing with a potentially hostile environment.

"Being away from home is a major concern for these soldiers, and there's also the fear of the unknown," he said. "The soldiers know that we minister our own faith groups, but that we're also there for all of them, offering counsel and friendship."

Pointing out that chaplains were non-combatants enjoying special officer status, Chaplain Harding said that he welcomed the chance to be of service. "The wonderful thing about being a chaplain is that we can continue to love," he said.

A graduate of Weymouth High School, Chaplain Harding enlisted in 1968 as a member of the Signal Corps of the Army National Guard and credited a chaplain he met while stationed in Georgia as one the first people who guided him towards his calling in the ministry. "It's a ministry of presence. Just being there is important," said Chaplain Harding, who added that most soldiers referred to him and other chaplains by the more casual, friendlier title of "Padre."

Medical professionals and hospital administrators from the 399th -- including detachments in Worcester and Providence, RI -- are scheduled to deploy to Kosovo in support of Operation Joint Guardian. The US Forces deployed in support of this operation are part of the Multinational Brigade East, called Task Force Falcon, a component of the NATO-led international security presence, Kosovo Force (KFOR).

The overall mission of KFOR is to establish a safe environment for all people in Kosovo and to facilitate the return of displaced persons and refugees. Task Force Falcon's missions include creating a safe and secure environment, providing humanitarian assistance, and enforcing basic law and order.

Nicole Giannandrea Serving Poor In Pa.

Nicole Giannandrea of Quincy, a Saint Anselm College senior, is leading a group of college volunteers on "Spring Break Alternative" to Frenchville, Pa., one of the nation's poorest regions.

A public service program set in the heart of Appalachia, the March 3-10 trip offers students a chance to serve in soup kitchens, head start programs, nursing homes and construction sites. The Caritas Mission, a volunteer service retreat center, will host the workers.

Giannandrea is responsible for trip preparations, finances and group assignments. Working with mission coordinators, she will also lead daily reflection sessions. These spiritual gatherings will allow students to share experiences and discuss the trip's impact on one another and the community.

the Parking Way for residents who needed to remove their cars from the streets during the snow emergency.

The city said it was planning for a 36-hour storm and would pool the snow removal capabilities of the DPW, Park Department, Traffic Department, and Housing Authority in order to maximize resources and manpower.

The Red Cross opened an emergency shelter in North Quincy High School and also in the Center for Technical Education. Shelters were also available at the Atherton Hough School in Houghs Neck, the Snug Harbor School in Germantown, and the Community Center in Squantum.

As of press time, shelter hours were as yet unannounced.

The Manet Health Center

in Houghs Neck was also available for emergency health needs during the storm.

Residents in need of emergency transportation were advised to call the regular E911 number. WJDA and Cable Access Television also carried all emergency telephone numbers, which were also available by calling the main number at (617) 376-1000.

The city was in the process of organizing the personnel necessary to help shovel out seniors in all locations of the city once the storm had ended. Those interested were asked to contact the Council on Aging at (617) 376-1246, with the COA providing all information necessary, including transportation and rate of pay.

Seniors in need of shoveling assistance were also asked to call the Council on Aging at (617) 376-1246 to be put on a list to be shovelled once the storm had ended.

The city's Emergency Management Agency had activated their Emergency Operations Center at 55 Sea St., Lower Level, and was urging four-wheel drive and snow mobile operators to contact the center at (617) 376-1205 or the following extensions: 1216, 1223, 1226, 1208, 1219, 1224, 1209, 1221, 1225.

Trash pick-up was cancelled for Monday and Tuesday. The new schedule for pick-up was in the process of being worked out; residents were encouraged to listen to WJDA 1300 AM or watch Quincy Access Cable for information on trash pick-up.

All non-emergency city personnel, as defined by department heads, were released from work noon Monday.

Blizzard warnings for Norfolk County were in effect for Monday and Tuesday with expected snow fall from two to three feet and wind gusts of 50 to 70 miles per hour. All unnecessary travel was discouraged.

Conditions were expected to improve Wednesday.

Adult And Continuing Ed Registration Begins April 7

Registration for the summer semester of the Quincy Public Schools' Adult and Continuing Education program will take place Saturday, April 7 from 9 a.m. until noon and April 9-11 from 9 a.m. until 8 p.m. at their 107 Woodward Ave. location.

Classes begin the week of April 23.

With flexible class times and a variety of courses -- from the popular "Golf Basics" to the "Surfin' Seniors" computer course for seniors -- Quincy Public Schools provides a great source for adult educational learning in the city, said Keith Segalla, director of QPS Adult and Continuing Education.

Other popular courses include art classes and instruction for the GED.

COLLISION REPAIR PART SAFETY

The question has been raised whether vehicle cosmetic repair parts (fenders, door skins, etc.) from aftermarket suppliers are as safe as those from original-equipment manufacturers. The fact is that the source of the parts is irrelevant to safety because the parts themselves, with the possible exception of the hood, serve no safety function. To demonstrate, the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety tested a vehicle in which the front fenders, door skins and front bumper cover were removed. The original-equipment hood was replaced with a certified hood from an aftermarket supplier. Crash test results were then compared with a similar vehicle with its original-equipment parts intact. Both performed with distinction in 40 m.p.h. frontal offset impacts.

Thoughts On Solving The City's Major ProblemsEditor, The Quincy Sun:

I was thinking about some of the major problems facing the City of Quincy. For example, we need a site to build a high school. Quincy Center needs further revitalization and we need to purchase land to expand one or more of the city cemeteries.

Then I wondered if we could solve these problems in unison. My conclusion was that with a little imagination of course we could.

Let's start by addressing some of the criteria for these three projects.

First, we don't need sprawling acreage for a high school, we need acceptable classrooms. We don't need on-site athletic fields and in-house recreational facilities; the parks department has done a terrific job restoring our current sports amenities.

Second, the concourse may end up merely serving as a passage for travelers to drive by empty storefronts in the center, what we need to attract vendors is a vibrant center that thrives with pedestrians and customers.

Third, plans to expand our cemeteries would necessitate the acquisition of abutting land and homes. This would be very expensive and dislodge the lives of our neighbors.

So what are my solutions?

Build a medium rise building to house the high school right in the center of the city. This would allow students to take public transportation and parking for teachers could be provided at the existing parking garage.

Teachers and students alike would patronize the stores and restaurants in the area and any questionable behavior could be monitored and punishable by the school.

As for the burial ground shortage, now that the city owns acres of land on Quincy Avenue, we should remove or encapsulate the toxins, and lots of fresh topsoil and preserve that viable parcel to be used as a future cemetery.

Oh, if the plan is to tear down the current high school, the city should zone the property as open space.

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

A Letter From Laura

Ed Spargo has another prized letter from another First Lady.

This one is from Laura Bush on White House stationery thanking him for "his kind words of support and for enclosing the newspaper articles."

The newspaper articles were copies of several "Sunbeams" columns about the historic father-and-son Presidential links shared by the Bush and Adams families.

Including the most recent one (Dec. 28) expressing the hope that one day President Bush might visit the City of Presidents.

Mrs. Bush's letter joins one from Mamie Eisenhower in Spargo's most prized possession collection.

Mrs. Bush's letter, dated Feb. 1, reads:

"Thank you for your kind words of support and for enclosing the newspaper articles. President Bush and I are grateful for the outpouring of congratulations, prayers, and enthusiasm we have received from across the nation.

"We are deeply honored to have the opportunity to serve our country and eager to work to extend the promise of America to all citizens.

"We appreciate your encouragement and confidence in us.

"With best wishes, Laura Bush."

She didn't mention anything about her husband someday possibly coming to Quincy.

But Spargo, who lives on Sherman St., says: "I was delighted that Mrs. Bush addressed the letter to me in 'Historic Quincy, Mass.'"

Spargo always proudly uses "Historic Quincy" in his address.

"Needless to say I was thrilled that the classy First Lady took the time as soon as she was established in the White House to bother sending a non-entirety such as me a 'thank you' message I shall cherish always."

Spargo, however, was also a little disappointed.

The letter came in a large manila envelope stamped "First Class, Do Not Bend" for an enclosed photo. The customary cardboard to additionally protect a photo was in place. But no photo.

"Apparently, a White House staffer slipped up," he says.

He thinks he might drop a note to Holbrook's Andy Card, Bush's chief of staff to see if a photo of the President or the President and First Lady might be available. The letter from Mamie Eisenhower was written from Gettysburg, PA, in July, 1974, five years after President Dwight Eisenhower's death.

SPARGO

In it, she wrote:

"I am always so interested when I receive a nice letter like yours from a man who really appreciated my husband's credo. He did love his country, and I will tell you a little story about that.

"When he was getting ready to make the world trip, after he had his first heart attack and a small stroke (which I never believed he had), I begged him not to make this terrific effort.

"He looked at me in surprise and said, 'Why, Mamie, if I have one more drop of blood to give this country I will give it.' That certainly showed his love of country and that he considered himself very fortunate to be born in America.

"Ike was a student of the Gettysburg Battlefield and, of course, it is known all over the world because of the uniqueness of the battle that was fought here."

Ed, a former newspaperman is now 93 but hasn't lost any of his enthusiasm and zest. As Quincy's "Ambassador of Good Health" he is still on his one-man crusade, now in its 29th year, spreading the word on how to stay healthy.

And writing letters to people he admires.

WELL, YOU MIGHT say Quincy, birthplace of John and John Quincy Adams, is going to have another President.

Jim Cooke, who portrays Calvin Coolidge at such events as the recent Presidents' Day Winter Festival, will be moving to Quincy from Dorchester.

So he told photographer Bob Noble at historic First Parish Church where he performed as Silent Cal on Presidents' Day.

COOKE

SPEAKING OF PRESIDENTS (also hoped-to-be-presidents) Quincy still has a souvenir left over from last year's campaign.

Arizona Senator John McCain, who many wanted as their president, had his Massachusetts campaign headquarters in a downtown Quincy storefront at 1550 Hancock St. And after all these months the McCain sign is still up.

McCain, attracting unenrolled and Democrat voters, carried Quincy over George W. Bush in the Presidential Primary in March.

Al Gore also took Quincy in the Democrat race, topping Bill Bradley.

So, you might say that Quincy was on a losing streak last year.

Voting for two eventual losers -- McCain and Gore -- in the primary. And again in November when the Gore-Lieberman ticket carried Quincy over the Bush-Cheney team.

Dinner, Auction At Wollaston Congregational

A Fundraising Dinner and Auction will be held Saturday, March 24 at 5:30 p.m. at the Wollaston Congregational Church, Winthrop Ave., by Jordan Kennedy Oster, a freshman at North Quincy High School.

Oster is raising funds for his People to People trip to Europe this summer, where he will serve as a student ambassador.

Half of the proceeds from the dinner/auction will be donated to Wollaston Congregational Church, which is celebrating its 125th anniversary.

Dinner will consist of homemade chicken cordon bleu, oven roasted potatoes, and glazed carrots with drinks and dessert. There will be a live, blind, and silent auction of donated items; gift certificates from restaurants, hotels, and area businesses; as well as various services such as yard work, babysitting, repair work, etc.

Tickets for the dinner/auction are $10 each. For tickets, call Oster at (617) 471-3121 or call the church office at (617) 773-7432.

Admission is limited and door prizes will be awarded to the lucky few.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SCALING BACK GUM DISEASE

Periodontal (gum) disease involves accumulations of bacteria-laden plaque and tartar that cause infections to form in the collar of gum tissue that surrounds the teeth. Most of these bacteria are anaerobic, meaning they can thrive without oxygen beneath the gumline. In its early stages (gingivitis), the infections may be addressed with professional cleaning and scrupulous home care. If the disease is allowed to progress to a more advanced stage (periodontitis), more aggressive remedial measures may be called for. Scaling and root planing is the procedure by which surfaces of the tooth roots are planed with scraping instruments until they are smooth. Creating a smooth surface enables the gum to reattach to the tooth, thereby helping to shrink the pocket.

Unless you have regular dental checkups, you may not be aware you have periodontal disease until your gums and bone have been so seriously damaged that tooth loss is inevitable. We are currently accepting new patients. If you know of anyone in need of quality dental care we would appreciate your referrals. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our purpose is to help people reach and commit to the highest level of dental health personally appropriate to them. Please call 617-479-6220. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Periodontitis may also be treated with applications of antibiotics in an attempt to kill off bacteria that lead to gum infection.

Douglas Gutro Candidate For Ward 5 Council Seat

Douglas S. Gutro announces his candidacy for the Ward 5 City Council seat.

"I am officially a candidate for Ward 5 city councillor," he said in a statement issued this week.

Gutro, who lives at 230 Marlboro St., Wollaston, with his wife, Susan, cited his "record of reliability, an understanding of the issues and the ability to get things done."

"The crux of a ward councillor's job is to be available and responsive to citizen concerns," Gutro said. "Residents deserve to be informed and involved. They deserve a strong voice in City Hall on the issues that are important to them. I pledge to be there for them. Those who know me best recognize that I get involved to make a difference. I'm action-oriented and need to see results."

Gutro said the campaign is not about a single issue, but many issues that require reliable leadership. On the issue of taxes, he said:

"As homeowners and taxpayers, my wife Sue and I know first hand how increased assessments coupled with a residential property tax rate hike can affect families or seniors living on fixed incomes. It feels like a one-two punch to the wallet."

Citing 12 years of service in the federal government and a graduate degree in public administration, Gutro said he is well-versed in government budget and finance matters.

"I will be a fiscal watchdog," he said.

A graduate of Quincy Public Schools, Gutro said he is a strong supporter of public education.

"Teachers and School Committee members cannot do their job without adequate financing," he said. "The Mayor and the City Council hold the purse strings to the school budget. I will be an advocate on behalf of educational funding."

In the debate about where to locate a new Quincy High School, Gutro said "the fate and location of Central Middle School must be the driving force behind any such decision."

He said he opposes the use of Merrymount Park for any purpose other than parkland.

"The need for road and sidewalk repairs is a long-standing problem throughout the ward," he said. "The lack of repairs poses a hazard to pedestrians and drivers alike." Gutro cites traffic and pedestrian safety issues in many parts of the ward as being another important issue. Ward 5 contains some of the most dangerous intersections in the city, including Merrymount Parkway and Hancock Street, and several intersections along Burgin Parkway and trouble spots along Quincy Shore Drive.

Gutro also stressed the importance of flood control and water quality issues.

"Residents and business owners deserve an active voice on remedying long-standing flood control problems related to Town Brook and Furnace Brook," he said. "As a leader in the fight to clean up Wollaston Beach, I will not rest until water quality improves, the seawall is repaired and Wollaston Beach gets its fair share of state funding for landslide improvements."

Several other MDC beaches have already received state funding to improve traffic, parking and other amenities.

Gutro pointed to his experience in government, a decade of civic involvement and a strong record as a reliable voice on important issues.

"I plan to work hard over the next six months to earn the trust and respect of the voters of Ward 5," he said.

A lifelong Quincy resident, he said, "I hope to connect with the voters and convince them that I will lend an ear, provide a voice and offer reliable leadership."

Gutro attended Bernazani School (then Furnace Brook), Central Junior High, Quincy High School and North Quincy High School. He has a bachelor's degree in management from the University of Massachusetts at Boston and a Master of Public Administration, concentrating in State and Local Government from Suffolk University.

From 1997-1999, Gutro served as President, Ward 5 Community Association. At the time, Gutro asked Mayor James Sheets to form a task force to address pollution problems at Wollaston Beach. Since then Gutro has been a leader in the fight to clean up Wollaston Beach, serving on the Wollaston Beach Task Force and building support for water quality, traffic and aesthetic improvements.

He founded and organizes the popular annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge, which is going into its fourth year. He is a co-organizer of Tony's Clam Shop's Annual children's sand castle contest. Since 1997, he has organized Coastsweep and Cleaner Greener beach and park cleanups for the Ward 5 Association.

Since 1998, Gutro has served as Vice Chairman of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission. He has also worked to protect and restore the historic Souther Tide Mill and serves as an active member of the Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration Committee, Quincy Recycling Commission, the Quincy Park Improvement Committee and the Quincy Democratic City Committee.

He has been recognized by the Massachusetts State Legislature, The Boston Harbor Association, the Quincy City Council and the Ward 5 Community Association.

Gutro is employed as a program manager with the United States Environmental Protection Agency, where he has worked for the last 12 years.

Water Watch Clean-Up In Squantum Saturday

The Water Watch program at UMass-Boston will be at Squantum Point beginning at 11 a.m. Saturday as part of several beach and river clean-ups the organization has planned for the next several weeks.

The clean-up will predominantly cover land within the park at Squaw Rock, along with some shoreline in the area. Water Watch will pick up litter, trash, and anything else that does not belong in the natural environment.

Water Watch has done many clean-ups in the past and welcomes volunteers who care about the area's waterways. All supplies for the clean-up will be provided, including snacks to keep volunteers going.

For more information on the clean-up or for more opportunities to clean and protect the area's water, contact Ali Monac at (781) 848-0584.

Miss Massachusetts At Hancock Park March 23

Dana Tenille Powell, Miss Massachusetts USA, will come to Quincy Friday, March 23 as she visits residents of Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center and Allerton House at Hancock Park Assisted Living Residence, 164 Parkway, beginning at 2 p.m.

The event is free and open to members of the community.

Powell, a 21-year old Brookline resident, is a student at Emerson College in Boston. She impressed judges at the November pageant with her resume, which included her academic achievements, her ambition to become a broadcast journalist, and her job as host of a radio program at Emerson.

Harold Makes It Official: He Won't Seek Re-Election

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Michael Cheney, Peter Kolson, and Leo Kelly, Brian McNamee who ran for Ward 6, and Rosemary Wahlberg, former executive director of the Quincy Community Action Program.

Ralph Maher, city plumbing inspector, has been hinting that he might run for the seat.

"This is a critical period for county government in Massachusetts," Harold said. "According to reports out of Bristol County, it appears that county will effectively go bankrupt and cease to exist as a regional unit of government. While Norfolk County is currently in good financial shape, the viability of Norfolk County is directly dependent on the revenues from the registry of deeds. I want to insure both the short term and long term continuation of Norfolk County and I believe that my full-time efforts will be needed at the registry to insure that viability.

"Currently, Norfolk, Bristol, Plymouth, Barnstable, Dukes, and Nantucket counties are the only free-standing counties left in the state. The other counties either went bankrupt or voted to dissolve themselves and are effectively out of business. Their functions, such as the registry of deeds, have been taken over by the state.

"Additionally, I want to focus my time and energies on a number of issues and new initiatives that we are currently working on at the registry right now. Included are the renovations of the registry building, the establishment of a satellite office in the Quincy-Weymouth-Braintree area, the expansion of the on-line service, and the filing of legislation to keep the $2 million Community Preservation funds collected in the county, reserved for use by communities in the county.

"In giving up my seat on the council I hope to afford to a new person the opportunity to serve as a representative in local government. It's an important and challenging job that carries with it a grave responsibility to guard the tax dollar and to protect the character of our neighborhoods."

Harold was elected Register of Deeds in November 2000, succeeding long serving register Barry Hannon. Harold served in the state senate from 1979 to 1992 representing the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Holbrook, and Avon. He was first elected to the city council in 1975, serving for three years. He returned to the council in 1996 where he is completing his sixth year.

REAL ESTATE

Joyce Baker Elected Director Of Massachusetts Association Of Realtors

Joyce L. Baker, a broker with CityView Real Estate in North Quincy, has been elected a director of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors (MAR) for 2001.

As a state director, Baker will represent the membership of the newly merged Plymouth/South Shore Board on all issues brought before the MAR Board of Directors at its meetings.

In addition, she is required to attend regional caucuses held periodically throughout the year, and is responsible for keeping the local Realtor membership informed on public policy issues, financial matters and organizational activities conducted by the state association.

JOYCE BAKER

A Realtor since 1985, Baker currently serves on the MAR Finance Committee. Previously a state director in 1998/2000, Baker is also a director on her local Plymouth/South Shore Board and immediate past president of the South Shore Board.

Organized in 1924, MAR is a professional trade organization with more than 15,000 members statewide. The term Realtor is registered as the exclusive designation of members of the National Association of Realtors who subscribe to strict code of ethics.

Baker is also the president of the Quincy Historical Society, charter member of the Quincy Partnership, serves on the Quincy Historic District Commission, and is past president of DOVE, Inc.

Carol Bulman New Chairman Massachusetts Mortgage Association

Carol Bulman, president of Conway Financial Services, recently was elected chair of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association, the trade group of the mortgage brokerage industry.

Bulman, who lives in Scituate, is recognized as a respected leader in her field through her successful management of her business, her involvement in industry organizations and her commitment to community service.

"This is an exciting time for our industry, and I'm looking forward to the challenges of the year ahead," Bulman said.

The MMA, headquartered in Wakefield, represents the interest of nearly 500 members across Massachusetts. The organization is the Bay State affiliate of the National Association of Mortgage Brokers and focuses on community service, education and legislative issues facing the mortgage industry.

CAROL BULMAN

"The membership of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association is privileged to have the opportunity to grow and expand our services under the leadership of Carol Bulman during 2001," said

MMA President James Dougherty. "Her extensive experience in the industry combines well with her commitment to raising the bar for all our members in pursuit of maintaining the highest possible ethical standards."

Bulman is a past co-chairperson of the Southeastern Massachusetts Credit Grantors' Legislative Committee, and also is a member of the South Shore Women's Business Network.

Her consumer handbook, "Mortgage Sense," is in its second printing of 10,000 copies. Bulman is past recipient of Boston Business Journal's "40 Under 40" award and the Providence College Career Achievement Award for 2000. She also contributes a column to The Quincy Sun.

Conway Financial Services is the mortgage affiliate of Jack Conway & Co., the largest independently owned real estate firm in Massachusetts.

Boston IVF Fertility Treatment Facility Opens Quincy Office

Boston IVF, an advanced fertility treatment center in Quincy, has opened a new office in Quincy to serve patients living on the South Shore.

Couples who have difficulty conceiving will now be able to get the fertility evaluation and treatment they need at the new center, which is located on Crown Colony Rd.

Established in 1986, Boston IVF is affiliated with the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. Its physicians all hold faculty appointments at Harvard Medical School and publish regularly in scientific and medical journals.

Boston IVF's scientific and clinical research has resulted in the following "firsts" in New England: gay and lesbian intratubal transfer (GIFT) delivery, embryo cryopreservation, donor egg pregnancy, and the first baby born from intracytoplasmic sperm injection (ICSI).

The new center in Quincy is part of an ongoing shift away from the traditional care model; in that model, Boston was the hub for quality care and patients were expected to adjust accordingly.

Boston IVF has committed to creating centers in local neighborhoods so that couples can feel as comfortable and at ease as possible," says Brian Berger, MD, medical director of the Quincy facility. "This sets the tone for the entire scope of patient care — creating the most relaxed, couple-friendly atmosphere for asking questions and receiving treatment."

Dr. Berger is a graduate of the University of Texas Health Science Center Medical School and also trained at the University of California at San Diego, Cornell University Medical Center, and The Medical College of Pennsylvania, where he completed a three-year graduate fellowship in reproductive endocrinology and infertility. He is currently a clinical instructor in obstetrics, gynecology, and reproductive endocrinology at Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Berger's colleague, Dr. Richard Reindollar, also sees patients at the Quincy site. Dr. Reindollar is currently director of the Division of Reproductive Endocrinology at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center as well as a Boston IVF physician.

Appointments at the Quincy center are available Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. by calling (617) 793-1100.
